Speech Pledges Spending Curbs

new session, but the pledge to restrain spending was the keynote of the speech.

Read by Chief Bora Laskin, the speech left no doubt that the battle against inflation is expected to be the government's priority task in the immediate future.

While the speech was the first government acknowledgement in Parliament of the magnitude of current economic problems, opposition leaders found little to praise.

Aside from recognition of the scope of the inflationary problem, Progressive Conservative Leader Robert Stanfield said "there was really nothing surprising in the speech from the throne."

Ed Broadbent, New Democratic Party parliamentary leader, saw indications of the government following a deflationary policy, despite the explicit promise in the speech to not deliberately generate slack in the economy in order to combat inflation."

Highlights

OTTWA (CP) — Highlights of the throne speech read Monday at the opening of the 30th Parliament:

Acknowledgement that inflation has not receded despite contrary predictions.

Government spending restraint pledged, but no deliberate slowdown in economic activity.

Legislation, much of it left from the last Parliament, to boost food production, curb profiteering, help small business and encourage oil and gas exploration.

Grants for first-time house buyers, a new house warranty system and a Registered Home Owners' Savings Plan promised.

Higher veterans' allowances and elderly to be assisted by improved exemptions and other changes in benefit regulations.

Emphasis on transportation with improved intercity train services, better transportation in remote areas, new ports legislation and enhanced commuter services.

Parliamentary rule changes to redistribute Commons seats and allow televised proceedings.

Unspecified Criminal Code changes.

Higher gas and oil royalty rates on Indian reserves.

Broader foreign investment regulations, a new Citizenship Act and confirmation of O Canada as national anthem.

'Three Carloads' Of Indians Hurt

OTTAWA (CP) — The pomp and ceremony associated with the opening of a new Parliament was overshadowed Monday by the most violent demonstration ever witnessed on Parliament Hill.

At distinguished guests and invited people were parced to gather in the stately Senate chambers to hear Chief Justice Bora Laskin read the speech from the throne, about 2,000 Indians demonstrators clashed with RCMP in a first attempt to break through a barricade 150 feet from the main entrance of the Centre Block, where the Senate is located.

The attempt was nipped only when reserves of RCMP raced to the scene. But the worst was yet to come.

Minutes after the chief justice left the Hill, it took the bedeviled RCMP security plan the Mounite riot squad and 100 members of the armed forces to stop a second attempt by the demonstrators to enter the Parliament buildings.

It was easily the ugliest incident of its kind in Ottawa history. It marked the first time the Mounties have used their riot squad in the confrontation and the first time the armed forces became involved in one.

Joining with the members of the Native People's Caravan was a group from the Marxist-Lenin party.

The caravan left Vancouver about a week ago to protest living conditions on their reserves. They also demanded the resignation of Indian Affairs Minister Judd Buchanan and an investigation of his department.

Although Mr. Buchanan has said that solutions to Indian problems should be worked out with elected band councils, he had decided to talk to the demonstrators. They have no mandate from national native organizations.

But the violence Monday ruled out any meeting between the minister and the demonstrators.

Indian spokesman Louis Cameron accused the Mounties of making a "premeditated assault" on the Indians. He said the force "decided in advance" to use force.

"The RCMP had the guns, the clubs and the tear gas," said Mr. Cameron. "We had a drum and a sheet of paper with our demands."

Mr. Cameron said 15 caravan members were jailed and that "three carloads" of Indians were taken to hospital. Hospital authorities said there were no serious injuries.

Police said today 18 demonstrators were taken to the police station, and seven of them were charged, either with obstructing a police officer or assaulting a police officer.

The RCMP said nine of its men required treatment for minor injuries. Also hit on the ankle with a rock was Gen. A. J. Sirrine, chief of the defence staff.

By the time of a drum song the Indians said commemorates those who died at Wounded Knee, S.D., and in other clashes with the white society, the Indians marched about two miles to Parliament Hill.

Shouting and carrying placards bearing the Indian affairs department, they swung onto Parliament Hill grounds and directly toward a line of Mounties manning the barricades in front of the entrance to the Centre Block.

They moved only momentarily to front of the Mounties. Then, to cries of "let's go through," they pushed over the barricade and grapped with the RCMP.

A score or more of reinforcements appeared waiting in the wings, behind the Mounties and threw back the first attempt by the Indians.

There was a hit then of about 15 minutes of shouting by speeches from Indian leaders and by the carillon bells of the Peace Tower that sounded the sky over the Centre Block.

Then the second Indian rush for the buildings. There were rocks, pieces of wood and glass and missiles of all sorts in the air and the guard of honor, shoulders touching to present a solid wall behind the mounties, had to duck.

And just when it seemed the Indians were winning, with an RCMP riot squad of about 30, and another 100 armed with clubs or tear gas pistols, appeared.

They wanted the demonstrators twice to leave the grounds and then advanced.

Women and young children screamed as the riot squad pushed the Indians down the flight of steps and onto the lawns of Parliament.

There were fist fights along the way but the demonstrators, no match for the riot squad, were forced to leave the grounds.

There were attempts by some to set fire to trees and grass on the grounds, but the attempts brought city fire trucks to the scene.

After regrouping at the nearby grounds of the Supreme Court of Canada, the Indians went back to the federal building they occupied on their arrival Sunday.

At a Monday night news conference, Mr. Cameron said he would not reveal the next step the Indians would take.

But he did say they would not go to the government again with demands. The government has to come to the Indians.

Mr. Cameron also said some of the group, including himself, had business elsewhere. But others would remain indefinitely in Ottawa.

Ontario Minimum Wage Up

TORONTO (CP) — Ontario's minimum wage will go up today by 25 cents an hour to $2.25 for general industry, $2.50 for construction workers and $1.60 for students under 18.

The increase is the result of an amendment to the Employment Standards Act filed last Aug. 15.

As of today, domestics and homemakers employed by agencies will be covered by the minimum wage and other provisions of the Employment Standards Act. Domestics employed by householders remain exempt.

Ontario's last raise in minimum wage was last Jan. 1 when general workers got $2 an hour and construction workers $2.25.

Africans Want UN To Ban S.A.

UNITED NATIONS (CP) — Canada, while condemning South Africa's racial policies, vigorously opposed in the General Assembly on Monday a move by a group of African states to oust the big white ruled republic from the United Nations.

Canadian Ambassador Saul Rae told the Assembly that any step to isolate the South African government from UN debate, and from direct exposure to the opinions of its members, would only "reduce our chances of success in modifying" South African policies.

Rae spoke in opposing a resolution introduced by African states to reject the credentials submitted on behalf of the South African delegation for this new fall session of the Assembly. The resolution was approved by a vote of 88 to 22, with 14 abstentions.

The Canadian delegation then voted in favor of a resolution to refer the matter to the Security Council, which has jurisdiction over UN membership. Canada approved that resolution, Rae explained, because it did not "prejudge" the outcome of the security council review. The Assembly vote was expected to be vetoed by Britain or the United States in the Security Council

Elevator Firms Reject Munro Plan

VANCOUVER (CP) — A legislated settlement of the Vancouver grainhandlers strike appeared certain today after elevator companies rejected Monday the latest settlement proposal by federal Labor Minister John Munro.

The government said in its throne speech that legislation would be needed to ensure movement of grain if the parties did not resolve the dispute.

Mr. Munro sent telegrams to the five elevator companies and the 30-member Local 333 of the Grain Workers Union outlining two proposals that might end the dispute which has lingered since Aug. 26.

Union business agent Henry Kazes said the union accepted the proposals but R. W. Mead, chief negotiator for the companies, rejected them.

Mr. Mead said the proposal is the same as the companies rejected two weeks ago and an end to the strike "will have to be legislated."

Seminar Outlines Safety Measures

By MARG HAYLOCK
Staff Reporter

PICTON — Public Senior elementary students from Prince Edward County schools Monday attended a seminar at Picton, where duties of school bus patrollers were discussed.

Constable Services Officer for OP Picton detachment of the Ontario Provincial Police, Donald Watt, Cpl. A. Kee, Picton OPP and Community Services Co-ordinator for the Provincial Police district 8, Brian Turner, explained the role of the bus patroller.

Constable Watt said student bus patrollers should set the example for other passengers and should use tact in performing their duties. They have no authority and are not permitted to discipline other students. The patrollers are assistants to bus operators.

Each school bus has two patrollers, one stationed at the rear of the vehicle and the other at the front. The front patroller gets out at all regular stops to assist pupils entering and leaving the bus.

The rear patroller enters the bus first as it is loaded and ensures that all students move in an orderly way, to the back of the bus. The bus should be filled from the rear before moving.

Corporal Kee, a qualified St. John Ambulance instructor briefed students in basic first aid which is in the event of an accident.

He emphasized if an accident occurs patrollers should remain calm and assist the bus operator in applying basic first aid.

He noted bus patrollers are "looked up to" by other students throughout the school year and their reaction in an emergency situation is important to their classmates. It is the bus patrollers that those students will look to for reassurance.

If an accident victim appears to have a breathing problem mouth to mouth resuscitation may be needed.

"In artificial respiration every second counts," said Cpl. Kee.

He discussed treatment of bleeding wounds, commenting the accident victim should be placed in a reclining position. Wounded limbs should be raised to slow the flow of blood.

If possible, the wound should be exposed and any clothing removed. Splinters of glass or wood or other foreign particles may be removed if they are not deeply embedded.

Corporal Kee explained the tourniquet, once recommended to halt bleeding, has been replaced by direct pressure bandages by fire department and student teams of two practised application on one another.

Also demonstrated was the application of arm slings.

In addition to Corporal Kee's demonstration was a slide presentation by Constable Turner of Belleville.

Picton fire chief Leonard Tripp explained how fire emergencies should be handled aboard a bus and demonstrated the use of fire extinguishers. Bus fire drills were conducted.

About 130 students of Grades 6, 7 and 8 attended the day-long seminar at PECI.

Earlier this month, bus drivers met with school trustees, school principals and to learn more about bus safety patrols.

Constable Watt said the program is based on one designed in co-operation with the Ontario Motor League.

Bus patrols this year have been declared mandatory by the Prince Edward board of education for the first time.

The concept has received support from trustees since its introduction and this fall's seminars represent an effort to standardize regulations.

Practice Makes Perfect

Pinecrest Memorial School students were given a first hand lesson in first aid Monday by members of the Picton detachment of the Ontario Provincial Police. Corporal A. J. Kee shows Peter McKinnon the correct application of a pressure bandage.

Trenton Clerk Retires After 27-year Career

TRENTON — Town clerk O. W. Larry will end a 27-year career in Trenton municipal office Nov. 4 when he retires and hands his duties over to Aubrey Sharp, the town's new clerk administrator, whose appointment was made public here Monday.

A former Hastings County assessor, Mr. Sharp will take over incidental duties when he officially accepts the $23,000-a-year position next month.

Raised in Peterborough, the father of three children was most recently clerk-treasurer of Smith Township, north of Peterborough. One of a reported 25 applicants for the retiring clerk's position, he also served as clerk in Gilmour, Ont.

However, Mr. Larry's retirement from public life may not be permanent.

Under a proposal presented to council Monday by Councillor John Bonn, Mr. Larry here been suggested as the town's industrial commissioner, a position not now in existence.

As chairman of Trenton's industrial and economic development committee, Councillor Bonn said he has concluded "that a full-time industrial commissioner is needed in order for us (Trenton) to compete with other communities in attracting new industry."

The commissioner would also co-ordinate land assembly for industrial development, a task a volunteer committee cannot accomplish, said Councillor Bonn.

Worker Loses Arm

COLBORNE — A farm worker had his arm severed at the elbow Monday after he became entangled in a piece of machinery used to feed corn into a silo on a farm five miles northeast of here.

Brighton provincial police said Kenneth McCullough, 48, of RR 2 Cobourg was working behind the silo-filling machine when he became caught.

McCullough was rushed to Cobourg where he remains in the intensive care unit in satisfactory condition.

Police said the man's arm was pulled into the machine as far as the shoulder.

Mr. McCullough was working on a farm owned by Stewart Oliver near Dundonald when the mishap occurred.

Book Sale Success

PICTON — A book sale, sponsored by the Picton and District Canadian Federation of University Women has raised a record $600 toward scholarships for Prince Edward County students.

The sale, an annual event, was held Saturday in Centennial Hall at Picton United Church.

The books are donated by local residents during the year and sold cheaply to build scholarship funds for students in Grades 13 and 13.

Dial-a-bus Suggested For Trenton Residents

TRENTON — Council took the first step Monday towards the possible start of a dial-a-bus service in Trenton as it heard an engineering firm outline a door-to-door public transit project undertaken in Region in 1971.

Questions councillors asked of transportation engineers N. D. Lea Associates of Oakville indicated council is considering undertaking a feasibility study here in Trenton.

The bus system in Regina — one of the first to a major North American city — allows an individual to place a telephone call to a dispatcher, who then sends a small bus to a person's door and delivers him to any other location in a municipality.

Any study would cost the town between $13-15,000. Part of the cost would be subsidized by the province. Council learned the first step establishing a feasibility study underway would be consultation with the ministry of transportation and communication concerning the subsidy.

The province would underwrite 75 per cent of the venture capital costs and would pick up a further 50 per cent of operating costs.

If it were your livelihood at stake, would you buy these rules?

Like other workers, we have to negotiate with our employers over wages and working conditions.

But our employers are the provincial government.

And they've written a set of rules that make free negotiation impossible for us.

They passed a law called CECBA (Crown Employees Collective Bargaining Act). It effectively denies public servants basic rights that other workers enjoy.

For instance, our grievances are settled by a board whose 14 members are all government appointees. We aren't represented.

That's part of CECBA.

And our contract disputes are settled by a compulsory arbitration board (we can't choose voluntary arbitration) of which the government appoints two out of three. Including the chairman.

That comes under CECBA, too.

Even the tribunal set up to administer the Act is a government monopoly.

No wonder we're falling behind others and behind inflation.

We want CECBA changed.

We just want rules we can live with.

Wouldn't you?

Practical Art Approach

Quinte district culture buffs are in for a big Christmas present.

By then, Toronto consultants have promised an interim report on their study into the feasibility of a Quinte Arts Centre.

As exciting as the prospect of an arts centre is, consultant Brian Dixon brings an appropriate amount of tempered enthusiasm to the area for his survey: "I'm not in the monument-building business", he reiterates to those meeting him for the first time.

In other words, Mr. Dixon's firm does not undertake this sort of project with the preconception that some grandiose architectural caress will automatically meet an area's cultural needs.

In the past, Mr. Dixon has recommended renovation of existing facilities — such as abandoned theatres — as a community's solution. Whatever his proposal, he stresses it will come AFTER he gets a consensus of local needs — not before.

The York University business professor is also politely practical with those who harbor thoughts of making the Quinte area a cultural hub in one fell swoop.

It is possible, Mr. Dixon carefully feels, that the area's tourist-drawing potential could make a new arts centre feasible as home base for a cultural event of national importance.

But he isn't embarking on his $25,000 study with the idea of creating a Quinte version of the Stratford Shakespearean Festival.

Ideas of any kind, however, are what Dixon-Moore Associates are seeking between now and December. "Input", "feedback" — all the Seventies' synonyms for "opinions" — will help determine the report's recommendations.

The Dixon approach has the flexibility the project needs.

And whatever shape the eventual Quinte Arts Centre takes, the Loyalist College and Quinte Arts Council study conceivers should share some of the glory.

Medical Advances

One side benefit from the tragic violence of the past five years in Northern Ireland has been new advances in surgical techniques.

Belfast's Royal Victoria Hospital, where the mobile cardiac unit was pioneered, has come up with another first.

The publication, Ulster Commentary, points out that surgeons there have developed a method of repairing skull damage by using titanium, the metal used in the Concorde supersonic jet transport that has been under development for some years.

Thirty patients with badly damaged skulls caused by gunshot or bomb explosions have had their wounds repaired.

Impressions of the shape of the skull are taken during an initial operation to remove any foreign matter from the wound and a titanium plate is made from the resulting mold. Three or four weeks later, the plate can be screwed into place to replace the missing bone.

The method, as outlined in the British Medical Journal, has several benefits over the use of plastics or bone grafts. The skull contour can be accurately reproduced and the skull can be easily drilled to fix the plate in place.

In addition, titanium is inert and does not react with the scalp. It is strong and light and, unlike most metals, is transparent to X-rays. Expensive when used in large quantities for aircraft construction, the amount used for a skull plate costs only about £3 or £4 — nine to twelve dollars.

Significantly, titanium had been used briefly before the war for the plates were hand-beaten. The molding technique allows it to be used for large scale damage to the skull that was difficult to repair with plastics or bone grafts.

Ratification Roadblock

Union Negotiators Losing Authority to Rank-and-File

By VINCENT EGAN
Business and Consumer Affairs Analyst
Thomson News Service

Union negotiators are losing the authority they once had, says one of Canada's most experienced labor men.

The reason: Rank-and-file members are insisting on the right to ratify any negotiated settlement.

The result: Rejection of a large number of tentative contracts that, negotiators have worked out at the bargaining table.

According to William P. Kelly, assistant deputy minister of labor in Ottawa, the lack of authority that union negotiators have at the bargaining table is placing a strain on the labor-relations system.

"From discussions I have had with trade-union friends it is one of the major problems of the day," Mr. Kelly told the Toronto Chamber of Commerce recently. "Increasingly, members are looking for union leaders and negotiators to express their responsibility — specifically in national bargaining — for the details and compromises that go into a negotiated settlement after weeks and months of tough discussion.

"In a work-force of a few years ago, through greater participation in their union, realized that negotiators had some effective bargaining power the art of compromising.

"Many unionized people today feel that compromise is an unacceptable word. They will not tolerate such activities by their negotiators," added Mr. Kelly said the philosophy of the Canadian worker in the organized sector today, which he conveys to his union leader, is:

"Make me whole on last year's settlement. Protect me against next year's inflation, no matter how high it may be. Get me some extra for next year. And the devil take the hindmost."

Union leaders, like politicians, must compete for the votes of their constituents from time to time. That's why despite the threat of high unemployment in Canada — they continue to win crowning wage gains, and often they lead members into strike rather than settle for less than their entire list of demands.

No doubt many union negotiators would like to return to the system that prevailed only a few years ago. Then — again, like politicians — they were the solitary bargaining agreements on behalf of the constituents, and the only test of their skill was the next regular union election.

But it's unlikely that the clock will be turned back. Any change from today's version of collective bargaining would be resisted not only in some governmental wage gains but also by the rank-and-file in costly strikes — all almost certainly be in the direction of some new technique.

One that Mr. Kelly has been promoting has much to recommend it. It would combine the conciliation and arbitration processes in certain situations, to give the powers of an arbitrator to a skilled mediator.

The "med-arb" concept would give an independent outside expert the power to resolve an impasse in cases of conflicting great harm on the public.

It is a means, in other words, of giving some muscle to the public interest, which is usually ignored. It should be used much more widely than it has been so far.

Bert Lawrence's Decline Traced to Trip to Cuba

By DON O'HEARN
Queen's Park Bureau
Thomson News Service

TORONTO — Politics is a hard game. And any politician who aspires to high places must know how to play the game and know the unwritten rules.

A year ago last spring there was a dramatic and sad scene in the house one afternoon.

Over the Easter holiday Bert Lawrence had taken a trip to Cuba on a government aircraft.

He had been accompanied by his wife and family and by his deputy minister and wife.

This particular afternoon he was trying to explain the trip and he didn't do very well.

He said the trip had been business and outlined what he had done and the people he had seen in Cuba.

But one of the first unwritten rules of politics is that you don't dip into the public purse for anything that can appear as a luxury.

And the minister couldn't explain it largely hostile because of the use of the aircraft or the need for the wives.

In the cabinet shuffle earlier this year Lawrence moved out of the government and now he has resigned his seat in the house.

Most likely we can trace the start of his decline to that afternoon in the house. Associates say he never really got over it.

In 10 years in the house the Carleton East member showed he had plenty of ability, was a man of culture with a good mind and in various portfolios apparently a good administrator.

But he was not a good politician in that he didn't know or couldn't practise the hard side of the game.

Perhaps he was too much of a gentleman. Or perhaps his intelligence wouldn't let him lower himself to some of the shabby practices that politics demands (Who's for baby kissing?)

And he certainly didn't know the hard rules. To this day he probably wonders just what he did wrong in the Cuba trip.

Given more toughness and he might have made a better fight for the leadership against Bill Davis. At least he would have become more firmly seated in power.

But he didn't have it. So now, at 51, he looks back, and probably with a great many regrets, at a career that has ended.

Three youthful inmates of the local Children's Shelter escaped from that institution Saturday afternoon, but they were apprehended wending their way westward along the CPR right-of-way near the pump-house. The lads were returned to the shelter by Inspector Huston.

Doctors assure us, with much professional pride, that the expectancy has been greatly increased in recent times. In 1814, according to Dr. J. Morris Fishbein, the average length of life in the United States was between 25 and 30 years. By 1850 it was between 38 and 40 years; in 1910 it had increased to 50 years for men and 52 years for women; at present it stands at over 60 years for men and 65 for women." Most of the gains are due to the advance of preventive medicine and to the improvement in hygiene, medical and surgical practice."

MacEachen Methodical In Collecting Information

By AL COLLETTI
UNITED NATIONS (CP) — In his relaxed way, Allan MacEachen, Canada's new external affairs minister, met diplomats from four of the five continents this week during the United Nations General Assembly.

It was a horizon-widening experience for the 53-year-old Nova Scotian who replaced Mitchell Sharp in external affairs.

MacEachen was candid with reporters whenever he could be. And he wasn't afraid to say he didn't have all the answers because he was "rather new on the job."

An academic and professor of economics and social services before he went into government, MacEachen is a veteran at 11 years in the cabinet, having handled the health, welfare and manpower portfolios.

In his discussions with reporters, the external affairs minister left the distinct impression he's the type who won't buy any line until he can feel the merchandise. He also gives the impression of being a methodical collector of information in the decision-making process.

For example, MacEachen held a news briefing Tuesday to answer questions reporters may have had on the speech he was about to deliver to the UN General Assembly. He briefly explained the main points and was ready for questions—he expected the prepared text.

The speech was Canada's main foreign policy statement at the assembly, concentrating on nuclear proliferation, and came a day after the United States had spent a lot of people with its warning to the oil-exporting countries that they might cause a world depression with their high oil prices.

The warning came in speeches by Secretary of State Henry Kissinger at the UN assembly.

MacEachen steered clear of this controversy in his UN address.

He reported asked MacEachen if he was buying the American line that the oil question, or whether it would have been counter-productive if he had agreed with American position in his assembly speech.

The external affairs minister said he thought the price problem is there. It has been expressed in various ways by Common Market and elsewhere.

"The particular line that you mention that has been taken, I haven't had a chance to peruse or scan it very much, or discuss it with my colleagues . . . It merely underlines the problem with a specific suggestion about which I'm not ready to elaborate upon. . . ."

On Thursday, the oil question was raised again by a reporter and MacEachen said he hadn't discussed the U.S. position with other members of the government. A response to that kind of approach would have to be discussed with all hands in choir."

Public Should Hear Civil Servant's Story

Editor,
The Intelligencer:

Whenever a provincial civil servant in the province of Ontario, is the cause of his employment finds it necessary to voice an opinion as a result of his experiences in his job he incurs the wrath of his "superiors."

There have been several instances in the province of Ontario, where civil servants, in the course of their duties have become a little too outspoken for the comfort of the ministry they are employed by.

There was the case of the inspector who lost his job as a result of what he had to say about the pollution by a large company in Sudbury. He was quickly given the bum's rush and lost from sight.

There was the case of the prison guards who were alleged to have smashed a number of the rioters in the Kingston penitentiary with clubs after making them run a gantlet of clubswinging officers. Most of them were badly injured and, reportedly, yet all those charged were acquitted. Subsequently most have been responsible for re-attacks.

Now we have the case of a courageous probation officer with the Ministry of Correction. all Services who has come out with statements regarding the conditions he claims exist in training schools. Surely, one of his duties as a probationer in this field is to bring to the courts, or other authorities any findings in the line of working. Not to do so is tantamount to misfeasance of his duty.

Whether or not his allegations are completely true will be seen. However, here is a situation where a professional individual, who was hired by the Ministry of Corrections after meeting all their requirements as qualifications, so we have to assume he is a balanced and competent man.

There is no reason at all why the hearing that has been set for this man should be held in camera. The public has a right to know what he is saying about our training schools, and if what he says is right, steps should be taken to correct the situation.

There is too much of this behind closed doors in this province — it's time it was open. There is a little light on the scene.

Something Seems Rotten In This Egg Business

Editor,
The Intelligencer:

If new appears that an offer to buy Ontario golden eggs was made as far back as last April and refused. The eggs were, one gathers, buried, the offer made by a number of prominent, and well-heeled, business men, reported to "elucidate" on this issue, which to most Canadians we have been denied "total elucidation".

Of course we have. All the while we have sat on a total of nine cents a dozen in order to obtain the high profits that remains in existence whome purpose it is to see to the orderly marketing of these eggs and the proper disposal of the surplus.

Of course we get a further five cents as of Monday last, so it is good to know the funds will be used to bury the bad eggs?

We can't help thinking that there is something rotten here, as well as eggy.

There exists in Canada a number of these marketing boards, one also, exists in Canada both Provincial and Federal, known as Combines.

Is it inappropriate for us to continue to pay an extra 14 cents a dozen, just to keep everyone happy?

Alternatively, can our elected representatives do something about it?

My suggestion would be to bury this incompetent board, along with its eggs, and then to conduct a searching inquiry into the affairs of the boards, before another scandal breaks.

Visiting Relative Loaned Wheelchair

Editor
The Intelligencer:

About a year ago we were expecting a visit from a couple who had multiple sclerosis and the husband had died only a month before her expected arrival. I contacted a call from Miss Tickell, who is convener of the Red Cross Loan cupboard in Trenton.

She had received a letter from the Red Cross in Toronto who, in turn, had received one from the Red Cross in Winnipeg. They had said that the visitor was coming to Canada and to Belleville. They requested that our branch get in touch with her. Miss Tickell said that the use of a wheel chair for the duration of the visit.

I was able to go to the loan cupboard and choose a portable, folding chair which could be used in the car (truck) and, in her words, we were able to take my guests for many interesting and enjoyable trips about the countryside and to several of our surrounding cities.

One of the most interesting aspects of this story is that all of the various arrangements between the various branches of the Red Cross, took place without any knowledge of the visitor, her family or myself, which goes to show that the Red Cross really cares.

November 16 will be very deeply grateful for this service.

More Thanks For Red Cross

Editor,
The Intelligencer:

My stop-mother and I would like to express our appreciation to the Red Cross for the use of the loan of a wheelchair.

I am sure many people do not know of the many services available through the Red Cross.

It is comforting to know that when one is in need, one has only to call in the Red Cross for the loan of hospital beds, wheel chairs, crutches and many other items needed in the convalescent, elderly or disabled.

Pell said he and Javits will not make any recommendations publicly until after they report to the Senate foreign relations committee.

The senators met with Castro on Sunday night.

Bluestein Ruled Insane

TORONTO (CP) — An Ontario Supreme Court jury Monday found Morton Bluestein not guilty by reason of insanity in the attempted murder of David Rotman, 36, last Dec. 18.

Mr. Justice Walter Ray recommended Bluestein to the Clarke Institute of Psychiatry provided that space is available for him there. He is to stay in hospital in the meantime.

Defence counsel Edward Greenspan said Bluestein became paranoid after an incident in 1961 when he was beaten at summer camp, and believed that "organized elements" were trying to remove him from gambling operations.

He said a bomb was also discovered in Bluestein's car last October.

Pensioners' Spouses To Get Aid at Sixty

OTTAWA (CP) — The government intends to pay old-age pensions to spouses aged 60 to 64, of persons already receiving the pension, the throne speech said Monday.

The extension of the pension program, started by the Liberals during the July 8 federal election campaign and is one of several social security reforms listed in the throne speech.

The enriched pension payments will begin in October, 1976, the speech said.

At present, the old-age pension, paid to all persons 65 or over who meet residence requirements, are $117.21 a month. Guaranteed income supplements can add as much as another $80.00 for single persons or married persons whose spouses are not pensioners.

The pensions are raised four times a year, with increases based on increases in the consumer price index.

The throne speech also promised steps would be taken to "eliminate" the 50 per cent tax for Canadians away from the country for limited periods.

Under the existing law, Canadians who have not lived in the country for 10 years beyond their twenty-first birthday, may have their pensions cut off if they leave Canada for longer than six months.

Increases in war veterans allowances were also promised.

Job Insurance Change Will Encourage Work

OTTAWA (CP) — Amendments to the Unemployment Insurance Act promised in the throne speech Monday with be introduced in the House of Commons "fairly shortly," a spokesman for the Unemployment Insurance Commission said.

The proposals had been promised in the last throne speech two months ago, but the July 8 federal election prevented their introduction in Parliament.

The UIC spokesman said Monday that the changes will "encourage rapid re-entry of the unemployed into the labor force and marks the program more flexible and responsive to regional differences."

Last spring during the election campaign, Manpower Minister Robert Andras said the proposed amendments would discourage persons from quitting job, camally or refusing "suitable" work by increasing the disqualification period in such cases to eight weeks from five.

More Aid Is Pledged

OTTAWA (CP) — The government has promised increased foreign aid and a continued fight against the inflationary trend of world economies in the speech from the throne Monday.

"The international economic situation is serious, with a high rate of inflation, balance of payments problems, lower growth rates and a heavy dependence on a few currency reserve countries by a few countries."

Then it said Canada is engaged in "a serious and multilateral discussion as "part of a concerted effort to ensure that the fundamental health of the world's economy is strengthened."

Immigration Total Rises

OTTAWA (CP) — A total of 196,000 immigrants were admitted to Canada during the first six months this year, an increase of 57 per cent from the same period, Immigration Minister Robert Andras reported today.

In a statement, Mr. Andras said interest in immigration has reached its highest point in more than a decade and a half.

Immigration during the first six months this year was nearly double that of 1973, when 54,000 people were let into the country. This year's six-month total was 53,226 higher than in the same period last year.

Federal Government Plans To Encourage Oil Searches

OTTAWA (CP) — Faced with bogging down of oil and gas drilling, the federal government promised Monday to take "urgent measures" to encourage more exploration.

The government outlined its energy policies and new proposals in the throne speech that it

Throne Speech

Consumer Protection Is Short of Pledges

OTTAWA (CP) — The government promised Monday to provide consumers with better protection against shaky selling techniques and misleading labels, interest rates and potentially-dangerous electrical products.

But it fell short of July 8 election pledges to shield average families from the effects of inflation. Prime Minister Trudeau called the throne speech a "good mixture" of provisions that now favor the fortunate.

In the throne speech, the government said it would introduce legislation And to protect people against "unfair or unconscionable" practices, such as misleading advertising and pyramid, referral or "send-and-switch selling" schemes.

Further, it would overhaul credit legislation in an effort to force disclosure of effective rates of interest on loans, credit and revolving bankruptcy laws to help consumer debtors.

Legislation would also expect improved safety of electrical appliances and the establishment of more consumer product standards.

But the speech made no mention of promises by Mr. Trudeau to provide a less-burdensome plan to give what was referred to in the election campaign as "low-income, steadily employed wage earners" assistance to ensure they otherwise would not receive.

The low-income plan, together with a program requiring federal registration of new consumer products and another giving people the right to put off mortgages at any time without penalty, were not referred to in the speech.

As a briefing, a spokesman for Mr. Trudeau said many of the election promises would be done over a four-year period, the normal life-span of a parliamentary government.

The government has already declared a moratorium on consumer protection plans outlined in the throne speech, such as those for more liberal bankruptcy laws, for instance, legislation would be drafted to ensure that wages of employees up to $2,000 a month are free from all other payments in a bankruptcy case.

The number of store-front consumer-aid offices would be expanded to 20 from three and started with community-action groups backed by government funds. Offices are already established in Toronto, Halifax, N.B. and Sydney, N.S.

Housing Relief Plans Are Seen as Inadequate

OTTAWA (CP) — A government housing program to help to ease the housing crisis was interpreted in the throne speech as revealing items from the defeated July budget and the Liberal election platform.

Opposition spokesmen said the government program still will do nothing to relieve the housing shortage.

Ed Broadbent, parliamentary leader of the New Democratic Party, Harold Sherman (PC—York Simcoe) said the government should have stepped in with a massive program to increase housing supply.

The throne speech refers to new guidelines for buyers and government sources said this includes the $600 home purchase limit for first-time home buyers. It also included government insurance of conventional mortgages under the Assisted Home-Ownership Program. (AHOP).

Mr. Broadbent said the government should be ordered to cease asking mortgage lenders to provide low down payments for moderately-priced housing in a "very clear indication of the weakness of the present mortgage policy." Without teeth, this would not enable the government to compel lenders to follow these guides.

New Version Of 'O Canada' To Be Anthem

OTTAWA (CP) — Sometime before the new session of Parliament ends, Canadians will be encountering a revised version of O Canada.

The Liberal government confirmed in the throne speech Monday that it plans to bring in legislation confirming O Canada as the National anthem and changing the words a little.

It included the bill in a list of measures designed to "enhance the Canadian identity and sense of identity."

Earlier this month, the secretary of state department said it was not ready to release the new version of the anthem but added it would not be far off a version produced by a committee in 1968 following a year of study.

draw sharp criticism from opposition parties.

Alvin Hamilton (PC—Qu'Appelle), said the government was "staggering up" the oil and gas industry.

He suggested now that the government be decided to do something for the prairies now, they should also plan to help the oil producers as well.

Ed Broadbent, the New Democrat house leader, said the government introduction of the Petro-Canada bill since he said the July election has taken place.

He he added the government was planning to concentrate corporation activities in the high-risk frontier areas, while leaving "the more lucrative fields" in the hands of private corporations.

The government also promised measures to guarantee domestic control of uranium and protect adequate future supplies needed by Canada.

LONDON, Ont. (CP) — Workers at plants of Continental Can Co. of Canada in southern Ontario, ending six days of strike, voted to walked and returned to work Monday night.

Food Price Board To Remain

OTTAWA (CP) — The government has announced today that it plans to keep the food prices review board in action indefinitely.

In the throne-opening throne speech Monday there was widespread speculation that the 16-year-old board would be disbanded when its mandate expired in December, this year.

But again, the board would be charged with reporting on factors affecting food prices and analyzing reasons for price changes in specific areas.

Plan Incentives

OTTAWA (CP) — The government has once again promised farm and fisher folk incentives to increase production, but in its second opening throne speech Monday, the government gave few new specifics. The incentives will come, it said Monday, through stabilized income and markets, the speech says.

Capturing Reality With Brush on Canvas

By Isabel Haggan

"I paint what I see, not what I'd like to see," says Albert Elliot, the Belleville artist, whose work went on display this week in the Corby Library art gallery.

Mr. Elliot is a realist, he favors the style called "individualism" — who paints from photographs rather than from life.

"There are too many changes going on, changes in light and mood and position, to try to paint a person or a scene honestly," he says plainly.

"But a photograph stops and captures a set moment and gives an exact likeness of what's real. A photograph doesn't lie."

In fact, from a distance Mr. Elliot's watercolors give the appearance of being photographs.

Why, then, is he an artist and not a photographer?

"Oddly enough, I'm not good at taking pictures," he admits. "Besides, I find the process of creating a painting really enjoyable. It takes me close to a week to do one."

Because of his technique he uses, Mr. Elliot doesn't need natural light and is able to work in his basement. A bright lamp and a drafting table are set up in a corner by the stairs, and there he produces painting of scenes and people from all over the globe.

"I choose photographs to use very carefully. I'm sorry if I especially like pictures that have a wide appeal, that say something to whoever looks at them."

That's why Mr. Elliot seldom paints local scenes (except those of churches and houses that he's commissioned to do), since their appeal is limited.

Instead, he chooses much of his subject matter from magazines such as National Geographic, even from Norman Rockwell paintings that appeals to the ruling of a Scottish abbey.

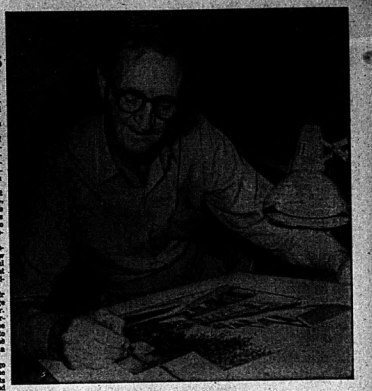
Using his own measurement system he scales up a photograph in exact proportion to the size he wants. He paints precisely what the photo shows, never omitting or default.

Although he admires realistic artists such as Andrew Wyeth, Mr. Elliot is careful not to be influenced so that he can keep his own individual appearance.

One year out of study at Sir George Williams Art College in Montreal convinced Mr. Elliot that painting is a personal thing that cannot be taught. He moved to Toronto where for several years he worked in advertising as a commercial artist.

A little over two years ago he moved back to his home in Belleville where he recently still lives and has finally found the time to take up painting seriously.

"Some people say that what I do is realism," he says. "But I say whenever you paint anything, whether painting whether it's right in front of you or in a photograph."



Artist at Work

With painstaking care Albert Elliot translates photographs of people and scenes from around the world to watercolor paintings which are perfectly detailed in every way. His work will be on display at the Corby Library art gallery until October 26.

Meetings are held on the third Thursday of each month at the Corby Library and all women graduates are invited.

Ann Landers

He's 'Pure,' She's Frustrated

Dear Ann Landers: I am married to a minister who is so pure he's impossible to live with. He used to specialize in the physical side of marriage. He tells me I drive him crazy because I would not need sex either. . . I have begged him to see a doctor, but he insists I am the one who needs help. When I suggested a marriage counselor, he refused and straightened me out in no uncertain terms. I'm not my dear, I am a marriage counselor." (He is!)

The church is split-lived by his congregation and is an unfunctional leader in the community. Whenever I bring up the subject he tells me that those soliciting all his needs and that I should pray for divine guidance. My total abstinence might be fine for him but it is destroying me. I don't know what to do. Can you help me? Please give me some advice!—Married In Name Only.

Dear Name: Since your husband has articulated his problem clearly I think you should do the honest thing and tell him you believe in celibacy in marriage and neither of you mates. Then see a lawyer and tell it to the judge.

Dear Ann Landers: My wife and I have been married for many years and many other couples are envious of us. I don't brag up my thing about it. Yet. . .

I do a great deal of driving in my business and I meet many women who flirt with me. I'm not interested in any of them, but I'm also not a eunuch. Other men have more trouble. When my wife is at my side she is also on my level. But if I'm alone I'm fair game. Or what are you waiting for? The next time I'm approached I'll say, "Hey, you fast or too slow to ask her?"

What's wrong with me that I can't get it all together? Every, where I look people seem to be having a good time, while I'm laughing on the outside and crying on the inside. Can you help?—No Name Please

Dear N.N.: Any adult who says the teen-age years were the best years of his life had a poor memory. The teen years can be the roughest. But there is hope and don't think you're so different from the others. Plenty of them are also crying on the outside and crying on the inside.

Dear Doris:

I wrote an I.Q. test for 1 point and I passed. . . I don't know yet if I passed. . .

Is it true that if you fail the test you are stupid? I didn't have enough time to think clearly. And I was timed, too.

Does it make a difference if you have been out of school for a number of years? Am I stupid?

DEAR AM I:

All the Intelligence Quotient test measures is the level of a person's ability to think logically and analytically.

It is certainly not true that if you fail an I.Q. test you are "stupid." Often, people are in a situation in which, as you suggest, you can't think straight. There are many students who are either simply never do well on examinations because of their feeling of panic. Long-gone schoolboys figure in this, too.

Even if you were the calmest person in the world, and made a good mark on an I.Q. test, it would only indicate one part of your suitability for the job of a postal clerk. If you serve the public you need other kinds of ability such as enjoying working with people, good service, handling detail and being patient.

Dear Doris: I owe you a big "Thanks" for forwarding all the kind letters I got when I lost my daughter. They have been a great comfort and I've tried to answer all personally.

I read—the letter from "Incurable but Full of Hope. . . I" and I'm dying. I wouldn't be afraid; but to have had a girl just starting me to stone. I am able to put on a good front when I am with people and I'll sure have been

Feux Follets Brings Canada's Diverse Heritage to Life

By JIM SMELLIE
Staff Reporter

Throughout Canada's history the role played by dance and song has been intricately weved in the fabric of our country.

One need only recall the buffalo dance of the Plains Indians, the sea shanties of the Maritimes, the folk dances of French Canada and the familiar dances of the Eskimos.

If this colorful, spirited look at Canada appeals to you, you can see it brought to life by Canada's national dance ensemble, the Feux Follets.

The group — composed of 23 performers — will appear at Centennial Secondary School Thursday, Oct. 3 at 8:30 p.m.

While most of the 84 tickets are sold out, there are some 50 tickets left. They are available at McNight's Variety Store on Front St. and at t Bronic Jewellers in Trenton.

The group is being presented by the National Ballet of Canada, Belleville Branch and is sponsored by the Belleville Yardmen Benefit Fund.

A special matinee will be offered Thursday afternoon to those in nursing homes, senior citizen groups and others from handicapped group organizations. Filling out the audience at this show will be those with tickets offered to the school boards.

Feux Follets were formed in the 1950s to present dance of the wide assortment of people who contribute to our heritage and make us what we are today.

Besides travelling throughout Canada, the group has toured the United States and Europe and performed during the summer at Expo '70 in Osaka, Japan.

Although Montreal was home base for Feux Follets until 1972, their first professional engagement was in Charlottetown, P.E.I. in 1964 when they gave a command performance for Queen Elizabeth and Prince Phillip at the official opening of the Confederation Centre of the Arts.

Since then, Charlottetown and the Centre have become home to the company. The group is under the direction of Alan Lund and produced by Jack McAndrew.

It has appeared on the U.S. Television network, as t he short subject of a National Film Board production and at the United Nations and Expo '67 in Montreal.

A featured singer of the company is Bonnie LeClair of Charlottetown, who has composed many of her own songs.

Those wondering the exact meaning of the name Feux Follets a literal translation is almost impossible It has been variously translated as firefly or will 'o the wisp.

So no matter what your cultural heritage be in Maritime, French Canadian, Scottish or Indian, there's bound to be something to strike home and reach a responsive chord.

Weapons Taken

TRENTON — Town police have today charged Ronald Roy Chadwick, 19, of the Gilbert Hotel, with break, enter and theft following the theft of a .30 calibre rifle and two gas-powered hand guns from Woolworth's department store on Dundas St. east over the weekend.

A police spokesman said investigation into the break-in is continuing.

Some of the firearms involved in the theft were recovered by police.

Access to the downtown building was gained by means of the roof.

GOOD' CONTAINERS

Ginger jars without covers sometimes turn up at country auctions. An attractive one with a narrow neck makes an excellent container for kitchen spoons, spatulas, two-tine forks and so forth.

ANDY CAPP

Crowd Pleaser

The dancers of Feux Follets feature Canada's Gaboecois heritage in an exciting, colorfully-costumed dance. The first act finale, for instance, features the entire company in a brisk set of old-fashioned jigs and reels. It's just one of the many exciting dance sequences in the two-hour journey through Canada's multi-cultural heritage.

Area Opposition Mounts To Bay Bridge Location

Despite action by the town of Trenton, the townships of Ameliasburgh and Sidney, and the County of Prince Edward in the last year, a site west of Belleville be considered for any new high level bridge across the Bay of Quinte, acting mayor Stu Meaks feels that Belleville is the right location.

"The acting mayor said today it is unfortunate that anything had come out of city council except a request for a new bridge.

He said if a new high-level bridge (or tunnel) is located anywhere except at the present location on an entire new system of highway connections will be required, resulting in considerably higher cost.

Cost of a new high-level bridge at the present location has been unofficially estimated at upwards of $12 million.

The location proposed by Ameliasburgh at the Wallbridge Loyalist Rd. is at one of the widest parts of the bay and would necessitate a much longer bridge, the acting mayor said.

He noted that Highway 14 in Prince Edward County had recently been rebuilt to line up with the entrance to the present swing bridge.

Meaks added: "Belleville has been spent north and south of the city in highway reconstruction. There is no way that we would want Highway 14 rerouted through a residential part of the city."

Local municipal officials were caught somewhat by surprise a few weeks ago when Transportation and Communications Minister John R. Rhodes announced his department was going ahead with plans for a new high level bridge between Belleville and Rossmore.

Then at the town council meeting, council approved a motion from Alderman Jean Smith asking that a study be done on the feasibility of a tunnel rather than a high level structure.

Since then Ameliasburgh Township has passed a resolution asking that a location west of Belleville be considered for new bay crossing. Belleville council did not concur with the resolution, but Prince Edward County, the town of Trenton and the township of Sidney, feel that a bridge location between Trenton and Belleville would be advantageous.

Township Backs Resolution

Sidney Township Council Monday night passed a resolution requesting the decision to construct a bridge in Belleville that would link Hastings and Prince Edward Counties.

Since the provincial government announced several weeks ago that the existing bay bridge would be replaced, municipalities on both sides of the bay have contributed to a list of alternate locations.

Monday night, Sidney Township council acted in favor of a resolution passed recently by Ameliasburgh Township council calling for the bridge to connect with Loyalist Wallbridge Road and not be built on Highway 14, as proposed.

Councillor Reg McCurdy was the only member of council to speak against the resolution and he termed it "ridiculous."

A copy of the township's resolution will be forwarded to the province's ministry of transportation and communications.

Town Seeks Study Status

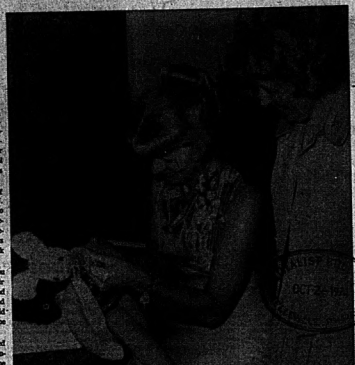
TRENTON — The town has received no positive indications that it will be included in a study of governmental restructuring of the Northumberland County, and town council decided Monday it would like to know why.

Raised at the point during council's regular session, Councillor John Bean recommended the town engage in "positive follow-up" to discover where Trenton stands with the study.

Council agreed to investigate it's place in the county study.

No confirmation that Trenton is included in the study has been received from Queen's Park, Councillor Bean indicated.

He said he fears the town's request could sit on a civil servant's desk unnoticed unless some steps were undertaken.



After the Meeting

The Belleville and District Unit of the Canadian Cancer Society held its annual dinner meeting at Sun Luck Gardens Monday night. Guest speaker Helen Cummins, right, director of volunteers at an Ottawa Lodge for cancer patients, shows newly chosen president of the local Unit, Shirley Woodcox, some of the crafts made by cancer patients.

Cancer Society Meets

The role of the volunteer in helping patients with cancer was explained to those present at the Belleville and District Unit Canadian Cancer Society during their annual meeting at Sun Luck Gardens Monday night.

Helen Cummins, director of volunteers at the Marion of Grimes Lodge of the Ontario Cancer Treatment and Research Foundation told society members that volunteers are the patient's only link with the outside world.

"It is important that you never be afraid to hold their hand, put your arm around their shoulder, hug them and even give them a kiss," said Mrs. Cummins, who at one time resided in Belleville.

Mrs. Cummins mentioned the way that those with cancer can lead useful lives. She pointed around to the audience crafts made by cancer patients such as stuffed dolls, needlework, knitted items and other handcrafted articles.

Mrs. Cummins went on to mention the volunteer work being done at the Quinte Personnel Island Lodge, opened just last week in Kingston. She said that already 10 of the 17 available spaces are taken.

Also during Monday's meeting, the new executive for 1974-75 was chosen. Shirley Woodcox becomes a second term as president while Bessie Marsh becomes vice-president.

Past president is W. D. Cook while treasurer is L. G. Lemon and recording secretary is Lois Breen. Doris Wrarthe continues as staff secretary.

Denise Porter is the education chairman while her assistants are W. Woodley, adult education; Cassie Wilkinson and David Gill, youth education; D. MacKinnon, industrial schooling; and Ann Lobbe Bailey, special events.

Service to patients chairman is Mrs. R. Logan of the Unit and Mrs. Dorothy McCulloch, of Belleville.

Carolyn Emerson continues as publicity chairman while Brian Woodley remains as campaign chairman, assisted by W. R. Vandervoort.

School Entered

Three city schools were the victims of vandals and thieves in the last two days.

Some time Sunday night, police said 19 windows at Prince of Wales School were smashed causing about $300 damage.

And Monday night thieves broke into the office at Macdonald School on Harder Ave. and took two cases of soft drinks from a vending machine. Police said entry was gained through a two door.

Plans Secret

Mohawk Protesters to Meet With Toronto Lawyer

TYENDINAGA — The growing discontent of Mohawks here protesting the formation of a business corporation on the reserve may come to a head this Wednesday when the band meets in secret council meetings.

Protesters filled council chambers calling for mass resignation of council and at meeting barricaded the doors allowing no one to leave.

Monday night, the protesting faction was set to meet with a Toronto lawyer. The lawyer, Malcolm Montgomery, did not arrive and the meeting has been set for tonight.

Willard Hill, chairman of the protesters, said in an interview prior to the meeting, "We are meeting with the lawyer to have corporation structure explained and plan strategy."

Chief Miracle, the main spokesman for the group, said "we are getting legal information so we can work with instead of doing it the violent way."

Early in September the band council announced plans to form a corporation on the reserve to produce shoe parts for Bata Shoes.

Mr Miracle refused to answer questions relating to a possible court action against the band council, saying, "The people are concerned the council is dissolved."

Reporters were excluded from Monday's meeting and were refused any information concerning discussion topics.

Mr. Miracle said only that "the corporation represents a cancerous wound that is whispered".

Official spokesmen would not say if an injunction to stop the firm's operation is being considered but said "Hill will attend Wednesday" council meeting.

Bridge Site Queried

TRENTON — Council here has come out in support of a resolution, originally proposed by Ameliasburgh Township, that will see a provincial study into possible location of a Bay of Quinte overpass at Loyalist-Wallbridge Rd.

Town council endorsed Ameliasburgh Township's resolution Monday and will forward its request to the ministry of transportation and communication in Toronto.

This has a common perception makes the second proposal that has come into provincial hands for the assessment Belleville will see its present causeway to Prince Edward County replaced by a skyway.

Belleville Alderman proposed the province investigate the possibility a tunnel could be placed in nearby the same location.

County Levy Unfair

Sidney Township Councillor Reg McCurdy said Monday, the township's tax assessment for the county is unfair in comparison to the amount of voice Sidney has in county spending. The township picks up about 25 per cent of county bills and has only 15 per cent of council votes.

Councillor Wants More Say In County Council Affairs

Sidney Township councillor Reg McCurdy says his township's tax assessment — payable to Hastings County — is unfair — is still considering the amount of voice Sidney has in county spending.

Rates published recently show Sidney Township picking up 25 per cent of the county's general levy and nearly 30 per cent of the county's roads budget for the coming year.

"These percentages reflect an increase from last year and total more than $200,000. The township has two members at county council — one reeve and his deputy — and controls four of 37 votes.

"It's unfair," said Councillor McCurdy. "We don't have much voice regarding what we're paying for." He calculated the township is covering more than 25 per cent of the county bills and had only 15 per cent of the voice.

Thurlow Township now pays an average of 14 per cent of county bills and has three county council votes, said the councillor.

Following the meeting of county council Monday, Councillor McCurdy said his township should have a "stronger voice ... but I don't think I'll get anywhere with it."

Sidney Township council accepted the levy and took no action regarding Councillor McCurdy's comments.

Local Firm Uses 'Think-tank' Approach To Solve Wide Variety of Problems

By CASH MAHAFFY
Staff Reporter

The name A. D. Revill Associates on the door of a small office at 14 Bridge St. W., would to many indicate a firm of consulting engineers, engineer, but A. D. Revill Associates is much more than a consulting engineering firm. Here, in downtown Belleville, is what amounts to a "think tank".

Until about three years ago Mr. Revill was general manager and principal shareholder of Electronic Controls Ltd. He sold out, to set up a consulting engineering firm.

In his many contacts with government he said it became obvious that much more than "engineering" was required in many of the consulting jobs that came up.

For example, a job involving the evaluation of a dam site on a river like the Moira would involve engineering and biology — the effect on the river's aquatic life.

"Too often the engineering and was done well and the biological aspects done poorly," he said.

With the encouragement of his Ottawa contacts, Mr. Revill "revitalized contacts with various university people and set up what he calls "a multi-discipline consulting group".

In fact, apart from himself, there is only one other engineer on the ten-member team. He is D. R. Pynkiewicz, of Loyalist College. Also from Loyalist is Ernst Kneisel, whose specialty is economics.

Other members of the group — all of whom hold Ph.Ds. — and their specialties are: R. J. Preston, archeology; W. Noble, archeology and F. J. Henry, sociology, all from Michigan State University; Hamilton; H. M. Good, biology; P. R. Dingwall geography and D. W. Bacon, mathematics, all from Queen's University, Kingston, and J. L. Farrar, forestry, University of Toronto.

When the firm is trying to get a job, or gets it, "it's not the team logically present the problem and plan our attack. We select the specialists that should be involved and then go ahead and get the specialist help they will need," Mr. Revill explained.

"Our main interest is environmental impact; that is the effect of man and his activities on his surroundings."

"Our job is to anticipate what will result when, say, trees are cut down for a road, way, or a pipeline is built or a river is dammed. There are environmental costs to be paid as well as the dollar costs of construction, they all should be weighed before a project is gone ahead with," Mr. Revill said.

"Until recently we had been explaining ... we had to be assided a road to move goods from one point to another, we went ahead and built it. Now we know here are kids of facts that can be disastrous if we don't anticipate them."

While much of A. D. Revill Associates work is done for governments, many of the assignments are done for private interests.

Think Tank Chief

Alan Revill has brought under one roof the combined reasoning and deductive powers of top-rank professionals to provide an all-inclusive consulting service. Mr. Revill says from his experience, it is more than obvious that much more than "engineering" is required in many of the consulting jobs that come up.

Contracts Awarded

From the Ottawa Bureau of The Intelligencer

OTTAWA — Three federal government contracts affecting the Quinte area, worth a total of $21,895, have been awarded to firms in Ottawa, Colborne and Brighton, the Department of supply and services announced Monday.

The largest of the three contracts, valued at $15,000, has been awarded to Duron Ontario Ltd. of Brighton, for the repair of concrete floors and shaft surfaces at CFB Trenton.

Moore Business Forms Ltd. of Ottawa was awarded a $18,497 contract for a supply of labelling forms for the Trenton plant, and George K. Johnston Motors Ltd. of Colborne has been given $4,398 for a truck for the Canadian Penitentiary Service Department.

They were among 211 unclassified contracts worth $10,000 or more that were awarded by the department to Canadian companies during the week ended Sept. 26.

Kison and Forsch Keep Clubs Even

By THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

Bruce Kison of Pittsburgh Pirates and Bob Forsch of St. Louis Cardinals matched three-hitters Monday night as the Pirates edged a deadlock for first place in the National League East.

Kison, aided by pinch-hitter Richie Zisk's two-run double and clutch-hitting triple, pitched the Pirates to a 2-0 victory over Chicago Cubs. Manny Sanguillen's three-run homer in the first inning provided enough of a margin as Forsch pitched the Cardinals to a 4-1 win over Montreal Expos.

In the National League West, Houston Astros prevented Los Angeles from clinching the title, beating the Dodgers 4-1. Los Angeles now leads second-place Cincinnati by two games with two to play. St. Louis and Pittsburgh also have two games remaining.

In another National League game, New York defeated Philadelphia Phillies 5-2.

Baltimore Orioles increased their lead in the American League East to three games with a 5-3 triumph over Detroit Tigers. Both New York and Baltimore have two games left.

In the other American League game, Cleveland Indians nipped Boston Red Sox 5-4.

Kison had a shaky first inning, allowing two singles, a hit batsman and a base-loaded walk to force in a run, but then settled down.

Kison, 9-8, allowed only eight and 4 walks for the rest of his strongest game of the season and his first complete game since 1972. He has been in and out of the Pittsburgh starting rotation this season, after being plagued by arm trouble in 1973.

Hal Smith's three-run homer off Frank Taveras, loaded his game-winning triple, which came with off loser Bill Bonham, 11-12, to score Manny Sanguillen, who had singled and taken second on a wild pitch.

Forsch, a rookie called up from Tulsa in July, pitched no-hit ball for 6 2-3 innings at chilly Jarry Park in Montreal. The temperature was 44 degrees at game time, with winds up to 20 miles an hour.

Forsch's effort was quite a contrast to Monday, when he was pounded for nine runs in one-third of an inning by Pittsburgh.

Mike Jorgensen broke up the no-hit bid with a home run leading off the seventh. Ken Singleton followed with a single for Montreal's only run.

Simmons' first-ing homer — off loser Steve Rogers, 13-12 — in his 30th home run of the year.

Reggie Smith added a two-run triple in the seventh, but Forsch struck out Tim Foli to end the inning.

BRUCE KISON

had more than enough runs as he pitched his record to 7-6.

The Dodgers were stopped by the shutout pitching of Larry Dierker and Ken Forsch. Dierker, 15-10, went the full six innings for the win, while his arm stiffened, forcing Houston to call on Forsch.

Wayne Garrett's three-run homer for the Mets backed the seven-hit pitching of Jerry Koosman.

The Orioles collected 16 hits, each by Bobby Grich, Mark Belanger and Don Baylor, including Grich's fourth straight win, Earl Williams' 33rd and Baylor's 32nd homers, all coming in three runs.

Jim Perry won his 17th game, thanks to an opposite-field double by John Ellis in a five-run fourth inning, leading the Indians over the Red Sox.

Perry Making Waves

Indians Have A Problem

CLEVELAND (AP) — Gaylord Perry's chances he's underpaid, and it is not hard to make a case that he is. But by tying his salary demands to the status of Frank Robinson, he might place in jeopardy the chances of success for major league baseball's first black manager.

Cleveland Indians, who employ Perry's arm and Robinson's bat, seemingly paved the way for Robinson to make the black manager breakthrough with their announcement last week that Ken Aspromonte had been fired as manager of the American League team.

To get Robinson's bat, the Indians agreed to pay the aging superstar an estimated $180,000 next year, Perry, a veteran like Robinson, makes a reported $85,000 a year. He says he won't play for the Indians next year unless he makes $180,000.

The 36-year-old Perry made that announcement shortly before Aspromonte's exit was announced. He also said he didn't really has been talk about such a deal. But it might not be so simple.

For one thing, it probably would be difficult for the Indians to get what they think Perry is worth. For a decade he has been one of baseball's best and most durable pitchers—four 20-game seasons, a 197-157 record, an earned-run average of less than 2.80, a Cy Young award; five seasons with more than 300 innings.

But Perry is 36, and it's risky to count on the lasting many more seasons. After an iffy start this year, Perry is 13-12 since the All-Star break. He is 17-16 at home.

Robinson is fourth on the all-time home run list, has won a Triple Crown—the home run, runs-batted-in (RBIs) and batting championship in the same season—and is the only player in most baseball players in both the American and National leagues.

Team Canada in Moscow

Delays Marked Arrival

Paul Henderson:

Expected to start a goal with Gerry Cheevers, although he is nursing a groin injury which he received in the 5-3 victory over the Swedish national team.

J. C. Tremblay, one of Canada's defensive stars, has a minor shoulder injury but he also is expected to be in action.

The team faced several problems during a surprise Monday in Moscow. Players, their wives and associates were given a tour of Moscow at the city's starter airport—first to get off the charter flight from Montreal, had to get into the reception area, to locate baggage and to get it on a bus for a 34-mile ride to downtown Moscow.

The ninth game Thursday is also scheduled for 12:30 p.m. EDT with the final two games Saturday and Sunday set for 11 a.m. EDT.

The games Thursday and Saturday will be televised in Canada by the CTV network with CBC handling the final match.

The lengthy delay in getting between Soviet and Canadian team to forego a light practice. The session was scheduled to practice four hours before the players were cleared through customs.

Soviet officials made the ice available but the players decided to eat and go to bed.

LONDON (AP) — Jorge Alcaide of Argentina and Britain's John Conich clash tonight for the world light heavyweight crown. The 10-round bout, scheduled for the World Boxing Council title, was originally declined to fight Conich. Foster then retired, leaving the World Boxing Association title vacant. The WBA said it is not recognizing the Alcaide-Conich contest.

SARGENT CUT

LOS ANGELES (AP) — Two players, including No. 1 draft choice Gary Sargent, were cut Monday by Los Angeles Kings and sent to their Springfield farm team in the American Hockey League. Sargent, a National Association of Intercollegiate Athletics All-American from Bemidji State in Minnesota, is a defenseman. Also dropped by the National Hockey League team was right winter Loren Stamler.

Young Players Taking Up The Tools of Ignorance

Someone has described the baseball manager as the perfect catcher with no protection of responsibility, as the butt of baseball humor.

But it appears that old saw is having no ill effect on the aspirations of would-be pro baseball managers.

Word is, these days everyone wants to be on the receiving end — of a pitched ball that is.

Seems to us youngsters always used to view the role of pitcher as the ultimate.

Things have changed.

According to Leo Bradley, Montreal Expos' representative in our neck of the woods, there are plenty of first-rate catchers waiting for the chance to break into the big leagues but pitchers are scarce.

Books Day annual have heard pitchers are high on the want list.

An outfielder, pinch-hitter who showed something less than a great season in the big leagues this season could find a job if he's willing. Day is reported to have asked for a chance to fill the second catcher.

It was a pitcher during his high school days. And he was originally signed as a pitcher-outfielder.

Whatever anyone will stop and take a look, Day displays his talents as a pitcher.

Two men who have taken the time for a look-see are Expos' general manager Jim Fanning and field manager Gene Mauch.

They've encouraged Boots to keep pitching, as they say.

"Day has a major league curve ball," Mauch observes.

Fanning is a little more emphatic.

"The darndest breaking ball you've ever seen," is the way he GM describes Day's curve.

Scouts from Expos' brass going for him.

He's a left-hander. Expos are mighty slim in that department.

But getting back to Leo Bradley for a moment, that baseball enthusiast reports that Expos have signed a pitcher out of the New York State League.

A young right-hander, Mark Berger did his pitching for Syracuse Yankees and he showed great promise.

Kingston's Greg Orr who hit for a .313 average in the New York State League, has signed another left-hander with Expos' brass dogs.

"I want to make the big leagues!

Start throwing peas, young fella, smoke that in. Keep burning 'em in there and maybe the pea'll make the grade.

Howard and Robert QFL Playoff Champ

Trenton Angus Men's Wear right-hander Bob Swan had one bad inning at Alemite Park last night. It cost him the ball game and gave Howard and Robert Printing the championship of the Quinte Football League.

Howard and Robert took the seventh and deciding game 3-0.

The game's lone run came in the bottom of the second inning when the Printers got to Swan for three of the five singles he gave up.

The loss fell off the bats of Dave Skrlinac Larry Potter and Dwight Rathwell did the damage. After that, Swan allowed only a single to Jack Hughes in the third and another to Terry Pope in the fifth.

Meanwhile, Angus's had little success attempting to solve the slants of the Printers' lefty Bob Ethier.

Limiting the Men's Wear club to four hits, Ethier allowed no more than one safety in any of the innings he was pitched. The losers managed only three singles and a walk.

Ethier moved down 14 on third strikes, including the side in the seventh. He walked two.

Swan, who was with the Howard and Robert squad last season, finished up with one strikeout while walking two. Most of the night, he had the Printers hitin' the ball into the hands of Angus infielders and outfielders.

Hughes, Skelton, Potter, Pope and Rathwell had the winners' hits.

For Angus's, Dave Henry collected a two-out double while Roger Drake, Al Fenner and Jon Theriault each stroked a single.

Cut From Roster

LANDOVER, Md. (AP) — Washington Capitals of the National Hockey League trimmed four players from their roster Monday and assigned them to Richmond Robins of the American Hockey League. Forward Paul Nicholson, a fourth-round pick in the amateur draft, was sent to Richmond along with three players obtained in the expansion draft—centre Bob Collyard, forward Mike Lampman and defenceman Larry Schneider. The Capitals now have 26 players on their roster and expect to carry 22 or 23 when they open their season Oct. 9 in New York.

Reed Tops 1,000 For 10th Time

TORONTO (CP) — George Reed, perennial all-star fullback with Saskatchewan Roughriders of the Western Football Conference, has gained more than 1,000 yards rushing for the 10th time in his 12-year career.

Reed gained 122 yards in Sunday's 34-19 win over Calgary Stampeders and increased his season total to 1,007 yards.

Reed joined 12 other players who have topped the 1,000-yard mark in Canadian Football League history.

The only year he missed the 1,000-yard mark was 1970 when he had 'only' 994 but four times he finished with 931 yards.

While Reed has been running as well as ever teammate Ron Lancaster has been under fire for quarterbacking.

However, Lancaster had a hot hand Sunday completing 13 of 16 passes for 178 yards and four touchdowns. He did not have an interception while Reed had two intercepted in the previous 11 games.

COWENS SIDELINED

BUZZARDS BAY, Mass. (AP) — Centre Dave Cowens of Boston Celtics has been sidelined for an undetermined period with a right leg injury, the National Basketball Association team announced Monday. Captain John Havlicek is expected to play in an exhibition game Friday night at Toronto against Buffalo Braves. Havlicek is nursing a thigh injury.

Villemure–Contract Dispute

Goalie Suspended

NEW YORK (AP) — New York Rangers suspended backup goaltender Gilles Villemure indefinitely Monday night after he left the club for the second time in a week following a contract dispute.

General manager Emile Francis announced the action after the Rangers' 5-1 exhibition victory over Detroit.

Villemure, who the Rangers had Thursday, missed a pre-season game in Providence, R. I., and returned Saturday night in time for Sunday's game in Philadelphia. He left again before Monday's game.

Villemure said he signed a four-year contract with New York two years ago, with a verbal agreement to renegotiate at the end of two years. The club has refused to renegotiate.

"I have never remained under any contracts and that is our policy," said Francis. "Villemure's departure has not disrupted our training camp one iota."

Kelly Happy with New Recruits

By THE CANADIAN PRESS

Newsers Dave Williams and Stephen Murphy have filled Red Kelly in a happy mood behind the bench.

Williams, playing on a line with Serge Savard and Norm Ullman, had a goal and two assists to help the Toronto Maple Leafs defeat Buffalo Sabres 6-3. It was the second straight win for the Leafs over the Sabres after Buffalo won its first 4-1 start in pro-hockey.

"I was really excited about the way Stephen handled himself on defence. I think he's got a lot better now," said Kelly.

Williams, the Leafs' No. 2 amateur draft choice this summer, had 36 goals and 96 assists playing for the Oshawa Generals before graduating to the pros. In 1973-74 he played a few games with Swift Current Broncos of the Western Canada Hockey League.

In other games, California Golden Seals surprised Chicago Black Hawks 4-1 in Eastport, Ont., and New York Rangers took a 5-1 victory at home over Detroit Red Wings.

Houghton, acquired from Pittsburgh Penguins earlier this year for Rick Kehoe, had a goal and an assist in the game at Toronto. Ullman, making his first start after suffering groin injury at the beginning of training camp, also had a goal and an assist.

Jim McKenny, Clare Alexander and Errol Thompson scored the other Toronto goals. The Leafs, 2-2-1 in exhibition play, were without Bob Neely, Lanny McDonald, George Ferguson, Dave Keon, Brian Glennie and Gerry Sabourin, all absent because of minor ailments.

Rick Martin and Rene Ramsay scored for the Sabres.

Craig Patrick scored both the winning and insurance goals in the Seals' victory over Detroit Red Wings. Dennis Hull scored for the Wings.

Los Angeles Kings trimmed their roster when they sent No. 1 draft choice Gary Sargent and Larry Hamelin to their farm club in the Springfield farm club in the American Hockey League.

Washington Capitals cut four players — Joel Nicholson, Bob Collyard, Mike Lampman and Larry Sacharko — and sent them to Richmond Robins of the AHL.

Redskins Win 30-3

WASHINGTON (AP) — Bill Kilmer, bowing with a pulled hamstring muscle, completed fifty to tell everyone but himself that a small part of Washington Redskins' 30-3 victory Monday night over Denver Broncos.

"It was all the offense, the defense and the special teams," he said. "We didn't make any mistakes and it was fun."

Kilmer threw two touchdown passes to Charlie Taylor, including one from the first quarter, to lead the Redskins to their second win in two starts.

National Football League roundup:

The win put the Redskins in a first-place tie with Philadelphia Eagles in the National Football Conference Eastern Division each with 2-1 records. Dallas, St. Louis, 3-0. The loss gave Denver a 0-3-1 record.

Denver's only score came on a 42-yard goal by Jim Turner in the third quarter.

Your Horoscope

By BERNICE RYDE-OSOL

Wednesday, October 2

Aries (March 21-April 19) Making a last-minute change in your plans will put you very much to advantage. Follow through as you originally planned without the alterations.

Taurus (April 20-May 20) A stranger you're hoping an associate would perform for you is not forthcoming at this time. Look for other sources to help you.

Gemini (May 21-June 20) You will come some unnecessary distraction among your group today. Don't let the majority rule. Vote in.

Cancer (June 21-July 22) In a competitive situation you are more likely to be tripped up by your own carelessness than by the opposition.

Leo (July 23-Aug. 22) This is not a good time to try to inject new ideas that are chancy. Stick with methods that have given you success previously.

Virgo (Aug. 23-Sept. 22) Your budget is not elastic enough to take on additional expenditures. Put a damper on any impulses to splurge at this time.

Libra (Sept. 23-Oct. 23) Your present course of action is the best for you. However, you are likely to be influenced by the other and change direction unwisely.

Scorpio (Oct. 24-Nov. 22) Be very careful if working with unfamiliar tools or materials. Get assistance in areas where you lack expertise.

Sagittarius (Nov. 23-Dec. 21) You're not as lucky as you may think in situations that have you friends' or chance. What you'll win would be only temporary.

Capricorn (Dec. 22-Jan. 19) Decorative changes that you make around the house now may prove difficult to live with over the long haul. Don't be too impulsive.

Aquarius (Jan. 20-Feb. 19) If your logistics are poorly planned today you're going to waste a lot of time and steps. Set up a sensible itinerary. Stick to it.

Pisces (Feb. 20-March 20) It's not to your best interest to concentrate on something of a material nature that is not already in your hands. It may not be coming.

It May Take Over Week To Pick Watergate Jury

WASHINGTON (AP) — Once-mighty officials of the Nixon administration are back in the United States capital today for trial on charges they tried to block investigation of the June, 1972, Watergate break-in.

U.S. District Judge John Sirica, who presided over the original Watergate trial nearly two years ago, summoned 170 prospective jurors for the start of a selection process that may last one week or more.

Twelve jurors and six alternates will be chosen. Sirica has said he hopes to complete the trial before Christmas.

The five defendants include former attorney-general John Mitchell and former White House aides H. R. Haldeman and John Ehrlichman.

The defendants sought unsuccessfully to delay the trial until next year, on the grounds the unprecedented publicity generated by Watergate, including the resignation and pardon of Nixon, would make it impossible to find unbiased jurors.

Federal court rules provide that the judge question prospective jurors and screen out those with obvious biases. Then prosecution and defence lawyers get to reject a certain number without giving reasons.

Defendants along with Mitchell, Haldeman and Ehrlichman are former assistant attorney-general Robert Mardian on obstruction of justice.

In addition, Mitchell, Haldeman and Ehrlichman are charged with lying to authorities investigating the break-in and cover-up.

Ehrlichman is appealing his conviction on conspiracy and perjury charges resulting from the activities of the White House plumbers unit, which carried the break-in at the office of Daniel Ellsberg's psychiatrist.

Mitchell was acquitted earlier in the year of conspiracy and other charges stemming from an illegal campaign contribution to the Nixon re-election campaign from fugitive financier Robert Vesco.

Much of the prosecution case is expected to focus on tapes of conversations Nixon had in his office. Sirica ordered 175 sets of earphones installed in his courtroom where the trial will move after jury selection is completed. The earphones will enable every person in the courtroom, including Kenneth Parkinson, one-time lawyer for Nixon's re-election committee.

Sirica granted a prosecution motion Monday to hold a separate trial for former White House aide Gordon Strachan. However, Sirica refused to dismiss the charges against Strachan, who said the case against him was based on testimony he gave which would be illegal as an agreement it wouldn't be used against him.

Later in the day, Sirica rejected Mardian's request for a separate trial.

Charges against a seventh defendant, former White House special counsel Charles Colson, were dismissed after he pleaded guilty in a separate case.

Army Wants Calley in Prison Until Release Order Appealed

FORT LEAVENWORTH, Kan. (AP) — The U.S. Army asked a federal appeals court Monday to keep Lt. William Calley in prison pending an appeal of a judge's order that he be freed.

The plea was filed in 8th U.S. Circuit Court of Appeals. A defense reply to the army's motion is expected before the court rules.

U.S. District Judge Robert Ellis of Columbus, Ga., ordered Calley freed last Wednesday on the grounds that his constitutional rights were violated by the court-martial. But Chief Judge John Brown of the circuit court blocked the order until the army could file a legal motion opposing it.

Calley, 31, is in the disciplinary barracks at Fort Leavenworth. He was convicted in 1971 of murder and assault in connection with the deaths of 22 South Vietnamese civilians at the village of My Lai. He was sentenced to life imprisonment, but a military appeals court reduced the sentence to 10 years.

The 15-page motion filed Monday asked that Elliott's order be changed to give the army the option of retrying Calley in stead of simply freeing him, and that the order be suspended pending appeal.

The army also asked that if those motions are denied that it be granted a 15-day delay to study legal alternatives.

A clerk for the court said the temporary delay in Calley's release will extend at least through the defence reply to Monday's motion by the army.

Among other arguments the army said Judge Elliott revisited from legal procedure when he ordered Calley freed without giving the prosecution the option of a new trial.

Environmental Protection Legislation Will Be Revived

OTTAWA (CP) — The government plans to revive the proposed Environmental Contaminants Act, legislation which was described by former environment minister Jack Davis as the most advanced of its type in the world.

The speech from the throne read yesterday said the government will introduce legislation to give the public greater protection from industrial contamination.

The federal act, which died on the order paper last spring, would have given the federal government power to demand confidential information from private companies to stop the use of dangerous metals and chemicals, and to throw company officials in jail for up to two years and fine them as much as $10,000.

Environment Minister Jeanne Sauvé has said the new legislation will be similar to legislation proposed in the old bill.

Faced with stiff fines or prison sentences, manufacturers will be more cautious about exposing industrial workers, consumers, wildlife and the environment to questionable compounds, she said.

Dr. Jim Bryden, chief of the environmental contaminants control division of the environment department, said that under the old bill, manufacturers or distributors would be present only if they knowingly sold about 20 tonnes of a product. Monday, less than three hours after Ottawa destroyed three neighboring summer homes.

The latest, valued at about $13,800, brings to $60,000 the estimate of losses in the four fires.

The legislation is expected to require manufacturers and importers to conduct tests on suspected dangerous substances and report the results to the government. The government also would conduct its own tests.

Arson Seen

SARNIA, Ont. (CP) — Fire officials suspected burning out of control in a cottage on the Kettle Point Indian reserve about 20 miles northeast of here Monday, less than three hours after flames destroyed three neighboring summer homes.

The latest, valued at about $13,800, brings to $60,000 the estimate of losses in the four fires.

Prolonged Survival Seen for Betty Ford

WASHINGTON (AP) — First Lady Betty Ford's doctors say they remain optimistic for her "prolonged survival" despite discovery of some cancer cells in lymph-gland tissues removed during breast-cancer surgery.

And the president said he certainly shares that optimism — though he said the pathology report raises some questions. Realistics indicate that fading of cancer cells in lymph nodes for such cases usually diminishes chances for a long-term cure.

Following a visit to his wife Monday night, after the final pathology report was issued, the president described her condition as "much, much better."

Mrs. Ford's doctor, navy Capt. William Fenty who performed the surgery, and White House physician William Lukash, said the final pathology report, an examination of the tissues removed in the operation, was:

— "Microscopic involvement of cancer in only two out of 40 lymph nodes. There was no involvement in level 'three' nodes."

— Considering that only two lymph nodes were involved and that there is no clinical evidence of cancer spread in other areas," they said they "remain optimistic for a prolonged survival."

The doctors said that the next step in Mrs. Ford's treatment will be make special studies to decide whether x-ray, hormone or chemotherapy should be used to assure maximum treatment of this cancer.

Statistics show that women who have to cancer cells in their lymph nodes have a 50-per-cent chance of surviving five years after breast-cancer surgery and a 25-per-cent chance of surviving 10 years.

But by contrast, women with cancer cells found in one or more of their lymph nodes have only a 10-per-cent chance for five-year survival and a 15-per-cent chance of surviving for 10 years.

Bill Davis Is Home

TORONTO (CP) — Premier William Davis returned here Monday night after a 16-day visit to Italy.

The Ontario premier's flight was delayed by almost six hours because of a strike at the Venice departure point.

He was then scheduled to take an Alitalia flight from the city of Treviso, but instead selected a five hour bus ride to Milan because the flight from Treviso was overbooked.

Book on Africville Study of Injustice

By THE CANADIAN PRESS

The strife, the over-study and the political meanderings that present in urban renewal become all too visible in Africville: The Life and Death of a Canadian Black Community.

The social study of the relocation of a black community by authors Donald H. Clairmont and Dennis William Magill is a condemnation of social injustice.

Africville was a black enclave within the city of Halifax, inhabited by some 400 people, comprising 80 families, many of whom were descended from settlers who had moved there a century ago.

Its dwellings were located beside the city dump and railroad tracks cut across the unpaved dirt road leading into the area. Sewage, lighting and other public services were conspicuously absent. Many of its people had little education and an extremely low income and many were unemployed.

The authors report that despite its liabilities, many observed a strong sense of community and some residents expressed satisfaction with living in Africville.

But in the mid-1960s the city of Halifax decided to relocate the Africville inhabitants and "the storm by the dump" became the subject of studies, political encounters and anguish for its residents.

Clairmont and Magill tell the story of the community from its early history to the results of relocation.

Africville: The Life and Death of a Canadian Black Community; by Donald H. Clairmont and Dennis William Magill; 273 pages; $4.95; McClelland and Stewart.

Canadian Country Preserves and Wines, by Blanche Pownall Garrett, is a treasure house of recipes, old and new, and anecdotes about the fruits of Canadian fields and forests. The book ranges from apples to zucchini, and its large type and attractive makeup makes it a pleasure to read.

The author is one who lives in Peterborough, Ont., admits to an absorbing interest, pursued over more than 30 years, one being old recipes and the other the plants of Canada.

We learn that until about the middle of the 19th century tomatoes were considered poisonous, but because they were so colorful people hung them in their homes for decoration. And nine-day pickles really do take nine days to make. Take for another word for it. She tried shortening the preparation period and it just didn't work.

The recipes fit into five basic categories: beverages, soups, chutneys and relishes, preserves; jams and jellies and pickles. They include such old favorites as raspberry vinegar and mint jelly and new connections such as apricot orange jam — you use frozen orange juice and a blender.

The excellent bibliography lists such varied works as The Cook Not Mad; or Rational Cookery; Being a Collection of Original and Collected Receipts, published in 1831, and Home Secrets of Canadian Cookery, published in 1909.

Peggy's Cove Lighthouse Is Post Office

PEGGY'S COVE, N.S. (CP) — One of the most-photographed lighthouses in the world has become Canada's most picturesque post office.

For more than a century, this tiny fishing cove 29 miles south of Halifax has had its post office in a restaurant owned by the original postmaster, William Ovaitt, and kept on by his descendants until 1969 when it moved outside the family, was appointed.

This summer, postal authorities moved the post office from the restaurant to the lighthouse, a few yards away on a piece of bald rock, enabling tourists to mail their picture postcards of the landmark from the landmark itself.

Postal operations are conducted in the base of the lighthouse, which became fully automatic in 1967, during the summer months, returning to the original restaurant location at the end of the tourist season.

STUDY TRIBE HISTORY

ALBERNI, B.C. (CP) — A number of young Nanaimo Indians are staying in school this summer to study their tribe's history and culture with six local teachers. The program is sponsored by the Hospital cultural and education committee and the local school board and funded by the provincial education department.

URGES EXPANSION

VICTORIA (CP) — University education should be extended to all in British Columbia who may benefit, says a report commissioned by the provincial government. Reinstatement of Saturday morning classes, more evening and correspondence courses and experimental courses through newspapers, radio and television were recommended.

Pot Will Not Be Treated as Narcotic

OTTAWA (CP) — Health Minister Marc Lalonde says he plans to introduce legislation within the next month to change the country's cannabis laws.

Cannabis (marijuana and hashish) will be switched from the Narcotics Control Act in the federal Food and Drugs Act, Mr. Lalonde said Monday in an interview following the Throne Speech.

The drugs act now covers prescription drugs as well as controlled and restricted drugs like amphetamines and the LSD hallucinogens.

Mr. Lalonde said the legislation would set out in detail how cannabis would be controlled and what exact penalties would be imposed.

It is expected the proposed changes will mean cannabis possession will no longer be punishable by jail sentences although the offence will be subject to fines.

Penalties for trafficking, importing and cultivation are expected to remain stiff.

The legislative changes will do little, however, to alter the current practice in most courtrooms. Although first offenders in cannabis possession cases can be sent to jail, the courts usually impose only fines.

The Throne speech, which didn't mention the cannabis legislation, promised government action generally in the health field. It said emphasis would be placed "on the prevention of illness", which includes raising the level of physical fitness of Canadians.

Parliamentary Procedure Will Undergo Overhaul

OTTAWA (CP) — The major-ity Liberal government plans an urgent overhaul of the sometimes-cranky machinery of Parliament.

The speech from the throne read Monday by Chief Justice Bora Laskin of the Supreme Court of Canada, said the reforms will include changes in parliamentary rules, plus action:

—Redistribution of Commons seats;

—Broadcast of the proceedings of the House;

—Possible conflicts of interest of members of the Commons and the Senate.

Indians Harm Own Cause: PM

OTTAWA (CP) — Militant young Indians planned future action Tuesday in a warm, well-stocked federal building, while government leaders cribbed them for their part in Monday's violent clash on Parliament Hill, enough force to control the situation.

Prime Minister Trudeau and Indian Affairs Minister Jean Chrétien said the 200 Indian men, women and children who were driven off the Hill Monday by a club-swinging RCMP riot squad have damaged the Indian cause with their protest.

But Ken Dennis, a spokesman for the Indians who have travelled here from the West Coast to publicize housing and other social grievances, said the incident could have been avoided if Mr. Trudeau or other officials had come out to hear their demands.

"It was a pretty gutless thing for Trudeau to do," Mr. Dennis said. "It never would have become violent if he had come out, and he knows it."

The Indians spent the day nursing wounds and planning future action in a 100-year-old stone mill owned by the National Capital Commission on an island in the Ottawa River.

At least one Indian, Cindy Anderson, 20, of Regina, was seriously hurt in the clash and remained in the Ottawa General Hospital intensive care unit with severe head injuries.

Mr. Dennis said she was "just one of a number of sisters who had their skulls cracked" by the special blue-helmeted Mounties who broke up the demonstration.

In an interview Tuesday, RCMP Supt. Marcel Sauve said the tactical troops were called out two hours after the demonstration started and used only

PM Denies Canada Plans Activist Left-wing Role

OTTAWA (CP) — Prime Minister Pierre Trudeau Tuesday described as "pure fiction" a report that he is determined to take an activist left-wing approach to international affairs.

Canadian foreign policy will continue to emphasize programs that benefit people but there are "no really flashing new initiatives," Prime Minister Trudeau told a news conference.

He was commenting on a Canadian Press story last Thursday which said he is determined to give Canada a strong new activist role on the left wing of international affairs.

Mr. Trudeau said the story, based on an interview with Ivan Head, the prime minister's special foreign affairs adviser, erred in stating there will be any major changes in the approach to international affairs.

"I really can't lead Canadians to believe there will be a series of bold new initiatives," Mr. Trudeau said.

The story reported Mr. Head as saying that, with the help of Allan MacEachen as his new external affairs minister, Mr. Trudeau will seek a heightened Canada's world influence by taking a more moralistic approach to international problems.

The story also reported Mr. Head as saying that the prime minister is keenly interested in learning more about the activist left-wing foreign policy of Sweden when Swedish Prime Minister Olof Palme visits Canada later this month.

When a Montreal reporter said at the news conference that he had received similar statements from several persons in the prime minister's office, Mr. Trudeau replied: "I have to have a good talk with people in my office."

He said he wants his staff to maintain a "free profile" and let foreign policy statements emanate from Mr. MacEachen's office. He said Mr. Head told him he never drew a parallel between Swedish and Canadian foreign policy or used the terms "left wing" or "moral" to describe Canadian policy.

Eggs Facing Probe By MPs

OTTAWA (CP) — A Commons committee will be asked to investigate egg marketing, Prime Minister Trudeau announced Tuesday.

The controversy over operations of the Canadian Egg Marketing Agency was raised by Opposition Leader Robert Stanfield during the first question period of the new Parliament.

Agriculture Minister Eugene Whelan announced last week that an inquiry would be held. Its form would be disclosed later, he said then. His remarks followed reports that the agency refused an offer to sell 10 million eggs to Alaska because of a price dispute.

Twenty-eight million now are being destroyed because of rot.

Later, Mr. Whelan defended the actions of the egg marketing agency, saying it was "necessarily trying to do a good job."

"No producer in his right mind wants to see products destroyed; He's a creator of things."

He told James McGrath (PC—St. John's East), Conservative fiscal critic, that as soon will table a report made earlier this year.

The report is expected to contain harsh criticisms of the agency's operation. Mr. Whelan said he did not release it in the form he received it because the federal election intervened.

He had waited for an opportunity to present the report to Parliament.

Superprize Ends Work For Man, 72

KAMLOOPS, B.C. (CP) — Julia Nelson has won $400,000 and her 74-year-old husband probably has retirement behind his last putting green.

Julia, 66, winner of the Irish hospitals sweepstakes superprize draw, said in a telephone interview today her husband will be able to retire as assistant superintendent at a local golf club.

And the retired cook said she probably will buy a larger home.

Winning after buying sweepstakes tickets for 45 years was "such a shock. I really don't know what to do with the money."

"I always felt someone had to win and that it might be us but I never thought I'd win."

Torture Commonplace

KINGSTON, Ont. (CP) — Douglas Rowland, a former New Democratic Party MP for the Winnipeg area, said Friday that the systematic torture of political prisoners is becoming increasingly common. Mr. Rowland said Canada could use Skitzo's appeal for financial aid as a "pressure point" to improve the situation in South Vietnam.

Oil Sharing Pledged

OTTAWA (CP) — An international agreement calling for a cutback in domestic oil use in the event of a significant world shortage will be tabled in the Commons later this week, Energy Minister Donald Macdonald said Tuesday. Under the agreement, drawn up during meetings earlier this month in Brussels, major oil consuming countries would reduce domestic consumption to equally share key shortages.

No Decision Yet

OTTAWA (CP) — The government has yet to decide whether it will intervene to settle the lengthy West Coast grain handlers dispute, Government House Leader Mitchell Sharp said the government will introduce back-to-work legislation within the next week if the disputants cannot reach agreement.

Diesel Tax Evaded

HALIFAX (CP) — Paul E. Moreau, Quebec's deputy minister of revenue, said Tuesday home heating oil is being substituted illegally for diesel oil in trucks, depriving governments in North America of hundreds of millions of dollars in highway fuel taxes each year.

Cable TV Discussed

TORONTO (CP) — Provincial communications ministers ended two days of closed meetings Tuesday with a cautious announcement that they have reached a consensus on a number of positions which they plan to negotiate with the federal government. Gordon Rhodes, Ontario's minister of transportation and communications, said the talks included a discussion of the provincial positions on telecommunications and on cable television.

Budget Parley Unlikely

OTTAWA (CP) — Prime Minister Trudeau said in the Commons Tuesday there have been fruitful discussions with some provincial premiers concerning the next federal budget. But in reply to questions from Conservative Leader Robert Stanfield, Mr. Trudeau appeared to discount the idea of a full-scale premiers' conference prior to the budget, expected before Nov. 15.

Costs of Trip Asked

Indians Ask Ontario Block Prosecution

TORONTO (CP) — Indian protesters from across Canada, who rebelled in their attempts Monday to storm Parliament Hill, want the federal and provincial governments to share the costs of their trip back home.

And representatives of Ontario Indians involved in the protest asked the provincial government Tuesday to protect them from any prosecution that might result from the Ottawa melee in which soldiers and police drove them from the House of Commons grounds.

Those were among requests made by the Ontario group as it met with Ontario Solicitor-General George Kerr asking for an independent investigation of the "unnecessary violence" by police.

However, Mr. Kerr would not say whether the group would be protected from prosecution.

But he said in an interview later he would ask federal Solicitor-General Warren Allmand for a full report on the Ottawa demonstration.

Of their other requests, he said the province does not want to give Ottawa the impression it was interfering in its jurisdiction and that he would get an assessment from the provincial cabinet today.

The fellow reasoned that the governments should share the cost of telephone, food, accommodation and transportation costs of the Indians who would mean Vancouver for more than 100 of the 500 members of the Ontario group.

"The human rights of the Native People's Caravan participants were abrogated," said Peter Kelly, elected representative of the chiefs of Treaty 3 area in northwestern Ontario.

He said the Indian expenses now are the responsibility of government because the Indians were simply exercising their rights to "air their views and protests with the government."

Quebec Labor Blamed For Millions in Losses

QUEBEC (CP) — Two major employers in Quebec's vicinity — construction industry have lost "millions of dollars" because of labor problems, an inquiry was told Tuesday.

The statements, from Quebec Cartier Mining Co. and Aluminum Co. of Canada Ltd. (Alcan), were made to a three-day inquiry into labor unrest in construction union freedoms which adjourned hearings until Oct. 15 in Montreal.

Quebec Cartier Mining Co. said extra costs of more than $100 million at the Mont Wright iron ore project in northeastern Quebec are "directly or indirectly" attributed to problems with the Quebec Federation of Labor.

Jean Chauververt, secretary-treasurer of the company, said the estimated cost of the project has doubled to $200 million because of labor problems.

Alcan said it loses "hundreds of thousands of dollars a year" because of the QFL's "illegal acts."

"There is a reign of physical and economic terror established in a systematic fashion by the unions," Alcan said.

Bargain Boutique Profits Hospital

TYNDON — The Women's Hospital Auxiliary, this month celebrating its 25th anniversary, raises funds for Prince Edward County Memorial Hospital through a bargain boutique.

The second Time Around Shop, opened in July, 1973, recorded a profit of $10,000. In its first year of operation, sales last month totalled $2,288.

Operated by WHA volunteers the thrift shop each, the Front Hill features a wide selection of clothing for men, women and children. Jewellery and bric-a-brac.

Clothing, donated by area residents, is bargain priced to sell. Community response to the project has been so enthusiastic that volunteers are hard-pressed to handle the volume of contributions.

To combat the problems of storage space, contributors are asked to bring privately owned clothes items.

Funds raised by the second Time Around Shop are used to purchase equipment for PECMH hospital.

Next year the shop hopes to raise from $13,00 to $14,00 through the sale of merchandise.

Church-goers Hampered By Parking Changes

Sunday church goers at St. Andrews Presbyterian Church in Belleville will find it a little more difficult to find parking space as a result of new parking restrictions for Victoria Ave., recommended this week by the city traffic committee.

Under the present bylaw, Sunday parking was permitted on the south side of Victoria Ave., between Church and John streets, but as a result of the recent reconstruction in four lanes in this area there will be no parking at any time.

East of John St., parking will not be permitted on the south side of Victoria for a distance of 122 feet east of the intersection.

The present no parking edict for the north side of Victoria will be continued.

City Engineer Jon Angelo told the committee the recommended change is needed so that eastbound traffic on the new four lane section could be safely channelled into the two lane roadway east of John St.

Labor To Bug Ma Bell

TRENTON — Quinte area workers will be asked to cover bales on Bell Canada telephone bills with transparent tape as a protest against the latest increase in rates by the utility. Quinte District Labor Council members decided here Tuesday.

Stamps on envelopes used to return the computer punch cards should also no longer be affixed according to the QDLC resolution.

Council president Douglas Sword said the move is being made to protest Bell Canada latest rate increase and the subsequent recent announcement the utility has made a large profit.

"I hate to disobey something that is written down by someone as big as Bell telephone," said Mr. Sword, indicating his displeasure with computerized bills that read "Please do not fold or staple."

Transparent tape covering punch holes would force Bell to handle the bills by hand, he said.

Lack of stamps would force the utility into accepting bill envelops for fear that if they were returned to the sender they would not be sent again, he said.

Buses Going Bust

Inflation appears to have an unpleasant side-effect, other than that of making people poor.

The shrinking dollar seems to bring out the greed in some of us.

A "con" artist has been thriving in the Windsor area on the phenomenon.

He will go into a pub and wait until he hears the inevitable nearby conversation about the high cost of living.

Interjecting, he informs his listener he has access to cases of government "surplus" butter that he has to get rid of for 60 cents a pound.

Dozens of takers have gone to police complaining about the price they paid for colored lard.

High prices have also bred a generation of complainers. When prices of any kind go up, the public begins to scrutinize their shopping lists with a vengeance.

One reaction is to vent one's spleen on some poor unsuspecting store clerk.

But a more common one is to start protesting ALL prices, not just the more quickly escalating ones. Thus we run across the pack-a-day smokers (with that habit closing in on the $1-a-day plateau) harping about ten-cent parking meters.

And, still able to send a letter anywhere in the world for the princely sum of eight cents, the mail service retains many vocal fiscal critics.

All of which brings us to the Belleville Transit Commission.

This city's public bus system is similar to that in most communities. That is to say, it provides excellent service and loses money hand over fist.

Details of financing goes hand-in-hand with public transit in smaller cities. Belleville's transit commission is budgeting to lose $174,000 in 1974, based on last year's 60-cent-a-ride loss and the prospect of upcoming wage negotiations with drivers and mechanics.

Commission chairperson Marylea Burtt would like to see an increase in the 25-cent adult fares, now frozen by provincial law. The province reserves that right because it picks up 50 per cent of the transit tab.

But Mrs. Burtt is getting concerned about the city's share, which she anticipates will be annually running in the quarter-million dollar neighborhood within five years.

A priority for the incoming city council should be petitioning of Queen's Park for relaxation of the fare freeze. That undoubtedly would bring howls of indignation from a public already grumbly from inflation.

A quarter to take you from one side of the city to the other by ticket and transfer is a pretty good buy in 1974, but the slightest increase would still likely be met with screams of protest.

Higher fares or some changes on the two of five city runs Mrs. Burtt says are habitually money-losers are the alternatives.

Whichever route is taken, the bus buck stops at city hall.

Real Volunteers

It is one thing for 36 men to volunteer their services for the betterment of their community.

That's what Thurlow Township firefighters do.

But more than half of them show they are willing to serve above and beyond the call of duty.

The majority of the brigade is attending a four-week Red Cross course in first aid training.

In addition, City Ambulance instructors are donating their time in teaching emergency techniques to the firemen.

Who says people don't do something for nothing anymore?

Speeders Beware

Belleville police will be better able to "ambush" city speeders with a new radar unit that can be set up 100 feet from their cruisers.

Sneaky?

Not if it reduces the chances of one more traffic fatality on city streets.

Politicians Spend About 40 Cents Of Every Dollar

By RICHARD JACKSON

OTTAWA — So the government is promising to try to mend its wasteful ways?

You have it on the word of both Prime Minister Trudeau and Finance Minister Turner in particular, binding the whole cabinet in general, that the brakes are going on federal spending.

Gently, perhaps, but still on.

After six years of overspending, with the budget just edging up to an annual $10 billion when Trudeau first took over and now currently reaching for $11 billion — an increase only a shade short of 100 per cent — none care now is going to be taken with the taxpayer's dollar, which the government itself has done so much to depreciate.

Something finally seems to have got to what former Conservative Prime Minister Diefenbaker still calls "the same old tune" — unchanged and unchanging because of the political touchstone of Liberal indestructibility.

That something could be their fear of hyper-inflation — "you know," says former Conservative House Leader Gerald Ottawa, "everyone is scared."

But if not fear, then at least worry is getting to the government.

Worry to the point that Industry Trade and Commerce Minister Gillespie, among others in the cabinet, has been making the economic scene with diagnoses of the government's responsibility for inflation.

It has not been overspending, he insists.

It is not overtaxing, he argues.

It has not been overgabbing for years, over-promising on the part of the national income, he contends.

And it cannot be blamed for inflation, he concludes.

What is more, Gregory Gillespie and his cabinet colleagues in the rest of the Canadian Council of Canada says they have been doing all those things.

Hence Gillespie's denial of the charges.

The Economic Council is an arm or agency of the federal government. It has an executive of, five, chairmen and many man and directors. It has an administrative staff backing up some 60 full-time, part-time economic researchers.

So what have they been saying to get under Gillespie's skin?

Well, in the context of everything, the Council claims that in the last six years — the time the Liberals have been in power — the take from the individual have been increasing at the rate of 10 per cent a year.

And that, warns the Council, is a rate of increase twice that of assessed individual income.

It has now got to the point where 40 cents out of every dollar — of income it takes in — is not by the individual who earns it, but by the politicians — the last most of all — who have taken on the responsibility of spending it for the people and rely on him.

The main reasons for this greedier government grab have been the progressive rate of the tax structure. It has produced a revenue windfall from former Finance Ministers doing it honest, supposed "reform" of the system, and inflation.

One feeds the other, says the Economic Council, putting it this way:

"As wages and salaries increase in line with inflation, there is an upward movement in the income structure so that higher rates of tax are levied across the board, and a thinner and thinner fraction of income is exempted from tax."

So the government's share of inflation-increased income is ever greater than the individual's.

This is government profiteering from the inflation the government itself has been doing so much to fire up.

Who says so?

The same Economic Council, in issuing that document, implicitly increasing tax collections from individuals further fuel inflation is working "in order to maintain their after-tax income, try to compensate for its increases as well as price increases by making higher wage and salary demands."

Hockey Juniors Blackmailed

Kitchener-Waterloo Record

It is difficult to find a word more suitable than blackmail for the pressure tactics being used on junior hockey players to get them to promise money to the leagues in order to make their play. In a revised contract form being put before the players for their signature, they sign before the 1974-75 season officially begins, they will agree not to play any unknown amounts of money they have not been told of.

What the player gets for signing the contract is the privilege of playing a 70-game schedule for $60 a week. What the club gets is the reputation that their contract form is that the player, if he gets on a professional hockey, give 30 per cent of his income for three years to the club with which he played junior before turning professional.

It's a pig-in-a-poke deal. The young player cannot know how much he is signing away, if he does turn pro, and if he does sign he will owe $12,000 to the junior club that had him under its wing for a year. If he is unusually talented, and commands a salary of $100,000 a year (as has happened with a few) the junior club can waive a signed contract for a fee of $20 000 cream off the top of his income.

The pressure on the 18-or 19-year-old boy to sign is strong. He wants to play hockey.

It has now come to the point where 40 cents out of every dollar — of income it takes in — is not by the individual who earns it, but by the politicians — the last most of all — who have taken on the responsibility of spending it for the people and rely on him.

The main reasons for this greedier government grab have been the progressive rate of the tax structure. It has produced a revenue windfall from former Finance Ministers doing it honest, supposed "reform" of the system, and inflation.

Mayor Looks for Seat

Conservatives Land Big Fish Benoit

By DON O'HEARN
Queen's Park Bureau
Thomson News Service

TORONTO — The PCs have landed their big fish.

Immediately after Bert Lawrence announced he was retiring Mayor Pierre Benoit of Ottawa confirmed that he would be looking for the nomination in the vacant riding, Carleton East.

Which means the Conservatives have made a big gain but the Liberals have achieved an even bigger loss.

It is almost taken for granted that the young Ottawa mayor will win the seat.

Fluently bilingual, handsome and able, he is both widely respected and popular in Ottawa.

What's more Carleton East has a substantial French-Canadian vote to which he will appeal.

If he should lose the seat it would be a very black black eye to the Davis administration. For only the government's record could drag him down.

But this is a majority that nobody really is in any way expecting.

Meanwhile there should be much sorrow in the Liberal ranks.

For it has been assumed all along that Mrs. Lewis was one of theirs. What's more he was one they needed to bolster their image and their front-bench strength.

Even the Conservatives accepted the assumption that Benoit was a Liberal.

But they did something about it.

They set out to woo the Ottawa mayor, and they succeeded.

Last only knows what promises they made (Benoit himself says he hasn't been promised a cabinet post, but that can be taken with tongue-in-cheek).

What is certain is they got him. And so should have still another able man in the cabinet before they really don't need.

They haven't been able to put to work the ability they have now.

The Benoit switch illustrates just how callous our politics are today and how little party loyalties really mean any more.

In the present cabinet there is Transport Minister John Rhodes, who touched both Liberal and NDP leaders before becoming a Conservative (and he was promised a cabinet job).

It also illustrates the advantage of being the party in power.

For the leader of a government can make a definite promise of a job. While all an opposition party leader can do is say, I'll take you in, if as and when.

Hit by Inflation, Population Explosion

Single-family Home Thing of Past?

By VINCENT EGAN
Business and Consumer Affairs Analyst
Thomson News Service

The single-family house could become a victim of inflation and the population explosion, according to some economists and academics.

If it does become a thing of the past, it will mark a significant change in North America's philosophy. In most of the crowded cities of Europe, single-family homes have always been a rarity.

The generalities of Canadians and Americans, however, a single-family house with room, space and its other amenities has been the norm—or at least the ideal.

But the financial cost of attaining that ideal has risen sharply in recent years, as illustrated below in figures compiled by Royal Trust Co.

And while house prices have been skyrocketing in double-digit percentages each year, interest rates on mortgages have soared in unprecedented height to keep ahead of the inflation rate.

A major factor in the big price increase is the scarcity of serviced land in most Canadian cities. This has pushed the land component in the cost of a typical home to almost 50 per cent from about 20 per cent a decade ago.

(But land is still not so scarce as to endanger significant amounts of farm land. A past president of the Appraisal Institute of Canada has calculated that all living Canadians could be accommodated in single-family homes in an area equivalent to Prince Edward Island).

Another is the morass of federal, provincial and municipal regulations, all designed to restrict and delay house-building. No agency has the positive task of expediting residential construction.

Real-estate men contend that the supply of houses could keep abreast of demand only if governments were to ease their restrictions dramatically, and provide worthwhile tax incentives to mortgage lenders and mortgage borrowers.

Otherwise, they say, the trend toward alternate types of accommodation—condominiums, residential co-operatives, mobile-home parks and the like—will accelerate under the pressure of housing demands.

One major mortgage lender, Royal Trust Co., has surveyed average prices in cities across Canada as of Aug. 1 on ten typical houses, both five to eight years old and with full basements.

House 1 is a basic detached brick bungalow with three bedrooms and a one-car attached garage. House 2 is a two-storey brick home with four bedrooms, extra bathroom, and two-car attached garage.

Highest prices were in North Central Toronto, where House 1 averaged $70,000 and House 2, $120,000. Lowest were in Sherbrooke, Que., and Trois Rivieres, both at $28,000 and $50,000 respectively.

Here are averages for some other cities:

	House 1	House 2
Oshawa	$50,000	$70,000
Barrie	48,000	78,000
Sarnia	47,000	78,000
Guelph	46,000	72,000
St. John's	44,000	76,000
Kelowna	43,000	75,000
Thunder Bay	42,000	72,000
Sudbury	42,000	72,000
Corner Brook	42,000	77,000
Niagara Falls	41,000	61,000
Peterborough	40,000	70,000
Belleville	38,000	58,000
Cornwall	36,000	52,000
Charlottetown	33,000	65,000

Wall Poses City Problem

Peterborough Examiner

To a bystander, walls may hold the simple creations. They just stand around in silence, rarely causing problems for their hosts. If they need repairs, the owner gets out his pocket brush and paint trowel and fixes them. Simple enough.

Not in Peterborough, apparently, where a mere wall has put our civic officials through the mill of legal and administrative gymnastics.

The wall in question is an eyesore on the east side of the city-owned Percival building in which the Town Museum is housed. University bookstore used to be. When the structure was torn down, in early spring, demolition left an ugly patchwork of paint and plaster.

Naturally, city officials deplored the mess and sought a quick solution. They found an answer — stucco over the blight — but, alas, the road to solution was long and hard.

The city owns only half the wall. The other half belongs to Gordon and Lilico law firm. Obviously, the city couldn't do anything to the wall without first negotiating with the co-owners.

of Belleville city council and Mayor Robin Jeffrey, who issued a statement at the council meeting September 23, 1974 that the city of Belleville will no longer tolerate the dumping of waste on any lands that is not an approved waste disposal site, and will prosecute anyone who does not desist from dumping waste in Belleville.

The deliberate dumping of garbage, refrigerator, chesterfield, bath tub, refrigerator, charcoal stove, mattress and springs, chairs, tires, electric kettle, plastic containers, insulation, stove pipe, tin, scrap metal cans, etc., on the east side of South Farley Avenue, just north of the 100 Block by City Limits, therefore if anyone continues the dumping of waste in Belleville, they do so in the full knowledge they are liable to prosecution by the City of Belleville.

Now is the time that citizens must decide for themselves, if they are prepared to act as responsible guardians of the environment and are willing to help the Corporation of Belleville city council eliminate this problem of dumping waste on private and public lands.

I will report any dumping that I see or any that I have knowledge of to the Corporation. This is my commitment to the protection of the environment.

What is yours?

Refuse or waste Materials, C.J.B.Q. Radio has broadcast Mayor Robin Jeffrey's statement concerning waste disposal problems in Belleville. There are signs located in different areas of the city which read "No Dumping - Violators Subject to $100 Fine, by City - By-Laws. Therefore if anyone continues the dumping of waste in Belleville, they do so in the full knowledge they are liable to prosecution by the City of Belleville.

I will report any dumping that I see or any that I have knowledge of to the Corporation. This is my commitment to the protection of the environment.

UCS Critic Feels Campaign 'Insult'

Editor,
The Intelligencer:

The United Community Services has long been a thorn in my conscience. It is no wonder we have President Virginia O'Rourke telling us that funds have been dished out in accordance with the needs of programs provided, but based against agencies specific requested.

This, of course is a very cozy arrangement indeed. All one has to be done for an agency, such as the Y.M.C.A. to register, as they frequently have done in the past, that a need exists, and that the need becomes a necessity.

It is time this nonsense was stopped once-and for all. With a $50,000 wage bill the Y.M.C.A. can no longer pretend to be a "volunteer agency." That's utter nonsense. So, without further ado they should be removed from the United Way Appeal.

The UCS, with the most blatant conflict of interest imaginable, should do likewise. They are an affiliate agency and yet they have the dispensation to others of funds. And, oh yes, the bill for this list, one way or another amounts to $30,000 per year.

Add this to the handouts from city council by way of grants and tax concessions, and the whole thing reeks of patronage.

What all this is about in reality is the necessity to find monies required to pay outrageous salaries of the executive heads in these organizations. In the days of inflation, the continued subsidizing of this extravagance is an insult to the taxpayers of a whole.

Questions and Answers On Highway Travel

Ontario Motor League
Eastern Ontario Club

The way a car is driven on the life span of its shock can have a significant impact shockers.

Under normal driving conditions, shock absorbers can last up to 50,00 miles, but driving over rough and hilly roads can greatly reduce this figure. However shocks can last as long as 70,000 miles if a car is driven at modest speeds and only on paved roads.

Shock absorbers not only provide a comfortable ride, they help maintain a car's stability, a major factor in vehicle control. While CAA recommends that motorists have shocks checked at least twice a year, the organization notes that they can run a simple check themselves by bouncing up on the bumper and jumping off. If shocks are normal, the car will bob up and stop in no more than one extra motion. However, if the car bobs up and down several times, new shocks should be installed.

QUESTION : We plan to be travelling in New Hampshire this month. a what areas is the Fall color likely to be at its best?

ANSWER: Each year since 1935, just before and during the season for foliage color, New Hampshire has issued special bulletins to report the progress of the color spectacle. There are two reports each week for four weeks. A Monday report is printed on yellow postcards and mailed to people who request it. The Thursday report is sent by wire to many TV and radio news and weather commentators, who pass the word along as a public service. There are special reports after storms if the situation warrants.

During the color season, foliage color information is available at Hooked and most New England highway rest area information centres.

If you would like to receive the postcard foliage bulletins free, write to: Foliage Ed., N.H. Office of Vacation Travel, P. O. Box 856, Concord, N.H. 03301.

Some experienced fall tourists prefer the early part of the color season, when spots of brilliance contrast with mainly green. Others prefer the latter part of the season, when scores of the leaves have fallen and the thinning foliage opens up new vistas, especially in the mountain areas. Some like it all and make two weekend trips or, better yet, stay for two weeks.

The prevailing weather has an effect on the color season. Cool weather in September with a lot of overcast may bring brilliance a few days early. Continued warm summery days may delay it.

From about September 25 through the first week of October is usually average for the peak of color in the far northern part of the state.

HOW TO MAINTAIN QUALITY IN FROZEN MEATS

Whether you store large quantities of frozen meat or just slip an occasional roast or steak into the freezer section of your refrigerator, the freezing method governs quality with equal ease.

Freezing should be as rapid as possible, so it is often done at the store. Since refrigerator freezer temperatures are not as low as commercial ones, your meat should be put in the back corners of your refrigerator freezer, where it is colder than in any other place, or in efficient full-sized freezer chests you can buy for home operation at a time.

Keep frozen meat at zero degrees Fahrenheit or below. For short periods, here it is in Super-Value form, as it comes from Rendale Food Mart counters. For long storage, you must store wrapping in such a manner as to exclude air.

Although properly stored frozen meats are safe for considerably longer periods, for prime quality and satisfaction they should be rotated in your freezer, and used within one or two months.

Drunken Grandma too Rough

By ANN LANDERS

Dear Ann Landers: My wife and I have a year-old son. We got in long hours and live quite a distance from our families. We try to spend two hours every weekend with my folks. The reason we don't spend more time with them is because we never know what shape my mother will be in.

Yesterday she had been drinking (as usual) and by the time we arrived dear ol' mom was loaded out of her mind. She bounced our son in the air and bit his head on the descent. When she caught him she was staggering and nearly fell on her face, taking the boy with her. My wife was furious. We didn't stay long after that.

My mother is crude and, of course, not the sort of person we want our children to be exposed to. Yet she is their grandmother. What can we do?—Concerned

Dear Con: The old doll is probably a boozer from way back, but I'll bet she has a lot of love to give. I hope you won't deprive her of the pleasure of giving it or deny your children the joy of receiving it. Just keep a close eye on grandma and make it plain that there will be no more roughhousing. If she refuses to co-operate make the visits less frequent and stay close by to police the action.

Dear Ann Landers: I was offended by your reply to Peggy in Pittsburgh. You said: "I hope that if you become ill you will call a doctor, not your gynecologist."

If by "druggist" you meant the kid behind the soda fountain, I have no quarrel with your analogy. On the other hand, if you were referring to a pharmacist, I resent your comparing him to a grocer.

A grocer is a man who sells merchandise. No special education is required. A pharmacist is a highly-trained professional who has had five years of college, one year of internship and must pass two state board examinations. His grouping, if there is to be one, belongs with other members of the medical profession.—Married To A Pharmacist

Dear Married: Sorry if I offended you and other members of your profession, but the kid-vice stands.

I am well aware of the difference between the kid behind the soda fountain and the person who is licensed to prepare prescriptions. The kid can be a high-school dropout, but the pharmacist must have a high school diploma, one year of college and four years of college-level pharmacy school. The fact remains, however, that a pharmacist is not trained to diagnose or treat sick people, and to not an appropriate substitute for a physician.

Dear Ann Landers: You really blew it when you answered Nature Lover's question: "Do animals see color?"

Shame on you—failing for that old wives' tale and confusing "animals" with "mammals." Many animals do see color in addition to monkeys and apes, which you named.

For example: some lizards, snakes, turtles and fish. Insects don't see all the colors, but they see some colors humans don't see, such as ultraviolet.—A.C. Grad Student in Zoology, U. Of Ill.

Dear A.C.: My consultant was a zoology major at your school. Next time I'll call a graduate student. (P.S. How do we know what animals see? Care to answer this one?)

Thailand's Durian: Precious, Pungent

NONTHABURI, Thailand (AP) — Each year before the big rains a peculiar aroma haunts the byways and market places of Thailand and people flock to buy durian, the world's most precious and pungent fruit.

It's nothing at this time of year for a working man to plunk down a steaming cupful of one big green chicken's egg with a red like a dinosaur and a smell like the Great Dismal Swamp.

The fragrance of durian allows no indifference: you love it or you leave the room.

The rich brimstone musk, whispering of depravity and mouth-fed eggs, is banned from hotels and airplanes, has broken up marriages and is a good way to get an elevator to yourself at rush hour.

But men fight and steal and travel miles for this polecat of the orchard. Durian is to fruit what Limburger is to cheese. Open-minded, the addict sinks into lush and expensive gluttony.

A single prime durian can fetch up to $50 in Bangkok and confer status on its owner with the sweet stench of success.

The bearing trees line the narrow roads of this suburban province, noses alert for a basketful. For three months a year, Nonthaburi is stinking rich.

Here bashed wire, sharp bamboo stakes and hedges of red balsa trees give durian orchards that seem their owners an average $25 a tree.

"We keep a guard out all night but the thieves come in trucks and we lose some anyway," said farmer Phon Simpa, whose crop this year should bring in $15,000—about 75 times the national average income.

"We eat them every day ourselves, and those we can't sell we give to friends before they go bad," he said. "The money isn't as important as the enjoyment."

In the countryside a small durian sells for as little as $1. At the little roadside stands where the proprietor will save you the incongruity of splitting the spiky husk and serves you a cracked cup of Jasmine water to wash down your investment.

The first look inside a durian is rather like opening a coconut and finding a pancreas. But those who can survive the smell and the appearance learn first-hand the flavor that western writers for centuries have found their metaphors trying to describe.

Since words cannot hope to capture that essence, here is a standard—for do-it-yourself durian:

3 bananas
2 egg yolks
1 tablespoon sulphur
3 tablespoons Limburger cheese
1 clove garlic, mashed
¼ lb. cream cheese for body
1 shoehorn for texture

Blend ingredients into a custard, mold around a horse chestnut and serve with appreciation.

Abortion Law to Be Reviewed

TORONTO (CP) — The federal government has no intention of making abortions easier to get in Canada, Justice Minister Otto Lang said in an interview Wednesday.

In fact, he said, if a current study shows hospitals are approving applications too freely then the law may be changed to make them liable to prosecution for "failure to exercise responsibility."

Mr. Lang was here to attend the annual meeting of the Canadian Bar Association.

Replying to critics of Ottawa's abortion policy, Mr. Lang said:

"The government decided in 1969 to take what it considered a middle position which regarded the rights of the unborn child as significant and important. . . .

"The government also recognized there was "a sufficiently significant body of reasonable opinion which felt that if the life or health of the mother was in danger there ought not to be any criminal sanction for medical actions performed to save that health or life, and, accordingly, we would make that the law."

The 1969 amendments to the Criminal Code exempted from prosecution doctors who performed abortions that had been approved by a hospital therapeutic abortion committee.

Successful Living

Marriage by Mail

Dear Doris: I am 23 and presently engaged to a Scottish gentleman. We have been corresponding through a pen pal club for three years.

We know a great deal about each other's interests and I truly feel that I love him. My family (except my daughter) think I'm daft to go over there and marry someone I've never seen. Yet, they have always accepted my jealously and also play a big part in their lives — not mine!

My fiancé is not happy, as my recent husband had a terrible temper and made his miserable for him and my three children. I finally divorced him. I have been very lonely.

My fiancé and I truly believe we are facing reality and I have held nothing back from him, nor he from me. His mother is just as excited that I've accepted and is practically turning the house inside out.

Now, Miss Clark, do you think I'm—

Daft?

Dear Daft: No, I don't. Correspondence is a good way to get a friendship going, and doubtless you two know a good deal about each other. However, a relationship built on correspondence alone cannot but many hazards.

Don't accept this marriage because you are so anxious to get away from the bickering of relatives. I would strongly urge that you have a period of some months perhaps visiting this man in his home town, but staying in a nearby hotel or boarding house, while you really get acquainted personally. To marry in haste and repent at leisure can happen at the half century mark, as well as when you are in your teens!

Old-Fashioned Foods: Funny Names, Fine Taste

If you liked last week's peanut butter recipes with their picturesque names, you'll love this week's group of recipes for savouries.

Bubble and Squeak

Gristly sliced cold beef (cooked) two lbs. cabbage butter
salt
pepper

Cook cabbage in usual manner, then drain fairly fine. Brown meat in skillet in butter and remove from pan. Put cabbage in skillet, salt and pepper to taste. Stir till hot. Remove to warm plate and top with meat.

Solomon Gundy

Bubble and Squeak is headed for the annals the cabbage patch according to one source, but Solomon Gundy's destination is not as far as we know. Here's a Maritimes specialty.

Thoroughly clean and skin two small herrings. Cut in squares. Soak in cold water five hours. Drain. Heat vinegar to a boil and remove from heat. Stir in a tbsp. of sugar and pepper. Cool and pour over herring, adding one sliced onion. Let stand several hours then serve by serving with raw onion on toast, or crackers.

Creamed Flank Haddie

What's a flank haddie? It's a cured haddock, of course. The name Finnan is a contraction of Findon, a Scottish town famous for its cured haddock.

1½ lbs. flank haddie
two tbsps. butter
one tbsp. flour
one cup light cream
dash pepper

Cut flank haddie in 1-inch cubes and cover with boiling water. Let stand 10 minutes. Drain well. Heat butter in saucepan stir in flour until smooth. Then add cream slowly. Season and cook until thick and smooth. Add fish and heat through. Do not cook.

Country Captain

This famous Indian (East) dish is a classic in the southern United States. Supposedly it came to this continent with a mysterious "captain" of the ancient ride who prized his curry.

Cut up 2½ lb. frying chicken into serving pieces and dredge in flour seasoned with salt and pepper. Brown the chicken in four tbsps. hot butter. Set chicken aside and brown one small sliced onion, one green pepper chopped fine, one clove garlic, a pinch of garlic and a teaspoon of curry powder along with a good pinch of dried thyme. Cook until onions, then add one lb. can of stewed tomatoes. Put chicken back and cook slowly 30 minutes. Just before serving, stir in three tbsps. of dried currant. Serve with blanched toasted almonds and chutney.

Western Sandwich

The "western sandwich" doesn't quite fit into our foods in with funny names category except by virtue of its history. The "Western" was invented by pioneers travelling west; quite often their eggs became a little runnyvery on the long hot trails. To make use of both and disguise the flavor they mixed them with onions and any other spices available. Four ounces lean, finely chopped ham, one onion, chopped fine one medium onion, chopped fine salt
pepper
4 eggs
Heat ham, toss in green pepper and onion and cook until vegetables are almost tender. Beat eggs with salt and pepper, pour over mixture in skillet. Turn and brown on other side.

Red Flannel Hash

The origin of this unusual hash are lost but it's known it was popular with the famous "Green Mountain Boys" of Vermont.

three medium beets
one medium potato
one lb. ground beef
one medium onion chopped one tbsp. cream
salt
butter

Cook potatoes and beets. Chop these vegetables and mix with beef. Add salt and pepper. Melt butter in a skillet and add chopped onion. Cook until limp. Stir in meat-vegetable mixture and cook over low heat for 15 minutes. Lift to a baking dish. Melt more butter and combine with cream. Spoon over meat and bake three inches from pre-heated broiler for five minutes. Sprinkle with parsley. Serves 4.

Succotash

This one's a misnomer, too, for an Indian word, misickquatash. It's a combination of corn and beans, hiddy limn beans, then kidney beans.

1¼ cups lima beans, cooked
1½ cups corn, cooked, sliced

Judge Says Firm Has No Religion

TORONTO (CP) — A Jewish contractor, seeking $45,000 from two firms through a mechanics' lien, lost his court action in Brockville last week because he refused to continue court action on the Two Days Kippur holiday.

In an oral judgment made public here Tuesday, Judge William Parker said Monday he said the refusal of contractor Petr Kersen to proceed with the trial on the Jewish holiday was "instrument to contempt."

Judge Dubrule, sitting as an officer of the Ontario Supreme Court, ordered the dismissal after three days of testimony, mostly by Mr. Kersen as president of Smoli and Kersen Ltd. of St. Therese, Que.

The judge also ordered Mr. Kersen to pay $7,000 in costs to the defendants, Steel Co. of Canada Ltd., and Dodge Construction Co. Ltd.

Judge Dubrule said the plaintiff, Smoli and Kersen Ltd., "is a corporation—it has no religion."

Mr. Kersen said he has not decided whether he will appeal the judgment.

Good Samaritan Given Damages

OTTAWA (CP) — The Supreme Court of Canada has decided that a good samaritan who rushed for help for victims of a traffic accident is entitled to damages for injuries she suffered in the process.

In a narrow 5-to-4 decision the full court ruled that the person whose negligence caused a 1970 accident is fully responsible for the injuries suffered by the rescuer, despite the fact she was hurt in a different accident.

The court allowed the appeal of Bonnie Jo-Anne Cstruthers and her husband Donald Wayne Cruthers of Herbert, Sask., against lower court decision that denied damages.

Work Possible

STRATFORD, Ont. (CP) — D. J. Allen, an Ontario ministry of education spokesman, told the Perth County board of education Tuesday that mentally retarded children may be able to leave school to participate in a work program.

Mr. Allen, a supervisory services officer for the ministry, told the board if the proposed education act 1974 is passed, "it would be an avenue through which we could meet the needs and interests of 14-and 15-year-olds who are dissatisfied with school.

Still Strike

BRAMPTON (CP) — The strike by 1,200 workers at the American Motors (Canada) Ltd. here will continue until local issues are settled, despite the reaching of a tentative agreement between the United Auto Workers (UAW) and the United States parent firm, a union spokesman said Tuesday.

Deny Guilt

HAMILTON (CP) — A Hamilton couple pleaded not guilty Tuesday in county court to a charge of exporting or attempting to export about $600,000 in Canadian coins to the United States.

The trial of Leslie James Hamilton and Lillian Patricia Hamilton, being heard before Judge Robin Shea, is expected to extend well into next week.

Defrauded

TORONTO (CP) — A 45-year-old woman lost $500 when she tried to show her "good faith" to two women who promised to share $40,000 with her.

Marie Decosse of Toronto told police she was approached by the women in a store at a shopping centre. They claimed to have found $40,000 in the centre's parking lot and asked her what they should do with the money.

The women said they would share the money if Mrs. Decosse gave them $500 as a sign of good faith. They drove to her bank where she withdrew the money and gave it to them.

Firm Upheld

OTTAWA (CP) — The Supreme Court of Canada has ruled in favor of management in a case in which a company reduced the work-week for all employees rather than lay-off some workers during a business slowdown.

The unanimous decision was rendered Tuesday on a 1970 case involving Air-Care Ltd. of Montreal and Local 910, United Steelworkers of America.

U.S. Border Guard Harasses Canadian

OTTAWA (CP) — The external affairs department is investigating a complaint by a Saskatchewan farmer that he was harassed on Canadian soil by a U.S. border guard last weekend.

The incident came to light in the Commons Tuesday when Lee Benjamin (NDP—Regina Lake Centre) asked External Affairs Minister Allan MacEachen should the complaint.

"I have asked that the matter be investigated and the information be sought from the United States authorities," the minister replied.

Later in an interview, Mr. Benjamin said farmer Ed Gross of Glen Ewin, Sask., had flown in his own aircraft in the grass airstrip at Estevan, a border-crossing point. Mr. Gross, accompanied by his neighbor, was en route to an air show at Minot, N.D., and had landed to obtain permission to cross the border and to file the required flight plan.

The strip has two runways, one north-south, the other east-west. The north-south runway is entirely in Canada while a small strip of the east-west runway's southern side is on American soil.

Mr. Benjamin said Mr. Gross claims he did not at any time touch the U.S. border when landing at Estevan.

"There was no attempt on his part to fly over the U.S. border without filing a flight plan and getting permission."

Mr. Gross told him the aircraft had landed and was taxiing toward the Canadian customs building when it was overtaken by a car driven by the American border patrol guard. Mr. Gross says the guard shouted "who gave you permission to land on this strip?" The pilot said this incident apparently occurred about 600 feet inside Canadian territory.

The guard, described as "belligerent and rude," then ordered Mr. Gross, father of Saskatchewan MLA Reginald Gross, to follow him to the Canadian customs office.

Mr. Gross says the guard threatened to confiscate the aircraft and ordered him to pay a $25 deposit on a possible fine for violating U.S. customs rules.

Mr. Benjamin said Mr. Gross told him the border patrol officer was annoyed because he had had no notice the aircraft was expected.

Fear Shortage

WATERLOO, Ont. (CP) — Dr. B. C. Matthews, president of the University of Waterloo, has said the university may be forced to close if cut off from natural gas supplies.

The university is among 126 large-volume gas users which received letters from Union Gas Co., suggesting they seek alternative fuels to cut the cause of possible shortages of natural gas in 1976.

Dr. Matthews said Monday that previously inquiries have shown there are no alternative sources of fuel.

2,000 Claims

CORNWALL (CP) — The Ontario government's crop insurance program will pay about 2,000 claims in eastern Ontario this year, Bob Hanley of Kemptville, area manager of the crop insurance commission, said Tuesday.

He said in a telephone interview that 5,416 farmers in 10 eastern counties had taken out policies by the start of the 1974 summer, compared with 2,300 in 1973.

An agriculture representative said crop yields which average 90 bushels of corn an acre had dropped as low as 60 in some areas after a cold, wet spring.

Trudeau Ready to Plead For Parliamentary Reform

OTTAWA (CP) — Prime Minister Trudeau says himself as a parliamentary reformist, anxious to make the Commons and Senate more efficient so that legislative logjams don't develop.

Some of his ideas may be given today when, in the face of Progressive Conservative opposition to some reforms, he states the throne speech debate.

He told a news conference Tuesday he is "very concerned about the future of Parliament" because it has become trapped in a morass of routine technical matters.

The Commons now handles bills in several stages and sometimes repetitious debate can drag for months. Provincial legislatures, by contrast, often deal with all stages of a bill in one day.

The emphasis on reform raises the spectre of a prolonged Parliament despite the government's declaration that he said Tuesday he does not want speed for its own sake: he would like instead to see both Houses of Parliament set priorities and avoid lengthy and fruitless rhetoric.

"Surely Parliament should be able to find ways to deal with this problem."

The kind of logjam that can develop under the present rules became evident when Parliament resumed Monday. The government passed a list of its proposed list of legislation it says it wants to deal with as quickly as possible. Twenty-seven of these are leftovers from the last Parliament.

But Gerald Baldwin, the Conservative House leader, said outside the Commons Tuesday that any effort to implement reforms will be opposed by his party if the reforms are similar to those proposed by Mr. Trudeau's government, seven years ago.

"We will not support any move on the part of the government to reduce the effectiveness of the House of Commons as the final authority in any decision-making process."

Senators Face Heavy Work Load

OTTAWA (CP) — The heavier workload predicted for the Senate became reality Tuesday when five pieces of proposed government legislation were introduced in the upper house.

"That's five times the amount of government legislation initiated in the Senate last Parliament," Senator Ray Perrault, the new government Senate leader, said in part during an interview.

Following introduction of the bills, an unprecedented Alister Grosart (Ontario), deputy Opposition leader, asked: "Isn't this a bit unusual?"

But Senator Perrault (British Columbia) replied that the government hopes "to make this body more helpful and relevant in the Canadian parliamentary system. There will be more legislation introduced in this chamber."

The new Parliament faces a large backlog of work, mostly the result of bills left over because of political instability which followed election of a minority Liberal government in October, 1972.

Parliament Show Same

OTTAWA (CP) — The supporting cast may have changed somewhat, but when the new Parliament took the stage Tuesday, it almost was a rerun of a play that ended suddenly five months ago.

The same characters held the starring roles—with the exception of new Speaker James Jerome—and even their lines had a familiar ring.

Front and centre sat Prime Minister Trudeau and across from him was Conservative Leader Robert Stanfield.

There were some eager new faces in the supporting cast, including many government backbenchers.

But in total they seemed remarkably similar to the last show.

The script had not been drastically rewritten during the break.

OTTAWA (CP) — Australian Prime Minister Gough Whitlam will hold informal talks Friday night with Prime Minister Trudeau during a brief stay in Ottawa.

Buchanan Willing To Meet Indians

OTTAWA (CP) — Indian Affairs Minister Judd Buchanan said Tuesday he still is prepared to meet representatives of disgruntled Indians despite the group's violent demonstration here Monday.

"I'm prepared to meet their council of 11, but I'd prefer that they come up and see me," Mr. Buchanan told reporters outside the Commons.

He said the Indians, occupying an empty government building since the weekend, had been in touch with his office, but no agreement had been reached about a time or place for the meeting.

Mr. Buchanan said the demonstration was an attempt by the Indians to draw attention to legitimate grievances about their living conditions.

In the Commons, he told Wally Firth (NDP—Northwest Territories) that Indians will have to accept greater responsibility for their housing.

"They are not enough federal subsidy money available to help all Indians and new measures would have to stem from cooperative efforts involving both Indians and the government.

Mr. Firth, a Metis, said the violence of the demonstration "was very, very sad," but added that the distance the Indians travelled to protest shows "their message is very important."

Some of the Indians came from as far as British Columbia to demonstrate at the opening of the 30th Parliament.

Allan Lawrence (PC—Northumberland — Durham) condemned the violence as "not the way to plead for bringing grievances to the government."

In the Commons, he questioned Solicitor-General Warren Allmand about security preparations for the demonstration, which was announced in advance.

Mr. Allmand said adequate measures were taken by the RCMP with the assistance of armed forces personnel present for the opening of Parliament.

Statistics Depict Plight

OTTAWA (CP) — A high infant mortality rate, poor housing, low education and disease are a part of the social backdrop behind increasing Indian militancy.

And while some indicators of social well-being among the native people of the country show improvements in recent years, Statistics Canada figures reveal a worsening or static situation in other directions.

Infant mortality has declined, the native population is growing about twice as fast as the national average and economic gains to help establish industries for the native people have increased.

But figures published in Perspectives Canada, a statistics bureau publication, indicate that the condition of housing has largely deteriorated since the mid-sixties.

Other indicators show that despite improvements, living conditions for Indians and Inuit are far below those for Canadians as a whole.

Housing, one of the biggest concerns in recent Indian representations, seems to have actually shown a decline based on a three-fold rating of reserve homes as poor, fair or good.

In 1971, Statistics Canada found that 26.4 per cent of families on reserves needed new houses. In 1965, 19.7 per cent were said to need new houses.

Statistics also show that in 1971, 13.9 per cent of occupied houses needed major repairs. In 1960, 6.8 per cent were found to be in that state.

The 1971 census found that while 80 per cent of reserve housing had electricity, only 55 per cent have running water, 55 per cent have indoor toilets and 55 per cent have indoor baths.

Trespasser Wins Suit for Damages

OTTAWA, (CP) — Landowners who have snowmobilers are trespassing to their property have a duty to prevent any situation which may cause injury in the interest, the Supreme Court of Canada said Tuesday.

"Although as a general rule a person is not bound to anticipate the presence of intruders on private property or to guard them from injury, a duty may arise if the owner of land knows or ought reasonably to have foreseen the presence of a trespasser," the court said in a 4-to-4 decision."

The court awarded Peter Veinot, a 41-year-old auto body repairman from Lawrencetown, Lake, Ont., damages of $88,337 to be paid by Kerr Addison Mines Ltd.

A trial jury at Haileybury, Ont., found for Mr. Veinot in that amount Nov. 17, 1971. But the Ontario Court of Appeal overturned that judgment Sept. 20, 1972. Mr. Veinot's appeal to the Supreme Court was for return of the original trial judgment.

Veinot was seriously injured on March 18, 1970, while riding his snowmobile on a road owned and maintained by the mining company. The injury occurred when Mr. Veinot struck his head on a steel pipe placed across the road.

Evidence was the company put the barrier across the road 20 years ago to prevent intruders from travelling through the company's power magazine.

Mr. Justice Dickson, spelling the majority reasons, said no notice could be read from the pipe was in place 20 years ago without accidents occurring.

"It could only have happened after the advent of the snowmobile," he declared.

The road users seemed little doubt that many snowmobilers travelled across the company property and road usually at night.

He said he accepted the finding of a jury at trial that Kerr Addison failed to take reasonable care to avoid injury to persons in the area since it posted no warnings.

Canadian Facing Execution

OTTAWA (CP) — External Affairs Minister Allan MacEachen said Tuesday he has not intervened in the case of a Canadian citizen under sentence of death in the U.S.S.R. because the case is still before the courts.

Mr. MacEachen told Claude Wagner (PC—St. Hyacinthe) in the Commons that the Soviet lawyer representing David Goldstaschilli of Montreal wants to appeal the conviction of committing war crimes.

The Canadian embassy in Moscow was closely following the case.

Mr. Goldstaschilli was convicted of participation in the murder of more than 2,000 Jews at Starovod during the Second World War, plus other mass killings in the Crimea, the Ukraine, Poland and Poland.

He came to Canada in 1949, became a Canadian citizen in 1971 and was arrested in July, 1972, while on a visit to the Soviet Union.

Aluminum Wiring Hazard

OTTAWA (CP) — Ontario Hydro has set up a special study group to investigate whether aluminum wiring now used in many homes — and in commercial buildings throughout the country — is a fire hazard.

The action follows disclosures by scientists that aluminum wiring may not make a better wire connection with wall outlets now used. The faulty connections can cause overheating and possibly fires.

The investigating group was set up secretly because, in the words of one Ontario Hydro official: "We don't want to get the public uptight until we have the basic facts."

Another official, Keith Beaseley, Ontario Hydro's chief inspector, said Tuesday the group has just begun; its investigation and has no findings yet. However, its report would be ready within months and made public.

Mr. Bellamy would not identify its members but another electrical products manufacturer source said the group is made up of engineers from the from consumer-protection and aluminum-wiring industry and ind.

Now Ottawa Preserves Ancient Post Offices

OTTAWA (CP) — Two years ago, Edmonton's old post office was demolished, victim of a federal government policy which placed old government buildings on the auction block.

But today another old post office — in Montreal — is about to be saved because of community pressure and a new federal government policy being developed by the public works department.

The department let tenders for redevelopment of the old Westmount post office in April. A public works spokesman said three bids to preserve the neo-classical structure are of high quality and it seems unlikely the building will be demolished.

Until recently, the federal government placed low priority on saving old buildings.

"In the past, it was like a truck," said Doug Hartt, the department's senior policy adviser. "If we ceased to need it, we got rid of it."

New construction usually was the answer to the demand by government departments for modern facilities and buildings left vacant were sold to the highest bidder.

In July, 1973, the government decided to redefine its property management policy.

Jean-Pierre Dube, then public works minister, told a House of Commons committee last March that new construction no longer would be the only solution to the government's need for accommodation.

"We are placing more and more emphasis on recycling existing public buildings," he said, citing the rehabilitation of a customs building in Montreal, the Langevin Block in Ottawa and the Motherwell Building in Regina.

When an old building is no longer needed, it will not be declared surplus and sold to the highest bidder, said Mr. Hartt. The department attempts to find new uses for the property in consultation with other levels of government and private enterprise.

The customs house in Victoria, the oldest federal building west of Ontario, was given to British Columbia for use as a maritime museum.

And in the same city, the Belmont federal building was leased out to a private group for 20 years. The historic building has since been refurbished and rented out as office space.

The public works department also has decided to use heritage structures for other government departments instead of erecting new buildings. In Ottawa, the department purchased Lasalle Academy, an old classical college, and is rehabilitating it for urban affairs department offices.

In Cavendish, P.E.I., the setting for the novel Anne of Green Gables, the department purchased an old, vacant farmhouse as a post office for tourists. The clapboard structure was moved 10 miles and furnished with post office fittings from the late 19th century.

Stan White, the architect in charge of the Cavendish post office project, said the public works department has a special role in heritage preservation.

He said Heritage Canada can only lament the demolition of buildings and the politics and northern affairs department can preserve only a limited number of buildings as historic sites.

"But the public works department could influence landmark preservation.

"We're in a favored position," said Mr. White. "We own the buildings and have the funds to restore them."

The department has 6,800 government buildings under its jurisdiction and a capital budget of $210 million this year for renovations and new construction.

Vargas Suicide Room Preserved

By MICHAEL ARKUS

RIO DE JANEIRO (Reuter) — The room has been left virtually as it was 20 years ago when, it witnessed the final dramatic act in the scandal which some Brazilians now are calling their Watergate.

The ceiling is flaking and the cobwebs still hang above the bed in the third floor of Rio de Janeiro's former presidential palace.

Only the bed, where President Getulio Vargas committed suicide on the morning of Aug. 24, 1954, is changed. It has been made up again and cordoned off.

The president, who with an interval had ruled Brazil for almost 20 years, first as dictator and then as elected head of state, had shot himself rather than submit to the pressure for his resignation.

His administration, palace guard and close relatives had come under increasing attack for a growing scandal of influence peddling called "the Sea of Mud," although most observers believe Vargas himself was not involved.

Vargas' political opponents and the army used the scandal as ammunition for attacking the populist president.

As the pressure increased and his cabinet met in all-night session at the Catete presidential palace to persuade him to resign, Vargas declared: "Only dead will I leave the Catete."

And that is how he left. As his body was taken from the palace the crowds forced by the power classes surged into the streets in a massive act of grief incited by the dramatic words of his last testament:

"To the rage of my enemies I leave the legacy of my death . . . I gave you my blood . . . I offer you my death. Serenely I take the first step on the path of eternity and leave life to enter his story."

Now, 20 years after his death, newspapers and magazines are devoting large articles to recalling the events of August, 1954.

The legal ripples of scandal are still eddying. Only this August, a court confirmed a 33-year prison sentence on one of the organizers of an attempt in 1954 to assassinate Carlos Lacerda, the journalist who revealed the "Sea of Mud."

The assassination attempt was organized by the chief of Vargas' bodyguard, Gregorio Fortunato, who had amassed a fortune in peddling influence.

Fortunato was sentenced to 25 years in prison and was killed in his cell in 1962 in a fight with another prisoner.

Now sightseers move silently around the bed in the sparsely-furnished room on the third floor of the Catete palace, turned into a museum.

The bedspread is the same one Vargas used, but it now bears the mark of a large burn.

In 1968 a visitor set a night shirt afire in imitation of the president, known as the defender of the poor, had died.

Waiting for Food

Uncle Ben Makes Millions In Land's Dirtiest Industry

VANCOUVER (CP) — Uncle Ben, who started his fledgling chicken & trucker at the age of 14, has made a fortune of $20 million or so is what he calls "tricky business" in the circumstantial, dirtiest industry in Canada.

"I did it because it's so big and super because it's so clean compared with the beef industry," said Ben Cisiter. "There are more fortunes made and more grief in the brewing industry than any other I know, unless it's the Mafia."

For the moment, the pulp and paper magnate can rest easily. The bearded 240-pound proprietor of Uncle Ben's Enterprises Ltd. continues to devote 16 hours a day to the unending battle with Canada's three major brewers for his share of the Western Canada beer market.

And occasionally he typically himself by prying into his British Columbia beer.

"The latest thing here is, they won't let us sell our beer at hotels because the three or the big companies are short on supply.

"So instead of letting us, a home-based industry, supply the demand, they accumulate our beer in warehouses and won't let it go to the public as the big eastern outfits don't have to worry about competition.

As a self-made man, he is openly forthright in his views on a number of other subjects, particularly when he discusses Canadians who expect the world's riches to be handed to them on a silver platter.

"Man always works best under pressure. Look back at your history. As far back as you can see, it's seems that were brought out the best in us. Now we're getting fat and lazy and nobody's cultivated or trained or schooled enough—the politicians especially—know how to survive during peacetime.

"When you have politicians, people who couldn't make a go of running a private business, and they're running the biggest business in the country—government. It doesn't make sense."

If he could make one contribution in his lifetime, said Uncle Ben, he would like to fight for the youth of today and tomorrow who are subjected to the things that don't make sense.

"The things we are doing are so backward. We allow kids of 15 to quit school, uneducated and untrained, to kill like that. Isn't mature enough to handle it. The upset give kids big money, but he gets the idea that because of what money he can't be fired and you've ruined him.

"If governments and business had any real feeling for kids today, they'd make it compulsory that if a kid quits school at 15 or so he would take another year or two of some kind of training. Give them some choice but force the decision on training made by some kind of panel and board, on aptitude.

"Then you wouldn't have young people off on the wrong foot, hooligans, hippies, thieves, getting criminal records when they're kids and spoiling their futures."

All people are born equal and are equal after death, he said.

"But in between, each has his own abilities, his own limits. There shouldn't be dis-crimination between an intellectual can't be an airline pilot or an industrialist.

"Things would be pretty rough if we all had the same ambition."

Uncle Ben, the hard-master and empire builder managed to make his way in the top. But he still sees more to be done.

"The only thing I've feared in life is being a failure in anything I undertake to do. I guess my fear now is that I won't have all the work done before I have to go."

Reagan's Ex-aide 'Defuses' Converts

TORONTO (CP) — For three years, Merle McCrea has been the picture of Maternal at the 14-year-old gurn of the Divine Light Mission, and thought it was good.

"When I look at it today he looks like any other Joe, said the 35-year-old Toronto resident who served as public relations officer for the Mission's Alberta-British Columbia section.

Miss McCrea was one of several former members who met yesterday in Toronto to discuss the next demands from its members by Paul Hendrick, a former aide of Governor Ronald Reagan of California, and "deprogrammer" who has made a career of helping parents win their young adult back from high-pressure religious cults.

Hill said the mission exercised complete control over her life, when she was transferred to Vancouver in 1972, she was denied permission to visit her parents in Toronto at Christmas.

"They'll pamper you and try to lure you away from the world with a lot of true knowledge," said Hill, a former teacher. Leaders told her.

Mr. Patrick, 46, nicknamed "Dark Lightning" was called in by the girl's parents, who said he asked only his expenses.

He said he was hired to steal the girl because she was not getting a job idly by while the girl's parents were re-called as a loving girl, was on the cult's fund group, said Mr. McCrea.

Miss McCrea, who said her membership, which she gave freely, was bought back for $1,000, returned in July and the "de-programming" took place in the presence of her parents and a number of family friends.

There was no coercion, she said, "I could have left the room at any time and no one would have interfered."

Mr. Patrick and the cults accuse each other of violating civil liberties.

His critics say he is guilty of kidnapping, violence and brainwashing in restoring cult members to their families. He was acquitted by a New York court last year on charges filed with assault and unlawful imprisonment of a member of a group known as the Reformed Missionary Fellowship.

Mr. Patrick denied using force and said it is the cults that practice brainwashing and coercion.

"These groups are not primarily religious organizations. They are run as a racket for their own ends. In the process, they trample civil liberties and ruthlessly break up families."

USE GOOD VINEGAR

In pickling, use good quality vinegar, not imitation. If it is weak, pickles will be soft and may not keep. If too flavorful or too sharp, increase the sugar in the recipe rather than dilute the vinegar.

Twin Donates Organ

SAN ANTONIO, Tex. (AP) — The twin brother of the Freeman family are recovering from a kidney transplant operation in which one supplied a kidney to the other. "I haven't had to have any more treatments on the kidney machine," said Charles Roger Freeman, 27, the recipient. His brother Arthur Ray Freeman was the donor.

He Calls Self Parliament Salesman

COLUMBO (CP) — Kenneth Bradshaw describes himself as a "travelling salesman" for the Westminster mode of Parliament.

As a London-based senior member of the Society of Clerks-at-the-Table he is frequently consulted when by governments operating under British principles to interpret the rules or find a precedent in the experience of Westminster.

The society co-ordinates the work and experience of parliamentary clerks throughout the Commonwealth. It holds its annual meeting to coincide with the conference of the Commonwealth Parliamentary Association, which has been meeting at Colombo.

Founded in 1932, the society aims to provide a means of contact between parliamentary practice of legislative chambers more accessible to clerks-at-the-table in their role as house advisers on procedure, constitutional law and privilege.

Thirty of the society's 200-odd members attended the Colombo conference, most of them as secretaries of their CPA branches.

In addition to providing members with regular bulletins and an annual magazine, the society offers regular exchanges among clerks to gain experience at Westminster and in other Commonwealth countries.

Bradshaw, as clerk to the overseas office of the House of Commons, is responsible for the management of the society, of which he has been a member for some 25 years.

He visits Commonwealth parliaments to help them with major problems. For example, when the constitution of the Cayman Islands was changed, he was called on to help rewrite the colony's parliamentary standing orders.

After the Colombo conference, Bradshaw was scheduled to visit Bangladesh for a discussion of procedure and practice with its parliamentary clerks.

"They have 30 clerks and an assembly of between 300 and 400 members, only about two of whom have previous experience in a parliamentary assembly," he said.

In 1965 Bradshaw visited the Saskatchewan legislature and served temporarily as its clerk.

"I was amazed at how similar it was," he said. "After a week or two I felt perfectly at home.

Norway's Sudden Wealth In Oil Proves Bothersome

Written for CP
By BRIAN AMARON

STAVANGER, Norway (CP) — Canadian industries are trying to cash in on the big Norwegian oil boom that promises surprising wealth to this small socialist country that still cherishes its traditions.

Already enjoying one of the world's highest standards of living, Norwegians look on their new wealth with a mixture of joy and concern. Fishermen and farmers worry about oil pollution, taxpayers' officials worry about finding more workers for the oil industries without upsetting the flow of labor to other traditional production.

So far more than 12,000 workers have been hired to ship yards, reservoir-testing fabricating in other plants and processing industries among industrial chiefs.

Nevertheless, the oil boom is a fact, with the prospect that by the end of this year Norway will be self-sufficient in oil and will start looking for export markets which won't be hard to find.

As an indication of the lucrative prospects, another field, capable of producing more than twice Norway's oil needs, was confirmed this summer. Those in Canada and other countries who sell products and equipment needed by the oil prospectors and developers are convinced there's a big market in this country with a population of only 3.9 million.

This was a major talking point among the 11 Canadian companies which joined industries from other countries at the fifth offshore North Sea Technology Conference here in September.

Canada is relatively new in the field of selling equipment and technology for all these expensive ventures. But its companies are determined to get a cut of the anticipated sales and profits.

An indication of the importance of the Norwegian potential was indicated by the Norwegian conference chairman, H. F. Grorud, who told the international audience: "The North Sea engagement is in its initial phase. Many nations need the energy resources in the area."

The Canadian companies represented — augmented by the Canadian trade department and the provinces of Nova Scotia and Newfoundland—all exhibited products and technology particularly suited to turbulent North Sea conditions.

Hayter Siddeley Canada Ltd., represented by its Halifax shipyards division, used a tiny to illustrate the value of its mobile drilling rig Sedneth No. 701, now in service in the British side of the North Sea.

Another company drawing interest was Lockheed Petroleum Services Ltd. of New Westminster, B.C., showing the world's first one-atmosphere underwater production system. The company figures the system will be ready for operation beneath the North Sea by 1976.

Other firms offered a variety of services, from satellite navigation systems to equipment for control of major oil spills. Other offerings included support vessels, minisubmarines, specialized cranes and underwater communications systems.

A Canadian government spokesman said that while the conference and exhibition produced only a small number of sales, good relations had been built up between the Canadians and Norwegians for future business deals.

"We wanted to let them see what we have to offer and at the same time give us a chance to assess their needs and study their technologies," the spokesman said.

The Canadian contingent later toured the northern coastal cities of Bergen and Trondheim where they saw samples of Norwegian technology—the construction of a concrete oil drum capable of holding one million barrels of oil surrounded by a small community of linked drilling and production rigs.

Mohawk Dissidents Threaten 'Chaos and Civil Disorder'

By COLIN BRUCE
Staff Reporter

TYENDINAGA — Dissident Mohawks gathered at the reserve south of Deseronto and civil disorder Tuesday night if the federal government intervenes in the formation of a corporation on the reserve.

A written release stated the band council have few choices besides heeding the wishes of our native people or chaos and civil disorder.

This affirmation comes in the wake of controversy surrounding the formation of a voluntary on the reserve that might leave the reserve open to federal and provincial legislation.

Earlier this summer, the band council approved a referendum ballot which "the people directly affected" they would vote on, 56 with a corporation, said Tuesday night's release, signed by Malcolm Montgomery, acting on behalf of the protesting Mohawks.

Following this referendum, band council Sept. 19 announced the "passing of Tyendinaga Mohawk Ltd.

The company as a council-owned project was turned down by the reserve-elect said Montgomery in the release, and "only after the people voted in favor of the referendum did council withdraw it."

Mr. Montgomery had about 30 protesters behind him Tuesday night as he said he had been in contact with the ministry of Indian affairs and that they had been told the department "... imports are so short here it is impossible to predict the consequences."

Mr. Montgomery, a specialist in native law, teaching at Trent University, said the "fuss" in moving the corporation off the reserve is the "only way" to avoid more change to the Four B'a Indian Act, and the need for ministerial approval of a new lease.

The next step, he said, is to hold a new referendum where the question is simply not asking Mohawks if they want a corporation on the reserve.

"Then the minister must act or he'll demonstrate he's derelict in his duty ... violence and public property be held at his door," said Mr. Montgomery.

Though the issue may be the key to keeping the corporation off Mission Island, the band council for the group and band council for the reserve have been refused a copy of the final draft.

Mr. Montgomery urged Mohawks to support "whatever steps are taken" to protect the band's interests and demand a copy of the lease. He said he is reluctant to begin a court action, because of the cost and ill-humour "the mention of native affairs would say the matter was out of his hands and was a question for the courts".

The news release also says "those in opposition will continue to exert maximum pressure on all fronts until we have received the ratification of band council and the complete withdrawing of the corporate structure."

Councillor Cecil Maracle is expected to request copies of the lease from council tonight.

Mohawks Meet Lawyer

Tyendinaga Mohawks gathered last night to meet with Malcolm Montgomery, (background, left) a lawyer acting on behalf of reserve residents protesting to formation of a reserve corporation. Mr. Montgomery urged Mohawks to make every effort to stop the corporation. Beside him is Cecil Maracle, the protesters' official spokesman, Williard Hill, chairman, and Earl Hill (right) past chief of the band council protesters now are attempting to dissolve.

Labor Council Withdraws Threatened UCS Boycott

By AL ZABAS
Staff Reporter

TRENTON — Quinte District Labor Council members voted 14-4 Tuesday night to withdraw its previously threatened boycott of this year's United Way campaign by organized labor in the county for the United Community services assurance a new program budgeting system will be instituted.

QDLC vice-president Ian Reilly, in putting a no-boycott executive committee resolution to the vote, said the Council "still has many doubts as to the effectiveness of the Belleville United Way in its present form."

"We'll withdraw the boycott and wait," said Mr. Reilly, "We'll give them one more last chance."

It was emphasized that the boycott has been withdrawn for one year only and can be reinvoked in 1975.

Council affiliated unions have been asked to support the United Way "in the same manner as they have in previous years", the resolution reads.

The Council voted under the chairing of Lorne Bailey, a UAW Local 1328 from Belleville, to withdraw part of the council if the boycott is discontinued.

Frank McKay, Local 1328 executive member, said he will make every effort to pull his union local out of the council if to boycott ends.

"We back down in a situation like this, it makes the council look ridiculous and we lose our credibility," he said.

Several other members, among them Jack Thomson, QDLC vice-president, said volunteer donations are both an "incompetent and primitive" method of raising funds.

"It should be taken out of the tax dollars," he said. "What until such time as a better system can be found, we should support the executive committee."

He called for labor representatives on the UCS to keep a watchful eye on United Way activities.

In an agreement hammered out through a series of letters and meetings in September, the UCS agreed to increase its representation from Quinte labor.

Such representation, said Mr. Reilly will mean "We would be able to manoeuver and stop some of the things we have been against in it."

Part of the UCS-QDLC settlement worked out in September, provides that only specific programs of each of the United Way's 14 participating agencies be funded from volunteer dollars. Member agencies would need to further break down their individual budgets.

The United Way has already cut the program budgeting in half, said Mr. Reilly.

"Where they (agencies) get the rest of the money is their problem," he said, but wanted that they would have to oppose the double-dipping."

The Council moved to boycott the campaign in June over the practice of agencies receiving both public donations through the UCS and from city coffers.

Mr. Reilly said that any new boycott would be started in spring 1975 if a six-month operation under the new conditions proves unworkable.

Canadian Labor Congress representative Henry Nokes (left) and Quinte District Labor Council vice-president Ian Reilly review notes prior to Tuesday's meeting in Trenton. Scout Program Hampered By Lack of New Leaders

By CASE MASHAFFY
Staff Reporter

"We have plenty of kids, but we desperately need more adult help." That's the way Reeve Fort, Boy Scout district commissioner for Hastings-Prince Edward counties, summed up the current situation in the Belleville area.

"We can easily accept the boys we have the leaders for," Mr. Fort explains. "On the other hand, we have a few areas, especially where there are new subdivisions, where we have groups of scouts, Cubs and Brownies established. The boys have been there for a year or two and we're short of leaders."

At the fall scouting season gets under way, Mrs. Fort says there will be 11 Scout troops in the area, with two troops possible — if leaders are available; 13 Cub packs — one more than last year — and three Beaver colonies.

Beavers, are Mrs. Fort's special interest. She is Beaver co-ordinator for the district.

Last year — a pilot project — Beavers were established at Ontario School for the Deaf and a group is expected successful. Beavers, aged five to seven, are the first rung on scouting's ladder.

"There will be three Beaver colonies this year and Mrs. Fort says she and her committee could establish two more colonies a month — if the leaders can be found.

"One thing about Beavers," she says, "The year 7-8 reeds is the younger children seem to be much more interested in working with us and that makes establishing new colonies that much easier."

The biggest leader problem, Mrs. Fort says, is with Scout troops, where parents and potential leaders are so scared that existing troops may be forced to fold up unless new troops can get established.

"If you have an interest in boys and have some time to spare, there are all the qualifications you need to become a leader," says Mrs. Fort. "We'll provide all the training and help you need."

Another area where scouting needs help, according to Mrs. Fort, is in sponsorship. "We would like to have more sponsors because that would allow more boys to get involved with scouting. Any group — industry, service club, institution — can sponsor a scouting group.

Hard Frost Expected To Cut Growing Season

Tonight's forecast hard frost (2 degrees C or less) in Quinte's growing season short by about a month.

Since rains delayed planting two weeks, and most families you need to become a leader," says Mrs. Fort. "We'll provide all the training and help you need."

Another area where scouting needs help, according to Mrs. Fort, is in sponsorship. "We would like to have more sponsors because that would allow more boys to get involved with scouting. Any group — industry, service club, institution — can sponsor a scouting group.

pumpkin tonight, they could be dinning, Mr. Leavitt said. But root crops such as potatoes and turnips should survive through all right. "You would have to get into the fields to hurt them."

On the bright side, the apple crop should stand up through the night without serious damage. Dr. R. B. Miller of the Smithfield Experimental farm said the apple crop this year will be greatly affected.

"Apples are a pretty tough fruit," Dr. Miller said, "as long as you don't handle them while they're frozen, they can be picked. After they've been frozen, though, they must be used faster and tend to go soft, which cuts their storage time short."

Sky-light Homes Reports Major Property Theft

PICTON (Staff) — Property valued at $18,500 has been reported missing from Sky-Light Homes Ltd., a plant based at Loch Sloy Industrial Park.

Company property valued at $575 was taken in a break-in reported last weekend. Items remained included: a hand pump and an electrical box for a compressor. Shortly afterwards property valued at $18,000 and belonging to a company employee was reported missing.

A spokesman from the Picton Detachment of the Ontario Provincial Police said the plant is not entirely daily as the industry is not yet in operation.

In another area theft reported Tuesday, two rifles were said stolen from the residence of David Vangasen, RR 4 Picton. Missing is a BCMS Centennial gold plated rifle with a collector's value of $600, and a .22 calibre rifle with scope valued at $200.

Police said entry to the Vangasen residence was gained through an upstairs window.

QDLC Voices Support For Striking Workers

TRENTON — Striking United Electrical union local workers of Emerson Electric of Canada Ltd. in Napanee received the support of the Quinte District Labor Council here Tuesday.

The council, with the Kingston District Labor Council, said it will sponsor a full-page advertisement in the local Napanee newspaper to a express its support of the 221 workers of Local 523, now in its 18th week on strike.

The move follows a request by UE national representative Ken Lewis. Labor Day Tuesday charged the U.S.-owned company is "out to break the union."

"The company has done everything to keep the union out," Mr. Lewis said. He said the QDLC the firm, which owns one other plant in Canada in Markham, took over the union contract of Canron Ltd., when Emerson bought the electric motor manufacturing plant about five years ago.

Union members rejected an initial company offer of a five-per-cent-wage increase. A subsequent offer — a 90-cent-an-hour increase over 20 months and complaints over time lines of four Saturdays was turned down by an 87 per cent vote, he said. Take 2

Recently, the union strike committee called for a federal government take-over of the plant.

Mr. Lucas said the union feels the company is intransigent in its strike-breaking has prompted request of support from both Kingston and Quinte labor councils.

The advertisement, sponsored by both bodies, will indicate "workers' support and urges workers on all sides", Mr. Lucas concluded.

Council Backs Retailers

TRENTON — Quinte District Labor Council members came out in support Tuesday of downtown merchants in Trenton who are opposing an extending store hours till 10 p.m. here six days a week.

Longer hours, said QDLC president Delegate Sword, would cause hardship to those employees forced to man stores till 10 p.m.

"Working people will have to give up nights and week ends to keep stores open," he said.

The labor council's displeasure has been conveyed by bylaw — permitting nightly shopping hours till 10 p.m. Monday through Saturday — will be made known to the municipal offices and the Ontario Federation of Labor (OFL).

The council's action follows an OFL policy calling for uniform or standardized store hours for retailers across the province.

Truck, Bus, Car Collide

A man was slightly injured Tuesday following a three-vehicle accident involving a school bus, a truck and a station wagon.

The driver of the station wagon, John Elgey, 27, of RR 3 Belleville was treated for cuts at hospital here and released.

Provincial police said the accident occurred on rain-slicked Highway 2 near the Tweers department store about 4:30 p.m.

Police said the truck had come to a halt and the station wagon went into the back of the stalled truck which in turn hit the side of the school bus.

The bus had just finished discharging its last passenger.

Police estimate damages to the trailer, upon it of $1,500 and to the bus $500. The truck was not damaged.

XOCES Seminar Planned

For the last year a series of personal development seminars have been conducted in Belleville by Bob Proctor.

Among those benefiting from Mr. Proctor's XOCES seminars have been some 400 people groups as the Kiwanis Club. Now the public is invited to attend a introductory preview of the seminars.

This will take place on Oct. 17 at the Belleville Secondary School at 7 p.m. Everyone is invited to the preview which will introduce the start of the eight-week evening courses in Belleville.

XOCES (pronounced O-ses) has its head office in Fred St. North.

The seminar consists of one session a week for a period of eight weeks. During that time the emphasis is on health, goals, self-image and attitude will be discussed.

The primary goal of XOCES has been described as trying to help people learn how they themselves can enjoy a happier, healthier and wealthier life but by understanding some of the natural laws of the universe.

Man Fined For Licences

A man charged with having five separate driver's licences was fined $25 on each and given 60 or days in jail when he appeared before Judge J. Gordon Conclinburg in provincial court Tuesday.

Neil W. Curtis, 27, who had an Oakville address on the charges, was charged with having more than one driver's licence in his possession when arrested by Constable Fred Hamelink on Aug. 5 on Highway 401 in Sidney Township.

Future Uncertain For Self-care Unit

Belleville General Hospital board of governors Tuesday cautioned late last week they must soon determine the future of the Queen's Self-Care Unit.

The hospital must ascertain provincial government intentions for the facility, which was launched as a health ministry pilot project in 1971.

The 20-bed unit — for patients not in need of intensive hospital care — is housed in premises leased from the Queen's Motel on Kaladar Dundas St. Terms of the lease require a year's notice of ministry intentions before the 1976 expiry date.

"I think the board must seriously direct itself to the question of what is the future of such a unit," said Alderman Frank Carter, hospital board chairman.

The problem for BGH, Alderman Carter explained later, is to find out if the ministry intends carrying on with the pilot. If not, the board must determine whether it will be permitted to create its own facility, with ministry funds available for operating costs.

Maltsev Spearheads Soviet Union's 3-2 Win

ALEXANDRE MALTSEV

MOSCOW (CP) — The Soviet Union prospered without one of its top players Tuesday night and slipped Team Canada 74 3-2 win in the fifth game of their international hockey summit series.

Alexander Maltsev took up the slack for the injured Alexander Yakushev by scoring two goals in the first and second periods.

His second goal, which put Russia ahead to stay, followed a plea by a fan for Yakushev's return.

"Yakushev, where are you?

Yakushev was in a copyright interview with the San Diego Union Tuesday night and said he might get part ownership of the Q's in lieu of payment he says is due him.

SAN DIEGO (AP) — Wilt Chamberlain, the highest scorer in pro basketball history, has retired from the sport, the owner of San Diego Conquistadors announced Tuesday.

Dr. Leonard Bloom, owner of the American Basketball Association team, then confirmed a published report that the 38-year-old Chamberlain would forego the remaining two years on his three-year, $1.5-million contract as coach of the Q's.

Chamberlain confirmed his retirement in a telephone interview from his home in Bel Air, Calif.

He refused to take credit away from the Soviet national team that now holds a slight 3-1 won-lost-tie edge in the eight-game series. It was yet another in a post-game interview, however, that he was upset.

"I didn't think we played well enough to win," said the elder statesman of the Soviet squad. "But even then, the Russians had to play well to beat us," added Howe, the 46-year-old veteran who scored the first Canadian goal to tie the game at 1-1 early in the second period.

Get Boost from Brewers

Orioles Nose Out Yankees

BY THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

Baltimore Orioles' manager Earl Weaver was in no hurry to find out the result of Tuesday night's New York Yankees-Milwaukee Brewers game.

Weaver knew the Orioles' fate would be sealed if Milwaukee beat New York and he knew it would be sealed if the Yankees won.

Baltimore had finished with the best record in baseball throughout the season, posting a 91-71 mark to win the Eastern Division title of the American League East. His job this afternoon, beating Detroit 4-3 and 5-4 behind a four-hit pitching performance by Jim Palmer in the nightcap at Milwaukee, was done. The Orioles would win the AL East outright.

Andy Etchebarren, who drove in the winning runs for Palmer in both games, a leadoff double in the sixth inning was the bearer of good tidings on the scene in Weaver's suite. The Yankees had lost, three years ago, 5-4, but Milwaukee had the bases loaded with one out in the 10th inning and George Scott was about to step to the plate.

Scott hit the first pitch off Yankee Dor Medich for a run-scoring single up the middle, giving the Brewers a 3-2 victory and giving the Orioles the division title for the second straight season.

"It's a base hit—we win!" Etchebarren yelled, dropping the phone in his excitement.

Etchebarren in the American League, Manager Ted Williams' Texas Rangers 5-0, Boston Red Sox beat Cleveland 5-4, Chicago White Sox edged Kansas City Royals 2-1, Oakland California A's shut out Oakland A's 3-0.

Etchebarren, a reserve catcher who batted just .222 in 81 games, hit a leading double to drive in Brooks Robinson from first base with the winning run for the first game.

Tigers' starting pitcher Joe Coleman was in trouble almost from the start in the first game, but Ralph Houk kept John Hiller, his ace reliever, in reserve for possible use in today's finale. Coleman only came on in the sixth and was the loser.

The Tigers pulled into a 4-4 tie in the eighth inning on single by Gary Sutherland and Al Kaline, an error by Brooks Robinson, a sacrifice fly by Jim Freehan and a run-scoring double by Dan Meyer. Baltimore evaded further scoring by getting Aurelio Rodriguez to ground into an inning-ending double play with the bases loaded.

The Orioles had taken a 4-4 lead in the top of the eighth on a two-run single by Tommy Davis.

Earlier, Freehan socked a pair of home runs for Detroit while Rich Coggins and ex-Tiger Jim Northrup had two-run homers for Baltimore.

The Yankees grabbed a 3-0 lead over the Brewers in the seventh inning. Elliott Maddox tripled home the first run and then scoring on Lou Piniella's single.

But the Brewers tied the score off Medich in the eighth on triples by Bob Heise and Don Money and a sacrifice fly by Mike Lum. Lum was up in the 10th when rookie Jack Lind led off with a single, moved to third on a sacrifice and, after a pair of walks, came home on Scott's single.

California rookie Frank Tanana first hit fourth shutout of the season, allowing the A's only six hits and striking out 10 to raise his record to 14-16.

Dave Goltz stopped Texas on hits, a doubled single by Toby Harrah off the glove of third baseman Eric Soderholm in the first inning and a clean triple by rookie Pete Mackanin in the ninth.

Jim Kaat, 21-12, posted his seventh consecutive victory by stopping Kansas City on six hits.

Rookie Jim Rice broke a 4-4 tie in the fourth inning with his first major league home run and Steve Barr picked up the victory in his major league debut.

Celebrate Comeback

DETROIT (AP) — "Unbelievable! We came back from the dead!" said Andy Etchebarren, his voice barely audible above the sirens and other clamor.

The Baltimore Orioles—the only of Milwaukee's conquests over New York Yankees—had just won their fifth American League East title in six years and they were celebrating.

"This is the most satisfying of the division titles because of the way we came back," said catcher Etchebarren, who doubled in the winning run in the Orioles' 7-6 afternoon triumph over Detroit.

Baltimore was eight games behind first-place Boston, Aug. 28, but since then have posted a 23-4 record.

"We were right fast under," added pitcher Dave McNally, one of nine 20 Orioles' hurlers on the good news.

Baltimore's afternoon victory over the Tigers only clinched a tie for the crown. The Orioles had to wait, perhaps the Yankees lost.

When Georges Scott knocked in the winning run for the Brewers, Etchebarren yelled: "We won!" and pitcher Earl Weaver leaped from his chair.

"Can you believe we won it," he shouted.

It's Knock Your Block Off In International Hockey

"Hurry up," he'd say, "they're going to take the face off century ice."

It was a bit of a surprise from the man of the house.

He usually said it but that was well.

That's how he set to know Foster Hewitt was all set to begin his play-by-play of the National Hockey League game from Maple Leaf Gardens in Toronto.

Some of you remember.

Those were the days before television, before Mr. Hewitt was making every game from the Gardens sound like the match of the century.

Turn off at centre field.

It all came back, Tuesday.

But this time, there was a thing around about it.

It was an ugly spectacle.

Players from Canada and the Soviet Union napping each other with hockey sticks.

Face off.

Then Hooky, a loss.

Where once there was a high level of competition, with the Canada-Soviet Union series, there is now a huge, important chasm attached to the whole thing.

Will it be over, whenever the opposing hockey sweaters be seriously injured?

Both sides were guilty yesterday.

It is criminal to use talented players become involved in nothing more than a battle of high sticks, but that's the rest of the long list of feats perpetrated in the name of hockey, Tuesday.

SAINTS CUT SEVEN

ST. PAUL, Minn. (AP) — Minnesota Fighting Saints cut seven players Tuesday, including former Canadian convict Paul Tardif. Tardif spent eight years in prison on two robbery charges, from their World Hockey Association roster. A Saints spokesman said Tardif, 30, has accepted an offer to report to the Thunder Bay team of the United States Hockey League. Also released were goalies Bruce Nelson, and Ed Hudanen; defencemen Jim Barefoot and Tom Machella, left wing John Young and right wing Reg Doucombe, who was on 11th round draft choice.

Expos Make Things Tough for Cards

Braves Help Dodgers Clinch First Place

BY THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

Los Angeles Dodgers won the National League West Division Tuesday night with help from Atlanta Braves.

The Braves eliminated Cincinnati Reds 7-1 and the Dodgers followed with an 8-4 victory over Houston Astros.

In Montreal, there was no joy for St. Louis Cardinals after they were beaten 5-2 by the Expos.

The loss dropped the Cards into a game behind Pittsburgh Pirates in the East. The Pirates clinched at least a tie for the division crown by beating Chicago Cubs 6-4.

This makes the ten a little "he" on," said Ken Schoendienst, the St. Louis manager.

In other National League games, Philadelphia Phillies trimmed New York Mets 3-1 and San Francisco Giants topped San Diego Padres 7-2.

Steve Garvey keyed two rallies, one with his 20th hit of the season, to lead Los Angeles over Houston.

Garvey dobbed home one run and Willie Crawford singled in another as the Dodgers took a 3-0 lead in the first inning.

Pinch-hitters Rick Auerbach and Lee Lacy delivered in the eleventh with singles in the sixth. Manager Walt Alston relieved Don Sutton after the fifth and allowed four runs on five hits in the four wins. Doug Rader's single and John Edwards' double scored two runs and Marshall walked home two more runs with the bases full.

The Dodgers scored two more runs in the seventh on Garvey's single.

Mike Jorgensen's two-run homer in the eighth inning gave Montreal its victory over St. Louis.

Willie Davis singled with two out off Bob Gibson, 11-13, in the Montreal eighth and stole second before Jorgensen belted his ninth homer of the season over the right field fence.

Darling base running by Bake McBride and single by Mike Tyson helped St. Louis break a 1-1 tie in the seventh.

McBride reached base when he was forced Joe Torre at second and Torre had walked off Mike Torrez. With Ken Reitz at the plate, McBride easily stole second.

The speedy Carrithers scored on a slow roller that Torre fielded but Torrez fanned Reitz on a single and Montreal's Bob Bailey to score McBride with the go-ahead run.

The Cardinals took a 1-0 lead in the top of fourth inning on Reggie Smith's leadoff double and a two-bitter going into the sixth but Bob Bailey off with a single to right-centre. Bailey went to third with Ron Fairly grounded to second and scored as Davis bounced to short.

Then Robertson's two-run homer in the eighth inning gave Pittsburgh a dramatic victory over Chicago. Manny Sanguillen singled with one out and Robertson, batting for Ed Kirkpatrick, trifled a bouncer into left with homer of the year—over the left field wall.

Pirate starter Jerry Reuss held a 3-2 lead into the seventh when Steve Swisher singled and Hernandez for a triple to score Monday and give the Cubs a 3-2 relief. Pittsburgh rallied for a run in its half of the seventh on a triple by pinch-hitter Paul Popovich off reliever Oscar Zamora and a run-scoring single by Rennie Stennett off Dave Lemanczyk.

Chris Speier belted a triple and a run-scoring double and scored three runs to lead San Francisco over San Diego.

Willie Montanez belted a two-run double in the first inning and Jim Lonborg made it stand up by pitching a five-hitter as Philadelphia defeated New York.

Saints Sweep A Pair from Chargers

By MARK BRETT

Quinte Secondary School had a good football weekend taking both junior and senior football games from Centennial Secondary in games played Tuesday.

In the senior games played at Quinte the Saints took an decisive 50-0 win from the Chargers. At Centennial the Junior Saints won 13-0.

Saints, led by a strong defensive unit and some good running up the middle, simply overpowered their opponents in the senior game.

Quinte with only seven players returning from last year's team, belied the experience but more than made up for it in enthusiasm.

Scott Bowes led the Quinte offence with two touchdowns with Jules Masterson picking up the other.

Masterson's TD came midway through the first half as he ran a Centennial punt back an yards to open the scoring. The point after attempt was good giving Quinte a 7-0 lead.

Bowes scored the second touch down on a great 36-yard run through the middle.

The point after attempt was blocked by a hard rush on the kicker.

Bowes gave 100 per cent throughout the game, catching passes and running for valuable yardage.

With the score 13-0 at the half, Quinte started to rely on the defence, forcing the Chargers into good scoring opportunities.

Bowes scored his second touch down after giving Quinte good yardage. The major came on a power drive through the middle of the Centennial defence, with the blockers leading the charge.

Centennial's main scoring threat came from the strong running of Bob Scully.

Tackle Andy Vos of the Saints was constantly breaking up the Centennial offence with solid tackling. Linebacker Rick Gray and Bill McFarlane defensive back also came in for the defence keeping the Chargers on their toes.

Coach Rick Lloyd of Quinte, quite pleased with the win, said: that even though only seven players have returned from last year the team is much more balanced."

In the junior game played at Centennial Ken Davey of Quinte scored the winning touchdown with 15 seconds remaining in the game.

Centennial with a minute remaining in the final quarter and the ball on their own 44-yard line tried to kick for the single point but the ball never made it.

Quinte regained possession and scored on a screen pass to Kenny who ran 35 yards for the major.

Quinte led 6-0 at the interval, having control of the ball for most of the half. Sandy Walcome scored the major on a short yardage quarterback sneak.

The tables were turned in the second half as the junior Chargers dominated the play scoring the tying touchdown on an end around sweep.

The Saints, playing their second game of the season again got good work from the defence.

"It was a touch physical game" said coach Barry Turpen" any time a game is decided in the last minute you can bet it's been a tough one."

Trojans March

Moira Secondary School Trojans marched their 16 win streak over Albert College, 54-0 on Tuesday in Bay of Quinte High School soccer action. The victory boosts John a points tie for first place with Belleville Collegiate Institute. Trojans have a superior goal average.

Terry Bylton, Ross MacLeod and Jeff Hockley each scored two each. Others to get to Rob Chase and Dave Fowell. Jim Asselstine picked up his second shutout in as many games.

Moira and BCI meet on the Trojans pitch, Friday with the winner taking the east division title, and meeting the second place team in the west in the playoffs.

The loser of the Moira-BCI tilt will probably finish second and face the top team in the west.

Moira was the last team to defeat BCI in senior play and that result took place in 1971. Bay of Quinte final.

Goals by Peter White, Don Wright and Tony Brewston carried Centre Hastings Secondary School Centennial to a 3-0 win over Albert in Friday action. Tree for the hosts was winger Jeff Gonzales.

BCI's Gary Adams is the top scorer in senior ranks with six goals, leading the way in the junior section is Centennial's Laurel Baldwin with three.

Capitals Show Well

BY THE CANADIAN PRESS

Washington Capitals, one of the National Hockey League's expansion teams, have only a six to show for four pre-season games, but they have made a respectable showing in every contest, including Tuesday night when they lost 4-3 in Philadelphia Flyers.

The Capitals rallied from a 3-0 deficit and forced the Stanley defending champions to overtime before Flyers' Brian Propp scored the winning goal.

In other NHL exhibition games, Boston Bruins defeated Chicago Black Hawks 4-3 and New York Islanders beat Minnesota North Stars 8-4.

In World Hockey Association exhibitions, New England Whalers shut out Quebec Nordiques 7-0 and San Diego Mariners made it their debut with a 5-4 victory over Vancouver Blazers.

Hamilton Fincups runnels over in the Ontario Hockey Association Junior A series this season.

Tuesday night, the first-place Fincups powered in 18 goals for a 10-1 win over Kingston Canadiens—their third victory in as many starts—in one of two series contests.

Oshawa Generals outscored Kitchener Rangers 7-6 in the other game.

At Hamilton, the Fincups, who now have scored 21 goals in their three games, got two goals each from Joe Cantil and Mike Federici and one each from Dale McCourt, Paul Lenz, Greg Classe, Glen Richardson, Dave Norris and John Bowker.

KINGSTON (CP) — Defenceman Jeff Crawford, a second round draft choice of the National Basketball Association Philadelphia 76ers in 1982, has signed a contract with the Kingston Canadians of the Ontario Hockey League.

Crawford, 21, a native of Kingston, played with the Canadians in 1980-81 before moving to the University of Maine where he played basketball for four years.

Bill Sherwin said Villemure was New York's No. 3 goalie behind Ed Giacomin, still drawn him said full-time to training and coaching harness horses.

"The Cat, Uncle Francis, the Rangers' greatest goalie and coach, perhaps said the guy best to call," Sherwin said.

Villemure contends Francis made a verbal agreement to re-sign his four-year contract when it was signed two years ago.

NHL Puts Names To Conferences

NEW YORK (CP) — The N... tional Hockey League is ... forthcoming season will have an entirely new look in name as well as fact.

Admittedly, it may seem a little awkward at first, but Doc Black, vice-president of the NHL, said Tuesday he feels ... ners approved a committee's ... own names in hockey as the ... IL is doing.

Instead of using geographical designations such as East and West for names of conference ... d divisions—a common prac... ce in pro sports—the NHL will ... se the names of trophies and ... members of hockey's Hall of ... me to identify its new 18-... east, two-conference, four-div... ion setup. The regular season ... starts Oct. 9.

NHL president Clarence ... Campbell said the board of gov... recommendation to use two fa... mous trophies to identify the ... conferences and four great ... names in hockey history to ... identify the divisions.

In the process, the NHL is ... creased the regular all players' ... by almost $200,000 to ... $1,472,000.

The two-division conference ... will be known as the Prince of ... Wales Conference, in one ... other, and with two divisions, ... the Clarence Campbell Con... ference.

Black said that under the four-division setup it was impossible to come up with true geographic designations.

"We worked harder on this than anything else," he said. "The divisions will be named after four Hall of Fame builders in the NHL—Charles F. Adams, James Norris Jr., Conn Smythe and Lester Patrick. ... the NHL broke down the line-ups this way.

Clarence Campbell Conference

Lester Patrick Division: Atlanta Flames, New York Islanders, New York Rangers, Philadelphia Flyers.

James Norris Division: Chicago Black Hawks, Kansas City Scouts, Minnesota North Stars, St. Louis Blues, Vancouver Canucks.

Prince of Wales Conference

Conn Smythe Division: Detroit Red Wings, Los Angeles Kings, Montreal Canadiens, Pittsburgh Penguins, Washington Capitals.

Charles F. Adams Division: Boston Bruins, Buffalo Sabres, California Golden Seals, Toronto Maple Leafs.

Washington and Kansas City are new expansion franchises.

Last season there were two divisions—East and West—of 18 teams. The winner of the East took the Prince of Wales Trophy and the West won the Clarence Campbell Bowl.

But with four divisions, the NHL was faced with the dilemma of changing the two names or creating two new ones.

To the new playoff structure, the teams will compete for their own divisional championship and their positions in the playoffs. In addition, the first will compete for their conference championship.

The club with the most points in each conference at the end of the season will be the conference winner.

A team could win both divisional and conference titles with each player getting a total of four playoff rewards with $4,000 for each player on the winning divisional teams last season.

Phosphate Deposit Lies Beneath Spanish Sahara

MADRID (Reuter) — The Spanish Sahara is an arid desert colony on the northwest coast of Africa. But beneath its sun-drying sands lies a vast mineral wealth that has led to a bitter dispute with neighboring Morocco, the United States and Spain in the United Nations.

The Maghreb states of Morocco, Mauritania and Algeria showed little interest in the sun-scorched wasteland until the early 1960s, when rumors began circulating that prospectors discovered one of the world's largest phosphate deposits buried near the surface.

Morocco, the most vociferous claimant to the 102,000-square-mile colony with a mainly nomadic population of only 70,000, has intensified a diplomatic campaign to establish ownership.

Moroccan leaders have said armed conflict may erupt if Spain does not hand over the colony promptly.

Until recently Spain was content to sit and watch Morocco, Mauritania and Algeria quarrel among themselves over who should inherit the rich desert. Spain's position seemed fairly secure as long as the Maghreb nations failed to agree.

But this year Morocco appeared to have gained the upper hand with Mauritania and Algeria virtually silenced — but is still simmering. Then Mauritania, a former French colony which gained independence in 1960, despite Moroccan claims it rightfully belongs to its claims.

The influential Moroccan opposition newspaper L'Opinion called the Mauritanian bid "an important colonialist conspiracy against Morocco" and "a new maneuvre to undermine Morocco's territorial integrity by separating from it, as in 1960, another part of its national territory".

The outburst was backed by Moroccan leaders and once again Mauritania kept silent.

News concerning the colony was declared officially secret in Spain two years ago and when Morocco Prime Minister Ahmed Osman came to consult Spanish leaders on the future of the colony this month no details of the discussions leaked out.

The fact that the talks were held in Madrid, after Spanish ruling Francisco Franco had sent a message to King Hassan from his sickbed, indicated that Spain was taking Moroccan warning signals seriously.

Spain has heeded United Nations resolutions calling for a referendum in the colony and offered the inhabitants a large degree of self-determination.

Last September Gen. Franco outlined Spain's plans for the future of the territory

Popular Play At Napanee

If a good mystery is your cup of tea, it might be worth the drive to Napanee to see, in Lennox Theatre Guild's production of Agatha Christie's The Mousetrap.

The curtain rises this Friday evening at 8:15 p.m. on the play, directed by Miss Margaret Davidson. Bob Deadchon. Featured players Lawton, Carrie Holmes, Jessie Quist, Percy Weir, Nancy Diamond, Babs Dale and Malcolm Smith.

The Mousetrap broke all long-run box office records when it was presented on the London stage. It will play in the Lennox Theatre, Napanee on Oct. 4, 5, 10, 11, 12, and 18.

in a letter sent to the general assembly of the Spanish Sahara, the advisory body representing the tribal and nomadic populaces.

France offered a stated under which the people would enjoy internal autonomy and be recognized as the owners of the territory's wealth, with Spain retaining responsibility for defence and foreign affairs.

But Moroccans complain that the largely wandering people would not vote in a referendum, fearing that they would see any results of Spanish stock.

Morocco, which gained independence from Spain and France in 1956, says the Spanish proposals would set up a "puppet state" under Spanish surveillance.

The Saharan phosphate bed is of extreme value because the mineral needs little processing to be converted into high quality fertilizer, much in demand in a hungry world.

Last year Morocco was the largest exporter of phosphates with 17 million tons but the Spaniards shipped 2.3 million tons from the colony and are expected to increase this to 10 million by the end of 1976.

Unlike other Arab nations, Morocco lacks vast oil resources and political observers say this country is eager to control the price and flow of phosphates to gain influence in the international scene.

Spain retains a 15,000-man army in the Sahara, mainly formed by tough foreign legionaries, and observers believed it unlikely that Morocco can troops would take on such a force, especially in a wide-open terrain unsuited to guerrilla warfare.

But Spain, which is considered a close friend of the Arab nations, is obviously worried about the mounting pressure. The Moroccans improved relations with the countries which fought against Israel when King Hassan sent troops to the Golan Heights before the last Middle East war.

A sustained Moroccan campaign would put Spain in a delicate position with its Arab friends.

French Inflation Likely 14 Per Cent

PARIS (CP) — Despite repeated promises by President Valery Giscard d'Estaing, few observers in France believe the country's inflation rate in 1975 will be below 14 per cent.

The president has maintained that application of the economic stabilization program he announced in mid-June will reduce the price rise to less than nine per cent.

However, experts from the Organization for Economic Co-Operation and Development (OECD), a body based in Paris, discard the claims of his finance minister, Jean-Pierre Fourcade, who, believes in France may, with a bit of luck, manage a 14-per-cent inflation rate.

The five-and-a-half-per-cent consumer prices could reach 14 per cent but it will be higher if a moderation does not materialize in the second half.

The moderation was to be brought about by the stabilization program, coinciding with a drop in prices anticipated by the experts.

However, in June the price index rose 1.1 per cent, only one-tenth of a per cent less decline was clearly short of government expectations.

In addition, the president has admitted this slight fall in the price index resulted from lower prices for some international raw materials, reflecting a slowdown in world economic growth in the first half.

During the first six months French prices rose by 4.75 per cent compared with 1.5 per cent in the last half of 1973.

France and other industrialized countries experienced lower production, resulting in the reduction of their imported exports, which, experts said, caused prices to rise.

They predicted the trend to-ward lower prices for raw materials will not continue into June, 1975. The world economy is expected to grow by 2.5 to three per cent before the end of the year and increase at a higher rate in the next half. This would cause prices to rise.

Other indicators show that the price increase in France, cited by Giscard will probably not materialize.

A study by the National Institute of Statistics and Economic Studies has shown that a large percentage of businesses expect no increases in selling prices.

In addition, prices in the services industries, which already have increased substantially because of the high cost of oil, will rise again before the year is over. Gas and energy prices rose during August and the end of the month by two and six per cent.

The government has also authorized an increase in rents which may reach about seven per cent.

Giscard said in his first news conference as chief of state in July that the OECD might have erred in their assessment of France's economic outlook.

"The objectives chosen by the government appear to be

Your Horoscope

By BERNICE BEDE OSOL

THURSDAY, OCTOBER 5-6

Aries (March 21-April 19) — Something regarding finances is likely to get you a bit uptight. After you make things through you'll feel a lot better.

Taurus (April 20-May 20) — Don't let petty irritants get to you. Remember that you can't please everyone, so please yourself and those friends today. They'll be the ones who will be supportive, either.

Gemini (May 21-June 20) — There's a lot more opportunity to something that you're involved with than you think. Just take a hard second look.

Cancer (June 21-July 22) — You're more interested in dealing with several individuals at once than you are on a one-to-one basis. It's a good day for socializing.

Leo (July 23-Aug. 22) — A minor but frustrating situation which will be removed through a lucky circumstance. That will make you want to address it sooner.

Virgo (Aug. 23-Sept. 22) — Don't be bothered by the little details in an important decision you'll make. Get the big picture, and then fit in the parts.

Libra (Sept. 23-Oct. 23) — Is a romance on your mind? Then don't let anyone or anything get in your way when you expect. You'll get a better deal if you let the other person have his or her way.

Scorpio (Oct. 24-Nov. 22) — Don't try to over-control situations today. They are likely to work out on their own, fortunately for you if left on their own.

Sagittarius (Nov. 23-Dec. 21) — There's a feeling you have that your family who might do best the right person to help you with a problem is a little talkative.

Capricorn (Dec. 22-Jan. 19) — Follow your own hunches today rather than listen to a friend who may not be as lucky with something as you would be.

Aquarius (Jan. 20-Feb. 19) — This is a good time to try to wrap up any deal you have where some bits of material value is an issue.

Pisces (Feb. 20-March 20) — Discard your small, inner insecurity. Give more thought and attention to someone who you want to accomplish.

Newfoundland Fishermen Sure Times to Improve

BELL ISLAND, NFLD. (CP) — There's a promise in the splinters of wood from a shattered fishing boat that the worst of times could be the beginning of the best of times for the Newfoundland fishery.

By reaching through them to the Dominion days of the 1900s—when the cod seemed to be had with a four-inch skirt and twine for a year, like mosquito nets.

"We won't see those days again, that's enough," he said, recalling his memory of the 1930s.

Coming from a man who lost his fish stage and what he reckoned to living on a drizzly, exposed headland with his wife and six children, the words are remarkable.

But Mr. Smith, 52, is one of the few men who have survived this depression - ridden community, known fairly to hardly anywhere to go but up.

It's a lobster season just beg to the end of July valued barely a fishermen by destroyed traps and trees.

When the ice had gone, the best part of the weather, the best and there were no fish to catch. Total fish landings in Newfoundland in the first half of 1974 were 278 million pounds, down from 456 million pounds in the first six months of 1973.

For Mr. Smith the prospect was severe. He and his partners, who work part-time, had a boat, a lobster and cod gear stolen from them by the ice. But Bell Island is no place to retire from the north.

"I had six blistin' cans, fast fish and salt fish prices have remained steady while those for fresh fish have declined substantially.

Mr. Smith said he may go back to fishing but added that the business is very little economic, is very little to improve fishermen in the industry.

"It is hard for a man to put in all his blood the work he has been doing since he was 11 years old, through and into his early manhood to return when times improve.

That's because 1974, as bad as it seems, does not compare to Mr. Smith's hard years. He remembers of the time when his family existed on the seven-cents-day relief.

He recalled, without a trace of rancour, the Depression times when his family was cut off "the dole" for 19 days without knowing why and his mother had to collect buckets of seawater to trade for bread for her children.

The meagre flow of welfare had stopped when Mr. Smith's older brother still had $1.65 owing him on the local fish company's books.

HENRY VIII'S SECRET DAUGHTER — F. W. KENYON.

Many books have been written about the reign of Henry VIII. This latest by F. W. Kenyon deals with his last years while married to Katherine Parr. The story discusses the possibility that Princess Lady Jane Grey was the illegitimate daughter of Henry Tudor, and asks such questions as: Why were portraits of Lady Jane Grey often mistaken for those of Mary Tudor? Why was the marriage to Henry's son Edward, which seems so ideal, never performed? In his will, young Edward VI bequeathed the crown to Jane Grey, ahead of either of his sisters Mary and Elizabeth. An interesting theory by a master of the historical novel, F. W. Kenyon.

THE LIVELY SPIRITS OF PROVENCE — Jamie Brown.

This is not your usual type of travel book; rather it is a loving memoir of a couple's year spent in Provence in the south of France. With very little money, Jamie Brown and Linda decide to go back to a part of France which Jamie had visited years before. They rented a solid little house among the vineyards in a high mountain village called Cigondas. The author describes with warmth the colorful village characters, from the village baker who watches the rise early to take his bread, to the policeman, who only wears his sparkly uniform once a year, and the unpredictable blabbermouth. The couple find unexpected pleasures, from meeting each day for fresh produce and meat to exploring the countryside with its breathtaking views.

"A HOUSE AT WAR — Charles MacKinnon.

This is the first in a series of novels, the chronicle of a West Highland family between 1898 and 1974. The first novel centres on the eldest son Alasdair, a professional soldier whose whole life has been a preparation for the holocaust of the Great War of 1914-1918. Each novel is a complete work in itself and this, the first, recounts the start of the events which attend the wealthy "Merchant Bob" MacInnes and his five sons.

THE WISEST FOOL — Nigel Tranter.

Nigel Tranter's latest novel is about the final king of England and Scotland, the son of Mary Queen of Scots, James VI of Scotland who was also James I of England. After the long series of Scottish civil wars — a century-and-a-half and forced regicide, James returned in triumph to London but treasured Scotland above all. Indeed England was never the same again. Yet a case could be made that James Stewart was the best monarch England ever had. He reigned for 23 years, survived innumerable plots, and never went to war.

I CAME TO THE HIGHLANDS — Velda Johnson.

Set in Scotland during the tumultuous years after Bonnie Prince Charlie's defeat at Culloden in 1746, this is the story of a girl among hostile strangers. Elisabeth Logan was eighteen when she met Charles Edward Stuart, the royal fugitive, while traveling with her father to his boyhood home. Her father had been banished from the American colony to which he had immigrated years before and, even though ill and destitute, still seemed to be reluctant to return to his ancestral home. Upon her father's death, Elizabeth had no choice but to stay and work at the castle where it became plain that someone harbored a deadly hatred for her. An exciting and suspenseful tale.

COPAN, Okla. (AP) — A stuck toilet dumped thousands of gallons of water into sewer mains, requiring shipments of two tank trucks to replenish the town's water supply. A town spokesman estimated that the toilet, located in a school, "flushed about 40,000 gallons into the sewer before it was stopped." School ended in May.

Consumers Foot Bill

Farm Policy Mixups Costing Over Billion

OTTAWA (CP) — Agriculture policy in the country is a hodgepodge of conflicting bits and pieces which costs consumers more than $1 billion a year in taxes and higher prices, says an unpublished report prepared for a government advisory agency.

It warns that consumers will pay even higher prices than necessary in the future if farm policies are not changed. Marketing boards, are free to set "artificially high prices" which hurt low-income consumers.

No one wins under the present system, the report says. Consumers pay unduly high prices, the higher prices push up land and other costs and farmers must then increase prices again to recover their higher costs.

The report urges the government to lower prices and provide direct aid to farmers rather than allowing the present marketing board system to continue simply because boards "cost governments no money".

A copy of the report, dated March, 1974, and prepared by marketing professor J. D. Forbes of the University of British Columbia, was obtained Wednesday by The Canadian Press after a Conservative (East) asked Agriculture Minister Eugene Whelan in the Commons when the report would be made public.

The minister replied that it will be tabled within a few weeks, but that he had "some knowledge that it's finalized yet." The report was prepared for the Canadian Consumer Council, and a spokesman for that government advisory agency said it would not be back from the printers "until the middle of the month."

Without referring directly to the report, Mr. Whelan told reporters he would not be surprised by criticism of marketing boards Mr. Justice Forbes, whom he described as biased.

"It's the same as getting a big-game hunter to write a report on whether safaris in Africa should be discontinued."

Nonetheless, the minister will meet one of the report's central recommendations in an announcement expected today. He said he will reverse his previous stand and recommend a consumer representative on the National Farm Products Marketing Council which governs all national marketing agencies and promised other steps that will show "that I'm prepared to go a lot further."

There now are two national marketing agencies set up to control the national supply and price of eggs and turkeys. Another is planned for chickens.

But there are about 100 various provincial marketing boards that control the marketing of farm goods.

The Forbes report says such boards benefit about 20 per cent of the country's farmers who produce and sell 56 per cent of the food.

But despite their power, higher prices eventually come back to haunt producers in the form of higher costs.

As well, the national marketing agencies tend to restrict interprovincial competition and "protect inefficient producers" at most quotas, similarly, tend to keep out cheaper food and how domestic prices high.

The report also says that Canadian farmers are not poor.

"This is of course an inflammatory statement in some of the spokesmen for the agricultural sector do not realize it truly reflects the income position of these Canadian farmers who produce the bulk of our output."

High land values and capital investment in machinery mean many small farmers are relatively well off.

The report adds that there is little room for growth in the country, adding the trend to fewer, larger farms "will not be reversed nor should it."

Hanged Prisoner Had Hands Tied

TORONTO (CP) — The Star quotes two former members of the staff of Don Jail here as saying they do not believe Don Rasflash, 29, found hanged in his cell Oct. 5, committed suicide.

In a copyright story, the newspaper says Rasflash's hands were tied behind his back with bootlaces when he was found hanging from a towel on a cell door.

Two fellow-prisoners, Billy Wise, 24, and Lenny Callaway, 22, are quoted as saying they watched Rasflash take the laces out of his jeans, tie them together and braid them before talking into an empty cell and hanging a blanket over the doorway.

Reporters who found Wise and Callaway in Waynesburg, Pa., quoted them as saying that "he did just figured it was suicide" but "I don't see how he could have" jumped off a bed that was at the far side of the cell.

Gary Dassy, 22, a former guard who was off duty the night of the death, told The Star:

"You don't climb up a door with your hands tied behind your back. I think somebody hung him."

Earlier statements by Mr. Dassy to the Star, alleging the existence of a Don Jail "goon squad" for beating prisoners, are under investigation by Metropolitan Toronto police on instructions from the province's attorney-general.

Mr. Masserbon, a registered nurse who attended to Rasflash after he was cut down, is quoted by The Star as saying she does not believe he committed suicide. Miss Masserbon, who had joined Mr. Dassy in charges concerning beatings, quit her jail job last month after the guard, a friend, was fired.

Turner Likely Head Of Economic Board

WASHINGTON (CP) — Canadian Finance Minister John Turner, considered the likely choice to lead a new international economic policy council, said Wednesday countries must move quickly to solve problems which might lead to a worldwide recession.

The International Monetary Fund (IMF), holding its annual meeting here this week, has established a policy-making group and agreed to name Turner its chief executive or chairman of the committee. It is to hold its first meeting today to elect a chairman and deal with other organizational details.

Turner told a news conference Wednesday that balance-of-payments deficits and surpluses cumulated by countries paying sharply higher prices for imports—constitute "the" urgent problem. Estimates of the combined debt this year range up to $30 billion.

He said there must be co-operation in using up procedures to deal with these deficits which "if not resolved properly within the next year or a year could, in my view, provoke recessionary conditions."

The new committee being established is the successor to the Committee of 20 established two years ago to draft proposals for reform in the international monetary system. But since then, events have moved more slowly than expected and there still is no new structure.

The new committee will have broader duties—its scope will include trade issues as well—being today—and Turner in his address to the IMF gave us his views.

He said the committee should look into ways of dealing with currency values and currency exchange operations.

"It should provide the political forum in which these problems can be mounted against resort to policies by some member countries that are damaging or harmful to others."

The "duty of meshing countries' fiscal and monetary policies should be high on the agenda."

PM Says Quebec Generous

OTTAWA (CP) — Prime Minister Trudeau reaffirmed today that although he has some reservations about Quebec's bill 22, he still thinks Quebec treats its English-speaking minority better than the Francophone groups.

"We have some reservations concerning the bill," he said before going into a cabinet meeting. "Yet I don't have reservations toward the idea that Quebec should be an essentially Francophone province. . . ."

He was asked to comment on a published report that indicated he had endorsed Bill 22—which makes French the working language of Quebec—in a speech to the Canadian Bar Association.

"I haven't seen the newspapers . . . but my speech speaks for itself."

He told the House during Throne speech debate Wednesday that he personally regretted the legislation, which he said "seems to run against contemporary trends" toward bilingualism.

He said that Quebec treats its Anglophones generously, and that despite the over-all implications of the legislation it still preserves substantial programs for English-language education.

Change of Lifestyles Forecast by Iranian

WASHINGTON (AP) — The increasing cost of oil will force industrialized countries to change their lifestyles, says Hushang Ansary, Iranian finance minister.

Speaking at the World Bank and International Monetary Fund conference, Ansary said the end of cheap oil may force some countries to change their consumption and production patterns.

"Once cheap oil is no longer available, you have to do something: either lower your standard of living, forget about excessive consumption and about a certain important basis of your economy, or you have to increase productivity, or both," Ansary said.

"But how can you do it if you have social problems in your 'permissive society' . . . with strikes every other day?"

Ansary does not consider himself the spokesman for all oil producers. He said he spoke Tuesday as a finance minister and as governor of the World Bank for Iran.

"The industrial countries must recognize that as cheap oil and other raw materials are no longer available, the attention calls either for a change in lifestyles or an effort to do away with social ills and increase productivity," he said.

Nixon's Counsellor May Join Accused

WASHINGTON (AP) — Federal prosecutors have linked one new name and may add others to the conspiracy case that has brought five Nixon loyalists to trial on Watergate-related criminal charges.

The claim of "newly-discovered evidence" was made to U.S. District Judge John Sirica, engaged for the third straight day today in trying to select an unbiased jury for the months of legal in coming.

The five defendants, John Ehrlichman, H. R. Haldeman, John Mitchell, Kenneth Parkinson and Robert Mardian, appeared to take the small's pace in stride, each keeping busy in his own way.

"The prosecutors' memorandum said the new evidence made it necessary to add one co-conspirator to the list drawn up by the Watergate grand jury, it did not name the person.

But a source close to the case confirmed the man is Richard Moore, the former special counsel to Nixon, who testified at the Senate Watergate hearings that he urged John Dean to tell the cover up story to the president.

Critic of Abortion Helps Try Morgentaler

OTTAWA (CP) — Despite a defence motion that he be excluded, Mr. Justice Louis Philippe de Grandpre will preside over Supreme Court of Canada hearings today in an appeal by Dr. Henry Morgentaler against his conviction for performing an illegal abortion.

Montreal lawyer Claude Sheppard asked the court Wednesday to exclude Judge de Grandpre because of an April, 1973 speech he made prior to being named to the court in which he said abortion should never be made legal in Canada.

Then president of the Canadian Bar Association, Judge de Grandpre told delegates the Quebec speech as saying that "to kill a fetus was murder."

In turning down the motion, Chief Justice Mark Laskin said many judges prior to going to the bench expressed themselves on legal issues.

Mr. Sheppard also said the judge had taken sides on the emotional abortion debate, and it might be difficult for him to hear the case because of the extremely strong views.

Chief Justic Laskin said the high court was not concerned with the debate but with the legal issues involved.

Dr. Morgentaler was among the spectators who crowded the small courtroom where the appeal is being heard.

He flashed a v-for-victory sign for photographers when he left the Supreme Court building after the first day of hearings.

New BNA Act Repatriation Bid Pledged

OTTAWA (CP) — Prime Minister Trudeau promised Wednesday he do his best to give Canada control over its own constitution.

The British North America Act, the backbone of the constitution laid down by Britain in 1867, can be amended only by the British Parliament.

There have been many attempts since Mackenzie King was prime minister, from 1921 to 1926, to give Canada control over the basic law, but all have collapsed in procedural wrangles.

"Everywhere, everyone has always wanted to have this done," Mr. Trudeau told the Commons, "and yet we have always seemed to have failed."

The issue also was raised Wednesday by Opposition Leader Robert Stanfield in Throne speech debate.

Mr. Stanfield said Canada remains a country that is independent, but which has no power to amend its own constitution.

He said he didn't think it was "too much to ask" that the government strive for the power to amend the constitution.

Prime Minister Trudeau said he agrees wholeheartedly that change is overdue.

Mr. Trudeau said he will seek the necessary provincial co-operation "with great determination" and that if no better formule for amendment can be found, he will propose Parliament adopt a formula agreed to, with one exception, at the 1964 constitutional conference in Victoria.

The exception was Quebec, which had wanted sovereignty over its own social services.

Mr. Trudeau said Wednesday that some way of satisfying Quebec's constitutional requirements is necessary in a harmonious Canada.

Harmony would be facilitated if this country "need no longer have recourse to Great Britain . . . when we have to debate any solution to political issues that concern every one of us."

He also said he is determined to have more French-speaking Canadians in the federal public service.

He said many cases the family of the person convicted and fined suffers the most and added that punishing alternative forms of punishment.

Rate Increase Delayed

It will be at least six months before Bell Telephone's proposed boosts increases will be felt in the Belleville area, George Chandler, the Bell manager here said Wednesday.

Recently Bell Telephone won its bid to increase rates which will mean about a five-per-cent increase on the average bill and an additional ten-cent, a-minute on the Distance calls. The rate increase, effective Sept. 15, also provides for doubling the 16-cent-tariff on pay telephones.

Mr. Thompson said the local office would be conducting a survey of the 106 booths in the Belleville exchange and by the spring will make recommendations to the Canadian Transport Commission which booths qualify for the rate increase.

Phone booths which are the primary form of communication where other communication equipment is not available will remain at the old rate of 10 cents.

Also standing in the way of carry rate increases is the need to install new equipment that will handle 20-cent charges. These new sets are expected to be installed in 1975, said Mr. Thompson.

Residents Discuss City's Birthday

With only four years to go, Belleville has begun the countdown to its centennial year celebrations.

Representatives from most organizations in the community met at Centennial Secondary School Wednesday night to brainstorm on ideas for the celebration. Chairman of the committee is George Thompson, who dispersed the representatives to different classrooms where they considered ideas in several categories.

Centennial events were grouped under the following headings: history, arts, civic events, education, commerce, labor, homecoming, youth and service clubs. Also, subcommittees will be formed to handle events like sport and senior citizens' activities.

Among the diversified topics named were rejuvenation of downtown, celebrations of 1878 crafts and industrial processes, a ball, and pageant, restoration of old buildings, involvement of students in preparing publicity material for the year, and a centennial regatta.

Hasty Pees in a Parade

The Hastings and Prince Edward Regiment will be one of 13 reserve units marching on Sunday in the first major military parade held in Toronto since 1967.

More than 1,000 reservists will march to the strains of 11 military bands from Moss Park Armoury to Nathan Phillips Square where command of the Toronto Militia District — the largest in Canada — will pass from Col. R. W. Lewis to Col. J. M. Lowndes, of Toronto.

The parade will bring together the Hasty Pees, the Ontario Regiment, the Queen's York Rangers, the Governor General's Horse Guards, the 7th Toronto Regiment Royal Canadian Artillery, the 2nd Field Engineer Regiment, the Queen's Own Rifles of Canada, the Royal Regiment of Canada, the 48th Highlanders, the Toronto Scottish Regiment and the Toronto Service Battalion.

The Hasty Pees, in tri-service green, will travel from Belleville and Peterborough by bus, leaving from Belleville Armory at 8 a.m. Sunday.

New Record?

Belleville citizens presented Alderman Jean Smith with a much-appreciated birthday present on the first anniversary of the city's paper recycling program. Alderman Smith, program coordinator, reports a 38-ton monthly pickup record was set in September. "People are becoming organized and we're rolling now," she says. At 8:30 a.m. Thursday paper pickup man George Barnes' packer truck was almost full and he was getting ready for a second tour.

Potency Is An Important Quality

No medicine can be really effective in curing an illness, if it has, by the time it reaches your home, lost its potency. And as certain foods can deteriorate if not kept properly, so can medicines.

Some drugs must be refrigerated to retain their potency — such as insulin, certain eye drops and many types of vitamins. With other medicines exposure to light is the culprit and special containers must be used to keep light out.

Students Learn Fire Prevention

PICTON — Kindergarten and Grade 1 pupils from Hallowell Township School took their turns Wednesday as firemen were guiding a yellow horse during a tour of Picton fire hall.

Assisted by firefighter Will Courtney, the children trained the horse, as the latter backed outside the hall.

Mr. Courtney explained the use of the dalmo's siren and blew its siren for the youngsters.

Fire Chief Leonard Tripp asked the students indoors to demonstrate the special pump used for grass fires, its said brooms and bags were also used to bring blazes under control.

Clothing, such as the protective helmets worn by firefighters, was displayed by Chief Tripp. The dalmo's water by firemen when they enter smoke filled buildings also were demonstrated.

The air-packs permit firemen to breathe from tanks equipped to hold about 1,800 pounds of air. The air-packs are equipped with timers that ring when about two minutes of air remains in the tank. This signal warns the firefighter when to leave a smoke-filled building.

Students were shown the alarm system at the fire hall that registers calls from the county home for the aged, Prince Edward Collegiate Institute and other public buildings. Head Office of this system and the alarm signal is automatic.

When a call rings at the station the address of the fire call is written on a blackboard where arriving volunteers can swiftly spot it.

A clock near the telephone is stopped by the call to give accurate record of the time of the fire alarm and the siren is blown.

Chief Tripp told students when the station's telephone is picked up there is automatic connection with the homes of 20 firefighters.

If one of the firemen's line is engaged, the call is automatically interrupted by the voice of a firefighter giving the address of the alarm.

The Picton fire department also used a radar unit in hooked into a mutual aid system including Bellleville, Trenton, Tweed and Madoc. If additional equipment is needed it can be obtained through this program.

Chief Tripp reminded the students that next week is annual Fire Prevention Week and stressed the importance of keeping the number of their local fire department posted in their homes.

He observed that many persons do not know where to call in a fire emergency or telephone panicked and forget. He displayed special stickers with the department's number that can be placed on or near the telephone.

The fire-chief said following the tour, that about 1,200 Prince Edward County students visit the fire station annually, the visits are encouraged at all times, not just during fire prevention week.

"We find the time to train children about fire safety is when they are children. That is the time to make them fire conscious," he said.

Chief Tripp added that each year the fire station receives hundreds of letters from students who have visited the hall. Many contain versions of the information supplied by Chief Tripp and his firefighters, demonstrating that the tours are a learning experience.

Eager Eyes

Sophiasburgh Central School children were eager-beavers Wednesday as they toured the Picton fire department and listened to fire safety tips. Chief Leonard Tripp here shows youngsters the various types of protective clothing worn by a firefighter.

Local Gardens Honored For Attractive Displays

Twenty-two residences out of almost 80 places nominated for this year's Belleville Garden Club Citation Awards contest have won recognition by the judges and now sport the brilliant emblem on their doors.

Homes were judged for both well kept lawns and floral plantings of evergreens, shrubs and flowers and those with sufficient number of points receive the trillium award.

Family residences qualifying for awards were: 20 Adams Cres.; 49 Janlyn Cres., Ameliasburgh; 21 Fairview Dr.; 1328 MacDonald Ave.; Brown, 49 Robertson Lane; Burrows, 12 Walmsley Place; Burrows, 321 John St.; Bruyea, 235 Albert St.; Beer, 128 Ann St.; David; 7 Eastwood Park Dr.; Gray, 6 Keller Dr.; Hiles, 36 Foster Ave.; Hart, 25 Glendale Rd.; Maxime, 33 Southwood Cres.; McIntosh, 21 Reynolds Cres.; Norridge, 220 Herchimer Ave.; Post, 215 Charles St.; Reynolds, 226 Bleecker Ave.; Snider, 44 Sidney St.; Stack, 1021 Wallbridge-Loyalist Rd.; Sinclair St.; Topp, 19 Grant Rd. and Williamson, 94 Selina.

Contest public relations man Ken David in announcing the results noted that only six winners were repeaters from last year, while the 22 receiving awards represented all parts of the city.

Mr. David discounted the argument that people with financial means have an advantage in the trillium award. "This is not entirely true," Mr. David said, "because anyone can have a beautiful place with little expenditure, a little thought and work."

In the industrial and commercial division, three places were nominated and all won recognition. They were Brooks Bond Foods, O'Brien Mineral Paints and Mr. James Whitney School.

Training Centre Opens

Hastings County Board of Education put its new continuing education training room into use for the first time Wednesday for a workshop for members of the County Council for Leadership in Educational Administration.

The room, on the first floor of the education centre on Ann St., is designed to teach new conditions their craft, and provide in service training for other staff members. It has areas covered in different floor and wall finishes for demonstration purposes, a wall covered with examples of all the supplies and equipment used in the county and a library with 2,000 worth of reference books.

Caretaker of plant, Keith Hawkins, told the visitors that the purpose of the training centre is to improve staff performance, minimize the increase in labor costs and improve staff morale.

He said the board had more than two million square feet of floors to maintain, and 600 acres of land, two of them developed. Operation and maintenance cost is $1 million. This is $143 for each pupil place, of which $76 is spent on labor.

Maintenance costs rose from 49 cents to 70 cents a square foot during the board's first five years of operation and increased by a further 30 per cent in 1976.

Hospital Gets Bursary

Belleville General Hospital plans to make education bursaries available to its staff each year.

It's all thanks to the late Gardiner Duff, a Bellevillian who left funds from his estate to the hospital.

The bequest will amount to about $21,000, BGH board of governors was told recently.

The bursary plan proposed by the board would provide two yearly educational grants of $1,000. In special circumstances, one bursary of $2,000 may be granted.

Awards will depend on qualifications, seniority and future usefulness to the hospital of the educational programs.

The plan has to be approved by city council and Hastings County council.

"This has been a most generous bequest and the hospital and staff will benefit from it," said board member Dr. B. E. Morgan.

Taking Their Time

The 5,800 teachers employed by Ontario's 23 Community Colleges are forbidden by law to go on strike.

So they will do just that Oct. 8.

Only they won't call it a strike. It is the first of a series of "study sessions." Semantics plays a big role in labor relations these days. If one is not permitted by law to use the strike weapon to back up contract demands, he may book off sick or work to rule.

Or he may take the day off for a "study session."

This is one annoying side of a situation that will see most of Loyalist College's 800 students without classroom direction Oct. 8, and for whatever other days their teachers feel free to flaunt the law.

But the real culprit in this case is the provincial department of labor. How does it justify the prolongation of negotiations that began May 8, 1973 to determine 1972 pay scales still being unresolved in October, 1974?

This country can still get along without wage and price controls. But what it needs desperately is a universal set of guidelines to eliminate the long drawn-out labor disputes that paralyze grain shipments, strand our tourists, or interrupt our children's education.

Negotiations to renew contracts should begin BEFORE they expire, not after, as seems to be so often the case.

And definite time limits on the bargaining process need to be established. Some form of binding arbitration, with both sides of a dispute adequately represented, is the other ingredient required to streamline an economy that has already lost over two million days of work because of labor disputes this year.

Anyone for Tennis?

Belleville's Recreation Department dealt a vicious volley to many persons hoping to enroll in this winter's indoor tennis program at Ben Bleecker Auditorium.

Registrations, it was advertised, would be limited to 55 full-time players and 25 "play" players.

No memberships would be accepted by telephone, leading one to believe that the recreation department felt anyone interested enough in participating in the program at least should have to make a personal appearance at the Pinnacle Street office.

Nobody minded waiting in a lineup of 120 people down the recreation office aisle. That is, not until they were informed the program had been all booked up.

It seems one person could register as many others as he wished for winter tennis.

One young lad who was seen passing eight coupons over the counter for tennis buffs whose legs apparently were too weak to walk, but strong enough to play a couple of sets a week.

This entire registration procedure was a debacle. The first person at the recreation office door that morning could theoretically have signed up for himself and 79 friends and that would have been that.

There could at least have been a maximum of two registrations permitted per person. Any reasonable limit would have been fairer than none at all.

The Recreation Department will be pleased with themselves. They have enriched city coffers by $1,475.

On the other hand, they have bought themselves a costly bit of ill-will from a lot of people who have supported city-sponsored programs in the past.

About That 70 Per Cent

A spokesman for the ministry of transportation and communications says that about 70 per cent of those who try driver examination tests in Belleville are successful.

After an afternoon's cruise through city traffic, one can only scratch one's head and muse: how quickly they forget.

Cocktails and Clashes

Opening of 30th Parliament Offered Sobering Contrast

By JIM POLING

OTTAWA (CP) — Inside the newest halls on Parliament Hill the politicians and the bureaucrats tended to formal matters of state, then, over cocktails, discussed what the future for the new Parliament.

Outside, in a chilly September wind, 200 Indians fought with police and armed forces personnel and violently pushed into the spotlight their long-standing grievances about substandard housing, meagre medical care and land claims.

It was a sobering contrast for the opening of the 30th Parliament.

But it also might have been a black harbinger of what is to ahead for the 264 persons elected July 8 to solve the problems of the country for the next four years.

In its throne speech, the majority Liberal government acknowledged that inflation was only an enemy to be wrestled to the ground, but also it is a vicious cancer eating away at the lifestyles of poor and the rich alike.

"It was generally expected, inside Canada and outside, that this bite of inflation would recede as conditions in the international food and commodity markets returned to normal," said the throne speech. "This is not a situation that has been created."

The government warned that the rising prices of the last year "will not be reversed" and that might even climb higher.

The dramatic food price increases of last winter had been expected to level through the spring system and reach a peak by mid-summer. Then, prices were expected to fall, or, at least level off.

However, the government explained that the oil exporting countries, in which category Canada falls, had re-affirmed their determination to keep oil prices high. This would lead to continued high prices for the whole of Canadian consumers.

But the government promised that inflation would be brought under control by such means as wage and price restraints, especially those with inflation, especially those which are not economically weak.

As the Indians and police clashed outside, Chief Justice Bora Laskin read the government's intention to protect those who are subject from "economic ravishment."

For lonely Indians, the speech promised that royalty rates for oil and gas on Indian reserves would be raised and that royalties charged by oil-producing provinces, such as Alberta and Saskatchewan.

The government also pledged ways of increasing food production, assistance for home ownership, consumer protection and better pension benefits for the elderly and for war veterans.

A government source said one of the most important phrases of the speech was the promise to ask for "an equitable sharing among all groups in the community of our productive efforts."

Presumably, this means an end to price-gouging and profiteering that no one will have to suffer any more than necessary from the effects of inflation.

But as the demonstrators engaged in fist fights with the police outside, one MP was heard to remark:

"Sure they're Indians and their protests are somewhat different from most Canadians. But are their complaints really that different?

"Inflation hurts everyone and who'll be pounding at the doors of Parliament next week. This is something we have to fix for everyone."

The debate on how to fix the problem begins today. How Parliament resolves the problem is something only the future will show.

"All the safety features are standard equipment this year — the CAR is optional."

Low-test Booze Unlikely Answer

By DON O'HEARN
Queen's Park Bureau
Thomson News Service

TORONTO — Sir John Colborne is advocating 3 per cent beer.

A close reading of the consumer affairs' minister's speech show that he apparently is quite serious about it.

His proposal to the Brewers Association of Canada that they should consider reducing the alcohol content of draft beer. The government, he said, was taking a careful look at it, and he advised the brewers to do the same.

To which one would say take all the careful looks that you like, but chances are a lukewarm no one that it won't work.

Some years ago when Hon. John Foote was a member of the LCBO, he persuaded Jordan's winery to bring out a low-alcohol wine.

The experiment didn't work. The public didn't take to it. And it's hardly likely it would to 3 per cent beer either.

In that same speech Mr. Clement goes out more forcefully on drinking problems which are only a bit of Tweedle.

One of them was that though alcoholics form only a small minority of the motorists' driving population they accounted for concerns one-third of beverage alcohol drunk in the province.

The misuse of alcohol costs the province $134 million a year in hospital bills and other addition there are welfare and other costs.

Alcohol - related automobile collisions cost the public another $26 million.

The bill in business and industry in lost man-hours and lessened productivity is about $1 million a day.

After talking about these things Mr. Clement indicated that perhaps the government is beginning to think we may have relaxed our attitudes on the price on liquor too much.

Increasing controls, he said, has been a major cause of the increasingly severe problems of alcohol abuse we face and suggests that government should never be regulatory enough.

With this he indicated these matters would be reviewed.

But reviewing is one thing, of course, and getting effective action is quite another.

Working with industry to curb alcoholism (more than half of our alcoholics are fully employed) is one practical step that can be taken among others.

But at root social problems are probably the biggest cause of alcohol abuse. And in this over-inflated and shaky society of ours today how do you overcome these?

Election Shatters Money Myth

The Sudbury Star

It has been a widely held myth in Canadian elections that the more money behind the candidate, the more assured his success at the polls. Surely Stephen Roman, chairman of Sudbury city hydro, has performed a service to the field of national politics by exploding proving this is just not true.

Mr. Roman's campaign as an unsuccessful candidate for York South riding in the 1972 election cost $92,110. He was in the losing pledge sign in July and the returning officer has just disclosed, (as the law requires) that the campaign cost $92,110 for even less success. In 1972, Mr. Roman lost to Harvard Dansen by 2,315 votes. This year, the margin was 7,800. Mr. Roman this year spent $14,825 according to the official figures. In 1972 it was Minister of Transportation Marchand.

In Peterborough, former Manitoba premier Duff Roblin mounted a $53,566 campaign in vain. He failed to defeat Secretary of State James Hugh Faulkner whose expense report totalled $22,286.

Next time around the new controls will be effective, spending will be in effect. They are related to the number of votes in the riding.

At that time the public will be able to judge the wisdom of subsidizing campaigns from public funds for all candidates who receive 20 per cent of the votes cast.

Liberal Whip Openly Concerned About Cabinet Overconfidence

by Richard Jackson

OTTAWA — You would think, to hear some members of the Trudeau Liberals that the Liberals' with their new majority, expect to be in power forever.

And perhaps you can't blame them too much for feeling that cozy.

For, after all, they have been the KING-OF-THE-HILL for 40 going-on-the-last-40-years of Parliament.

But even so, taking power for granted as only their due, which they certainly certainly have not shown has always, anyway — have done, they may be pushing things a bit in their interpretation of the divine right of rule.

Just listen to Labor Minister John Munro, for instance, that 45 percent wage increase for those West Coast grain handlers the government says it will ask Parliament to impose.

Ask is merely the word for it, because when it's government with a majority numbers 2 in excess of Parliament, it becomes an order.

In fact the votes to make it stick, no matter what.

So there is John Munro, defiant that the economists and the economists and the calls by Finance Minister Turner for restraint, that the 45 percent talk isn't bad. Father-knows best. Because that, if the two sides can't settlement is inflationary, he'll "take responsibility for it."

And there is Agriculture Minister Eugene Whelan, contemptuous of consumer outcries over the rotting of 30 million or more eggs while supplies are so short that imports are being brought in from the United States at increased prices.

There is Urban Affairs Minister Barney Danson, too, telling overtaxed Canadians that their expectations of what they should get and live are too high. Maybe they are, and perhaps, as he says, "you can't have it all." But to hear it from the party that has been the provider, prop and pillar of the Welfare State, it is almost unbelievable.

And there is Prime Minister Trudeau who, in the weeks since the election, has kept himself aloof and insulated from responsibility as to appear unsavingly disinterested.

They make it obvious that with four years of power ahead they feel that they have it in a hurry.

But there is one worrier among them.

He is the Liberal Whip, Tom Lefebvre, and he is outspokenly worried that all these signs from the complacent cabinet signal overconfidence.

And that, he knows, can be dangerous.

For while the taxpayers can't get at the government directly for the next four years, a majority of their representatives in the Parliament — the Opposition — can.

Not such a minority, really, at that.

Not to hear Tom Lefebvre tell it.

"If only 18 of our people miss a vote and all the Opposition members are on the job, we'd be in trouble," he frets.

An edge of 18 votes gives him what he calls "a little slack, but not enough that we can be complacent."

Tom Lefebvre goes into his third year, this session, as Liberal Whip, so he knows what worry is all about.

He had his fill of it during the two minority years of the Trudeau government when the uncertain Liberals survived from vote to vote only by the grace of God and the NDP.

Now with that margin of 18 votes, he could be fat and sassy.

But he is lean and hungry to keep power.

So in his Centre Block office he has all the phone and back-home-constituency phone numbers of the 147 Liberals.

In addition, he has them all under orders to report to his office before leaving Parliament Hill, any time, anywhere they can be reached.

Further, he is requiring that at least 20 to 30 of them be on the floor of the House at all times.

"The rest can be in their offices, at committees down at the Arts Centre, or at home — as long as I can reach them by phone and get them in fast."

Fortunate for Our Dissidents They Don't Live in Hunting Society

Letter to the Montreal Gazette

When analyzing the clownish and irresponsible antics of all the strikers, complainers and protesters in this great land of ours, one thought is entertained. How fortunate for them, that we no longer live in a hunting society. Times, as they would starve to death.

In fact, were a man had to make a living for himself and his family, he'd soon, by necessity alive by his own wits and perseverance. Get moving or perish. There was absolutely nobody to lean on. How vastly different is it today, in our "bleeding heart society"!

Walk the city streets, around with little placards on their chests and looking perfectly ridiculous in the process, the patient man in the meantime, the backbone of our society, the farmer, without whose work we all would be reduced to dust in a short time, is digging it out of the earth, the greatest food for us in order that we may live. No 40-hour week, fringe benefits, pension fund etc. etc. there.

One giller good perspective would be achieved, for instance by a visit to any of Alexander I. Solzhenitsyn's two books "The First Circle and The Gulag Archipelago and then to grow a pinch of bloody sense in this great land.

But, maybe this would be too much to ask, as many people's interest goes only as far as the racing sheets and comic strips of the papers, where reading is concerned.

Italy invaded Ethiopia as the first step in Mussolini's drive for a new Roman empire in Africa 39 years ago in 1935. Invasion cemented German alliance with Italy and disintegration of the league.

Ethiopia was conquered in eight months by air bombing and ground war. The emperor was reinstalled by British arms in 1941.

White Man Tries to Clot Eskimo Grocery Bills

The Brantford Expositor

It is ironic that the white man, who introduced the once self-sustaining Eskimos to grocery bills is now giving them advice on how to cut them. The advice is a simple as it is impractical — go back to the land for food and make your meals of caribou heads, the liver and stomachs of animals, the moss and other green plants on the ground, and the berries.

To a couple generations of Canadians completely addicted to the white man's diet, the message on radio and in their own tongue, is likely to be meaningless, if not nauseating.

A few old timer may fondly recall those feasts on blubber, and less enthusiastically the hours and days of hunting that preceded them.

But what chance is there that any Eskimo accustomed to canned meats and processed vegetables not to mention potato chips, candy bars, pop and coffee will forsake these for running down a Caribou, skinning it and bringing it home?

And anyway, who is the white man with his overfeeding and other deplorable dietary habits, to advise anyone on how to eat sensible and cheaply. The threepage Nutrition Canada survey report issued last year is a monumental rebuke to the ignorance or indifference of the families of well-to-do Canadians who persist in eating empty calories and other nutritionally deficient consumables despite oceans of published guidance to the contrary.

Most Eskimos today are galvanized in settlements and live in warm houses with conveniences never seen in an igloo. They have generators, liquor stores, schools, jobs, welfare and television. There can be no going back to the old life and traditional foods.

Progress has caught up with them. Even the worst of decays among the youngsters on a massive scale and deafness by the age of 30 due to inbreeding, trips on roaring snowmobiles.

And now we tell them how to save on groceries.

Two Swedes Win Nobel Prize

STOCKHOLM (AP) — Swedish authors Eyvind Johnson, 74, and Harry Martinson, 70, were awarded the 1974 Nobel Prize for Literature today.

Johnson's best known for his Kallen trilogy written during the World War II era, "for narrative art, farsighted in lands and ages, in the service of freedom."

Martinson was cited "for writings that catch the dew-drop and reflect the cosmos."

The prize this year is worth about $150,000.

Both writers, although of great stature in Sweden, are not widely known abroad. Only three books of each have been translated into English.

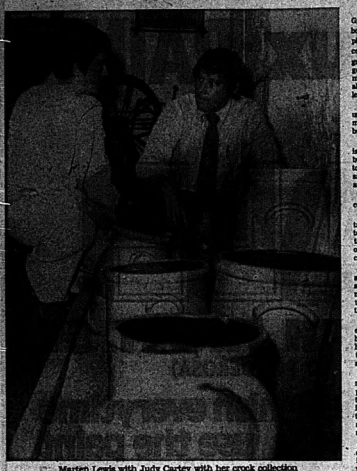
Glanmore Treasures Come from County Attics



Marten Lewis with Judy Carley with her crock collection

By SHARON ARSHART

If you've always pictured Great Aunt Mabel's whalebone corset on permanent display at Glanmore House, complete with a little engraved plaque naming you the generous benefactor . . . you may have to reconsider things about museums and their collections.

There are certain conditions under which Glanmore House might not accept your whalebone corset.

For example if the corset is really lacky or infested with bugs or fungus — then curator Marten Lewis will probably says thanks but no thanks in a very polite fashion.

If Glanmore House had 573 corsets he might also decline.

Though he thinks it's important to allow the community to participate in the museum through donation, you can only use so many whalebone corsets.

On the other hand if it's a much nicer whalebone corset than the other 573, he might accept with thanks and then offered another from the collection.

But if it was very very nice example ... the most whalebone corset in the world from historical points of view — then Marten Lewis wouldn't accept it either.

"If a person is wishing to donate something we tell was of provincial or national importance, then we wouldn't take it. We'd encourage the person to donate it to the Royal Ontario Museum or the national museum," Mr. Lewis says.

Of course, he adds, if the donor insisted his gift remain in the area, the museum would accept it.

Like most museums, the Hastings County Museum has acquired its collection through donations.

Because of Glanmore House itself and the County collection of antiques, the emphasis of the museum's activities and museums also have special interests and for that reason donations are sometimes channeled to the place they will be most appropriate.

"This is the difference between a museum and an old-lady shop," says Marten Lewis. "The objects should fit it, should be appropriate for the place with other items to form a cluster of information. If it doesn't belong here, we try to point it to a place it does belong."

Being in charge of a relatively young collection, Mr. Lewis is still avidly collecting, accepting the majority of donations. Older and more established museums work at refining their collections and accept donations very selectively.

"If an object in any way typifies its era, then it's interesting and we want it," he says.

He adds that the whole matter of donations is a delicate one.

"We often receive offers of donations from people who are in transition — who are changing their lives."

They are often giving things up because of a death or a move from a living house to an apartment and feel in the needed is handling the transaction.

"We're not avaricious," Marten Lewis stresses. "If people have things they want looked after and completed, then we'd like to have them."

Since Glanmore House opened a last year there have been 110 donations totalling about 1,000 articles have been turned over to the museum.

When a donation is accepted, some may be put away and only a few of the articles or articles giving Glanmore House complete freedom over its use or disposition.

"We rarely accept things with conditions," Marten Lewis says. "So that if you wanted to donate something only if we'd guarantee that it would always be displayed, we'd have to politely decline."

In fact, only a part of the museum's collection is displayed at any given time although the display is changed frequently.

When an article is donated, it's numbered and catalogued in a ledger and labeled so that it becomes permanently recorded as part of the collection. If for some reason it's decided that it should be given away or then a full meeting of the Historical Society's museum board must take place to dispose of the article. In fact, it hasn't happened so far.

As for those little plaques donors envisage, it just isn't available.

"You'd have a room full of plaques with room for very little else," Mr. Lewis says.

Besides a great deal of behind-the-scenes work at refining their collections and accepting donations, there are special categories of gifts. Beta Sigma Phi, for example, makes cash donations specifically for the library. The University Women's Club makes donations for the Macdonald Room only. The Belleville Garden Club's donations are used only for plants and landscaping.

One important donation has been the use of a warehouse to store articles.

Occasionally the museum hears about a particular object that is critical to the collection. If it must be purchased, then the museum looks for a person who might like to buy and donate it.

Marten Lewis says that he will soon compile a list of articles the museum needs to make its collection more complete. With visitors from 21 to 130 donations totalling about 1,000 articles have been turned over to the museum.

Not everything displayed at Glanmore House belongs to the museum.

Some people "donate" by lending their special collections to the museum for varying lengths of time. Currently, for example, a collection of period rugs owned by Judy Carley are displayed in "Mrs. Simpson's kitchen".

After a suitable length of time, it will be returned to Mrs. Carley, much like the museum's own groups of articles come and go from the attic and warehouse to keep the displays lively and "new" all the time.

Successful Living

Lost Pet Worries Reader

Dear Doris: I am 36 years old and I live at home. My sister had a little black chihuahua given to her for a birthday when she was 12.

She is married now and gave me her little dog. When I let him out he'll sometimes run off somewhere and I go out and look for him. My fears are that he'll get lost looking for him because they say he'll come back as he had done before, but I say where's sleep a first time he won't come back.

I'm afraid it will happen one of these times. We have had him for seven years. I love him like he was my own family.

Do you think I am crazy to look for him when he is that because after all I am 36. Or is it childish of me?

Am I Childish?

Dear Am I childish: Not in my book, you aren't. Dogs have been known to get lost and not come back. Your family does not realize the very warm attachment existing between you and the little chihuahua.

Ask yourself whether you ever do manage to find your dog, or whether he always returns by himself. And, then ask whether you could take him on a leash and that always have control? It might get you walking and enjoying the out-of-doors. Consider the possibility of a fenced-in enclosure, so that he is never in danger of getting lost.

Dear Doris: My life my mother has hated me for three months. Day by night and day by day we couldn't get along and she replied, "Parents are not supposed to get along with grown kids. They are just here to make rules and regulation to make your kids think."

Well, that is not about kind me. All the years when I was a kid and my mother was telling me I was stupid, so she would say where she was wrong me. She told me what courses to take in business school because, she said, I was not smart enough to take anything else. So, I did. But I hate the course and I want to be a kindergarten teacher. I told her that and she said I was are no good at looking after kids". But I am.

I have worked in a kindergarten from time to time and I love it. I learned in understand child behavior, their feelings what children like to do. Children give you pieces of mind and happiness.

I have never heard my mother say a good word about me and, instead of encouraging me, she discourages me.

Losing Battle.

Dear Losing: I'd give a lot to know your mother's own background — and I'll wager there wasn't much love in it for her. Or she would be passing it on.

Since she hears you down, something else will have to hold you up. Turn a deaf ear to the put-downs and hang on to your own goal.

Kindergarten teaching is a wonderful career. Your guidance counsellor at school can advise you about the right course to take. And the next time you tell your self anything, reinforce it your self.

When you stop feeling like a failure you will stop being one.

Dear Doris: I know it must have been before your time but in one of our readers there was a poem "Three little kittens one day washed their ets." I can remember all but one line, the one after, "And that's the way the quarrel began."

If a reader could get it for me I'd appreciate it. Your articles are always much enjoyed.

Donelda.

Dear Donelda: Perhaps it was some age, but the height I love the line. I think anything was before my time! Who can reach back in memory to help? "The Three Little Kittens"?

An Agency That Works!

The Central Volunteer Bureau in Belleville is a United Community Services Agency. And it certainly is well-named. The resources of the Volunteer Bureau are in the hundreds and the projects are truly impressive too: volunteer drivers; the Christmas sharing project; nursery schools for handicapped children; Meals-on-Wheels for local senior citizens; coordinated classes for new citizens, to name just a few programs. But all the good will in the world won't get the job done. Support the Central Volunteer Bureau with a generous donation to this year's United Way Campaign and keep the whole thing working.

First, The Bad News

Anti-freeze and snow tires — both necessities of winter. And both up in price this season. In fact, because of labor problems, snow tires are in short supply. So the people at Yaden's Canadian Tire, 162 North Front St., suggest you order now. Call 968-1449 and make an appointment for anti-freeze and snow tires. We all have a tendency to put off getting our cars ready for winter. But this year, if you don't want a repeat of last winter's tire fate . . . it may be a matter of now or never — at least not this winter. Get your car into Yaden's now and this will be one bit of bad news you can forget.

Facing The Facts

And the facts aren't good when you compare what you paid last year for some items on the family budget. Why not start off spring this year by doing the very you can make a major improvement to your home at a reasonable cost and do some of decorating yourself. Call Wallpaper Warehouse and Paint Outlet, 164 Dundas St. E., Belleville. Phone 962-4304. Prices are still low with very little soap, does all the conditioning and cleaning you need and leaves your hair looking and feeling great. Let your fabrics with tender-loving, inexpensive care. Call 962-4304.

An End In Sight

Only the frost at night which has ended our harvest season on most of our local produce isn't the kind of end most of us look forward to. But Sager's Fruit Farm, Highway 62 North, Hillier, still has a few weeks left and a tremendous selection of local corn, tomatoes, grapes, apples, squash and pumpkins. And with the big "Harvest Home" coming up on Thanksgiving and all the celebrations they help out by their participation! So you can count any good-bye to summer as a hello to fall when you go (or telephone, or corn etc.) Start your farewell celebrations by visiting Sidney Inn.

The Mirror To-Wall Problem

I recently ordered a bathroom mirror from Belleview Glass and Mirror, 212 Bridge St. E. And of course the next question is how to attach it to a wall? Well, there just happens to be a handy invention called a "wall plate" that does the trick. You drill the plate to the wall and then to the wall plate. It expands and holds tight to the plaster. And there you have a perfectly safely mirror, securely attached. Belleview will be glad to help you with an installing problem and, of course, they will install any mirror you buy from them.

Custom-Building Vacations

Tony Warren of Devlieu and Devlieu Travel, 18 Front St. has just returned from a fact finding and flying-seeing tour of England. And he has some good advice, as well as some exciting information, for you if you're holidays for seeing friends. Devlieu can plan a "custom holiday" where you stay basically in one place for your special touring, or a "package" holiday that takes you to London is at the beginning or at holiday's end. Or you can combine the two. But one thing you can be sure of with Devlieu helping you plan, your holiday will be your holiday. Drop in soon.

Fabrics Galore

The Quinte Sewing Centre in the Quinte Mall is alive with the color and the textures of their new fall fabric selection. This fall's colors are "in" and, from gown and velvet to denim, they're all there — in a myriad of choices in 100% polyester knits. And for that extra touch of elegance with quality, they've got laces, metallic and washable in plains and patterns. The Quinte Sewing Centre also has the latest in sewing machines, Viking, Pfaff, Gemsman, Pfaff and England. What's quality sewing without quality fabrics from the Quinte Sewing Centre?

That's Service!

Trenton Optical, 14 Bridge St. E., takes their fast delivery on frames, lens and special problems very seriously. They are now issuing a special courtesy card to all their customers to make sure you'll have the kind of service you've come to expect from an independent such as Trenton Optical. And remember, you don't need an appointment. Just drop in any day (except Thursday afternoon) and you'll be assured of the attention of glass frames at Trenton Optical. And you won't find the prices hard to take either.

Contemporary vs. Traditional

This is a common debate over any item when one is decorating or re-decorating. And it's a debate that applies to choosing wallpapers. And Gordie's is now the Belleville outlet for the Bernard of Barnard Interiors, 414 Cannifton Rd. N., documented wallpapers. These are reproductions of old patterns special to the old homes are torn down and these awe-inspiring quite a revival. Or you have wallpapers of your own choosing (this kind looms my den). But wallpaper design is an art. And so is choosing the proper pattern for the right thing in the right place. Past can help. Call him at 968-6976.

A Favorite Returns

A favorite entertainer to the John Cabot Lounge of the Hotel Belvedere, has returned. He's Floyd Turcotte-Saint, a country and western recording artist. Floyd is very special to the management of the Hotel Belvedere because he is also many Belleville and area fans. So if you missed him last time, or you're a fan of his and want to see him again, he'll be there all the rest of this week. Go and see him — and hear him — at the John Cabot Lounge, 369 Front St. N.

Prosperity Brings Problems

TOKYO (AP) — Dubbed bigger, fatter and richer, Japan's growing economic might is being measured in terms of the bulges of people — the Japanese bulge. They are more and overdue for a diet.

The improved diet makes the average Japanese taller. Women's shoes are getting harder to find as a higher percentage of females wear boots with chikin, which means they can't be accommodated and otherwise concerning their feet.

But experts say the increasing amount of sweet and fatty foods eaten by the new Japanese girls is bad news and is behind the spread of fashions emphasizing the waist.

A growing number of men have stomachs hanging over their belts. Many blame their bulges on the fact that they have given up the traditional diet of vegetables, fish and rice.

There is a growing number of people in their 30s and exercise clubs have sprung up.

Yoshio Ise is American-style in his dress. He is one of a Tokyo reducing salon "shaking and working clubs" by the "Ise method" of "getting fatter and fatter."

The Japanese are getting bigger over-all. But women's waists are growing more than anything else, according to one of their attractive assistant trainers, called Jacqueline Ise (no relation), best of the present-day Japanese beauty queens.

Women's waistline of 10,000 girls measured 24 to 25 inches in 1960. In 1970 their average waist was seven per cent larger at 26 inches. By 1973 their busts grew only two per cent to 34 inches, and their hips remained nearly constant at around 35 inches.

The increase in sweets and fats has not been matched by growth in the eating of beans, fish, rice and wheat, all foods which are generally considered to be healthful.

Kagawa said this change has been responsible, in part, for the sharp decline in tuberculosis and pneumonia, which were the No. 1 and No. 3 killers, respectively, in the immediate postwar years.

Strokes now are the biggest killer with the incidence rising between 1960 and 1970 to 189 from 122 per 100,000 persons. Cancer is No. 2 with the incidence up from 73 per 100,000 in 1960 to 118 last year. Heart disease claimed 81 victims per 100,000 last year.

"I don't think any other nation could change its eating habits so completely as this nation has done in 10 years. I'm worried about the future and I keep warning people. But they keep right on eating what they like."

She said the changes in the total number of calories consumed are not as critical as the fact that the amount of fat eaten is soaring.

"In 13 years the amount of candy eaten has gone up 100 per cent."

Ann Landers

'Triangle' Has Four Sides

By ANN LANDERS

Dear Ann Landers: A woman I work with (she is also a friend of mine) took a job with the company several months ago and how is having a red-hot affair with the boss. I am actually a third side to the triangle, but I'm not telling her that. I want her husband.

He is the kindest, most honorable man I have ever met and he doesn't have a clue that his wife is cheating on him the crazy.

The boss has bought this woman some stunning (and very expensive) clothes and is building her a new home not far from his own residence.

I am itching to tell Mr. Blindas-a-Bat what is going on, but if I do it will be terribly hurt. In addition to which he might guess my motives. I'd appreciate some on-target Ann Landers comment—Wind Him, Like Mine

Dear Mine: M.Y.O.B. Lady. That husband might be blind as a bat, but he's not an idiot—and he can count, can't he? Surely he knows whether or not he can afford those stunning new clothes and that beautiful home that's going up. Methinks the bat is in your belfry.

Dear Ann Landers: I am writing a letter that could save some lives. I hope you will print it.

The lifeless body of a 17-year-old high school senior lies in a casket today. The funeral will be tomorrow. He was a passenger in a car driven by another teen-ager. The boy who was driving had no legal right to be behind the wheel. His license had been revoked the week before. When he had the accident that killed his best friend he was exceeding the speed limit. The boy had been in trouble with the police at least four times because of his reckless driving.

My question is, why didn't his parents stop him? Isn't that what parents are for? Is it not their responsibility to take control when a child demonstrates such poor judgment that he is dangerous to himself and others? Even wild animals cuff their young when they misbehave.

I hope every parent whose child drives a car will read this carefully and give serious thought to the driving history of his teenager. The time to crack down is BEFORE there's a funeral.—Another Mourner

Dear Friend: Thank you for a letter that is sure to shake up some people. I hope teen-agers especially will not view it as an attack or an attempt to limit their freedom. It is intended as an effort to keep them from killing themselves—or a friend.

Dear Ann Landers: Is there any sure way to stop a deluge of unwanted mail? You once advised a woman who asked the question to write across the envelope "Return to Sender." So I tried it and the post office returned an empty envelope to me and I had to pay the postage.

An insurance company in Pennsylvania sends us six identical, bulky envelopes of advertising at frequent intervals. A nursery in Iowa sent 10 identical seed catalogues within 10 days, all unsolicited. Each month we get a waste of time, paper and man-hours. Now what, Ann?—Harried Exec

Dear Harried: Get to the post office nearest your home and ask for the form that stops unwanted mail. Fill it out and return it. Those form will be sent to the source of the unwanted mail requesting that your name be removed from their mailing list. (P.S.: Sounds like some computers in Pennsylvania and Iowa want bananas!).

You just can't win.

There are a couple of us destined to have things go sober on matters of money. We don't work out backwards for us every time.

Take, for example, the matter of birthdays and telephones. If you're one of us loser, you'll see what I mean.

You step into the tub, sink down in the suds for a lovely soak, and then ...Interrupt ... wrap a towel round, shiver and slip your wet-footed way to the phone pick up the receiver only to find that it:

a) has stopped ringing.

b) is someone who dialled a wrong number.

c) is a magazine salesman, or

d) is your talkative Aunt Harriet.

On the other hand, if you take the phone off the hook, you'll miss getting a call from an old school chum who's passing through town.

For a while, I thought I could make the system work for me. If I especially wanted to get a particular call, I'd fill up the tub, jump in, and wait for the phone to ring.

Well, you know what happens. The bathwater would be cold before I'd finally climbed out after an hour of waiting for the call.

That's the catch. Whatever you want to happen, won't I call it Loser's Law.

There are several ways, for instance, to unintentionally bring on rain.

Well, you are foolish as to think there's no chance of showers and have your umbrella at home...was the car...behind the garden...or plans for the wedding reception to be held on the lawn...then there'll be a torrential downpour.

Unless, of course, you do any of these on purpose to try to bring on rain. Then it stays dry as blazes. Remember, you can't win.

Loser's Law means that if you put on a new pair of pants those you'll have a run by noon.

If you decide to go on a diet the next day someone will come to visit bearing a box of chocolates especially for you.

If you make an appointment to see your doctor about a recurring pain, when he sees you there's not a trace of it left, but it'll come back the next day.

If you rush to the supermarket in your ratliest old clothes to bring bits from people you've been trying to impress.

If you've cooked a gorgeous rib roast for dinner, your daughter will bring home her vegetarian boyfriend.

And why is it that your tried and true cake recipe turns into a tasteless glob the evening you've invited people over for dessert?

Why, when you've got on your very oldest slip fastened with three safety pins, has absolutely the helpful type who wants to help you try on dresses?

Why is the winning lottery ticket 47705 and yours 47706?

And why does that make you feel worse? If you're subject to Loser's Law you should know better than to buy lottery tickets. Just accept the fact that you'll always lose.

If you've got a toothache, the dentist is in Florida. If you drive without a spare, you'll get a flat tire. If you decide to look while cleaning up the house, you'll get company, you might as well face it.

You just can't win.

Japanese Aircraft Industry Is Again Using Own Designs

TOKY Reuter — The Japanese aircraft industry, which developed powerful fighters during the Second World War, is expanding again to meet its own needs and those of the United States in both commercial and military production.

The Japanese Aircraft Manufacturers Association says the industry "is at an area which will most develop further if we are to become a really knowledge-orientated industrial nation."

Poor in natural resources Japan should manufacture more and more sophisticated machinery with a high technological value, the association says.

The country now wants to catch up with the aircraft technology of the U.S. and Western Europe.

Japan's wartime aircraft industry was disbanded in the immediate post-war years.

The Cold War and the outbreak of the Korean War in 1950 led the U.S. to change its policies towards Japan, briefly reviving its industrial base. Despite this the aircraft industry has remained the Cinderella of the Japanese industrial world.

Most of the aircraft manufacturers here have been fighters and trainers built under U.S. licence for the self-defence air force. The manufacturers' association says that aircraft, including military planes, built last year totalled a record $620 million an increase of 30.2 per cent over 1972.

Early in the 1960s' the YS-11 turboprop medium-range civil transports was developed with all Japanese technology, except for the use of Britain's Rolls-Royce Dart engines, and sold in Japanese and overseas markets.

But the operation which produced 180 aircraft during a 13-year period ended in 1973, left a large deficit of $130 million despite heavy government subsidies.

Now the industry has decided to go ahead with a U.S.-Japanese - Italian projects to develop a new medium-range jetliner.

Boeing is to share 51 per cent of the total cost, with 39 per cent borne by the Japanese government and industry and 10 per cent by AeroItalia.

The Civil Transport Development Association, which represents five Japanese aircraft makers says it is setting conditions to ensure the Japanese firms do not become mere subcontractors in the tripartite project.

Engineers confident

It says the object in taking part in the project is to learn technology, build facilities and train manpower for future development.

Japanese engineers say they are confident they can design their military and civil transport aircraft on their own if enough government aid is provided.

They note that the C-1 medium-range transport, developed by a Japanese maker for the self-defence air force, has excellent cost performance.

Engineers also say Japan is making progress in the development of its own aircraft engines.

A turbo-fan jet engine designed under a government-sponsored project was successfully tested for the first time in August. A low-pollution engine is designed for endurance during frequent takeoffs and landings, fuel economy, low noise level and low engine temperatures.

But engineers add that an aircraft manufacturing industry needs many navy related industries and subcontractor than other industries like car-building. It also needs a worldwide sales and service network.

They says these are the areas Japan is intent on building up.

Allmand at Once Denies Charges Police Brutal

OTTAWA (CP) — Charges of police brutality were made by a number of civil liberties groups Wednesday in connection with recent violent demonstrations of Parliament Hill.

They were immediately denied by Solicitor-General Warren Allmand who said the same charges fail to respect for truth.

Both Mr. Allmand and Supt. Herndon Marcel Sauve of the RCMP said however, they would immediately investigate any charges of brutality to the Indians and others who demonstrated on the Hill Monday until dispersed by the RCMP riot squad.

The Canadian Federation of Civil Liberties and Human Rights Association, in conjunction with 16 civil rights affiliates across the country, called for a public inquiry into the violence on the Hill Tuesday to be conducted independently of the RCMP.

In a statement by President Dan Whiteside, the federation said it has evidence collected by members of the Civil Liberties Association of Ottawa and by a "battery of lawyers" which indicates that the use of the RCMP special riot squad was unnecessary.

The statement continued: "Further, this association has evidence that after the RCMP riot squad was called into action excessive violence was used by the RCMP on both the unarmed demonstrators and bystanders . . .

"The federation . . . hesitates to suggest that the RCMP discriminate against native people but it is open to question why the riot squad, which has been in existence for three years, was not used in previous demonstrations which were clearly more violent and out of control."

It said the press conduced, at least by implication, the amount of violence used by the riot squad.

"It is rather strange that although thousands of photographs were taken during the demonstrations by the press the parents were never taken when the RCMP clubbed obviously unarmed people, some who were already on the ground trying to protect their heads."

Mr. Murdoch case does not apply to the finding of this court.

In that case, Irena Murdoch of Nanton, Alta., was denied any share in the farm she helped work up to the time of

On Aylmer, Ont., woman has been awarded $60,000 and $600 a month in a divorce settlement by a county court judge who ruled she contributed more to the husband's farm operations than would be usual for a wife.

Francis Marion Brewer, 58, who has been married to Jack Brewer for 31 years, was engaged in a joint operation with her husband on the growing of tobacco and corn and other operations," Judge Joseph A. Wilson of Elgin County said in a recent judgment.

The court finds as a fact that the petitioner . . . contributed more than could be reasonably expected of her as a wife and in fact more than what is "ordinary," said the judgment.

The trial judge ruled Mrs. Murdoch made "only a normal contribution as a wife to the matrimonial regime."

He said as the $600-a-month maintenance for as long as she and Mr. Brewer both live, Mrs. Brewer retains a 40-per-cent interest in a separate company, Jack Brewer Ltd., said Douglas G. Cress of St. Thomas, Mrs. Brewer's lawyer. She have also been a month if she remarries.

Militant Indians Try Commune Style of Life

OTTAWA (CP) — Inside, the old stone mill occupied by a shifting group of a number of militant Indians on an island just west of Parliament Hill resembles a chaotic day-care centre.

Inhabitants queue for food beside two electric stoves and a cardboard sign replies: "Keep your own spoon. Bring dirty dishes here."

They children play happily in the clutter of discarded sewing machines, other rubble which accumulates when a lot of people live together. When they are hungry or bored, the children seek solace from any one of a number of the young adults around them.

Everyone of the estimated 60 persons now living in the 100-year-old federal building is an Indian. Their home won't win what a cardboard sign calls the "security and information" service just inside the entrance at the top of wooden slabs leading to the second floor.

Others cook, work in the information department or make press relations or help care for the 20 or so children.

There is plenty of food. A local chief, Andrew Bone of Ontario Trans. Loth, donated a whole truckload to supplement the balance-sandwich diet on which the group had been living since it moved in last Sunday.

Now there are hundreds of boxes of food, gallons of milk, crates of apples, oranges and vegetables, boxes of crackers and jars of peanut butter.

Still, the camp on the island in the Ottawa River is not without problems.

Some inhabitants are worried about sanitation. There are bathrooms but no showers, and the building is unheated. The other Indian supporters from Canada and the United States is join them.

Still, the three-storey mill is home base from which that group which many of the natives have now, one of the inhabitants said.

Hysteria Occurred Amongst Indians

OTTAWA (CP) — The Parliament Hill clash this week between Indian protesters and RCMP has features in common with an epidemic of hysteria which swept two years ago among Indians in a Northern Ontario village, a Toronto psychiatrist suggested Wednesday.

Such events are indicative of the severe frustration that Indians face in coping with white society, Prof. Ari Kiev of the faculty of the University of Toronto said in an interview at the Canadian Psychiatric Association annual meeting.

The resemblance shown by the Indian protesters, members of the Native People's Caravan, is a healthy sign that Indians are going through a stage that will lead them to a new assessment of society, said Prof. Armstrong.

Although the Indian violence on Parliament Hill was in part a reflection of frustration, young Indians have to go through things like that to temper their new-found assertiveness with a more constructive approach, he said.

Prof. Armstrong said at the same time he was studying violence in Northern Ontario reserves, one of their leaders said privately:

John Trudel, national chairman of the American Indian Movement (AIM), told reporters at Ottawa airport that the movement supports the so-called Native People's Caravan.

"In heart and spirit, and if necessary we will support them physically."

"We will offer any and all support . . . to be-p people up here if there is ever another incident of people being beaten in the streets," he said.

U.S. Indians Promise Aid to Brothers Here

OTTAWA, (CP) — United States Indians will cross the border to back up Canadian natives in their fight against violence, one of their leaders said Wednesday.

Mr. Trudel said he was leaving for his headquarters in St. Paul, Minn., to report on the continuing struggle of Canadian Indians, which erupted in violence on Parliament Hill Monday.

Mr. Trudel said he arrived Sunday to watch activities of the Native People's Caravan, which group of about 200 Indians who left Vancouver two months ago.

"Quite a few AIM people have been in and out," he said. "Not directing but observing."

He said AIM helped the movement's occupation of Wounded Knee, S.D., two years ago. "It is only right that we support them in their struggle."

Perrault Wants Senate To Study Stresses

OTTAWA (CP) — Senator Ray Perrault, new government leader in the Senate, proposed Wednesday a series of regional studies by a Senate committee to "find out what Canada is all about in the 1970s."

Senator Perrault, a British Columbian, rejected absolutely the ideas of western alienation and separatism, but said: "There are stresses and strains in Confederation which we feel and West."

He said it might be time to rethink the concept of the Trudeau as Canada's granary and the idea of the centre of manufacturing.

The Senate also could stand a close look from the country's legislators.

U.S. Naval Planners Lacking in Funds

By THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

The editor of Jane's Fighting Ships says naval planners now having trouble getting enough financing for the American fleet, though shows comparison between the United States and Russian navies. However although the Russians have more ships, Jane's says U.S. naval vessel tend to be larger and more capable.

United States naval planners are having difficulty getting enough financing for the American fleet, which has dropped in a little more than half its size since it was at its peak after the end of World War II, says the editor of Jane's Fighting Ships.

In a foreword to the 1974-75 edition of the authoritative British guide to the navies of the world, the editor, Capt. John E. Moore, says the number of U.S. naval vessels has been nearly halved from more than 900 ships in 1961 to 194 now. Moore said the failure of policy which aims to provide a modern fleet, based on aircraft carrier task forces, nuclear submarines and amphibious forces.

The new edition noted that the U.S. Navy has a clear lead over the Soviet Union with aircraft carriers, boasting a force of 14 such vessels.

Jane's also said, however, that the Russians have launched more than 60 ballistic missile submarines, including the new Delta class, which is capable of launching 12 missiles with a range of 4,000 miles which would be able to strike targets in the United States from protected waters near Soviet shores. The U.S. new possession of missile-launching subs with 2,500-mile range missiles, the book said.

Moore added that Soviet cruisers outnumber the U.S. force 34 to 6.

Moore said that the Soviet Union's shore-based force is unmatched and noted that the Russians have large mine warfare forces and "a considerable amphibious capability." The Soviet navy has "certain important weaknesses . . . which are certainly being most actively remedied."

These, he said, "lie in their manpower and, consequently, technical maintenance, subsea ship silencing, antisubmarine operations, ship-borne aircraft and custom-built fleet supply ships, although this last is now being remedied."

The Russian navy may have more ships, but statistics show that U.S. naval vessels on the average tend to be larger and more capable. It is estimated that the total tonnage of U.S. naval vessels is actually twice that of the Soviet fleet.

Jane's said the U.S. Navy still has a clear lead in aircraft carriers with a force of 14. But they warned that Russia could catch up in the 1980s.

Moore said in his foreword that the U.S. Navy "bears a desperately heavy burden" in the North Atlantic Alliance in which many other navies are either below their numerical components or oriented to specific tasks.

Gas Find Confirmed

ST. JOHN'S, Nfld. (CP) — Confirmation of a natural gas discovery off the Labrador coast brought predictions Wednesday of economic well-being for Newfoundland.

But Premier Frank Moores warned that exploitation of undersea minerals would be undertaken only under his province's guidelines.

The discovery also is likely to intensify a dispute between Newfoundland and Ottawa over ownership of undersea resources.

Hudson Exploration Ltd. of Calgary announced it has encountered a gas zone 9,311 feet beneath the seabed in a well named Cardrid H-86, 86 miles east of Cape Harrison about 300 miles north of St. John's.

Lack of Rescue Aids Major Factor In Trent Canal Drowning

By AL EARAS
Staff Reporter

TRENTON — Parker Canada officials' hope some indirect benefits would come out of the inquest on the Trent Canal as a possible contributing factor in the drowning of a Burlington man in the Trent River this summer . . .

A ring buoy, normally situated at the lock at the centre of the dam, disappeared the morning of Aug. 9, the day Lawrence Alexander of Burlington fell from the dam while fishing, canal officials said.

Rescue efforts by the man's father and companions, and that of nearby Campbell's were hampered by the lack of a buoy, canal officer, who wished to remain anonymous said. Mr. Alexander's body was found in the dam approximately one hour and a half after he fell.

Authorities indicate the buoys must particularly be replaced after a heavy rain or when fishing canal officials are there.

Horace Chard, operations superintendent responsible for the area between Trenton and Hastings, said Dam One has been taking an average of five buoys between mid-June and mid-September.

When the action buoy is left, Mr. Chard said, the Motor rescue now is often cut, thus impeding the buoy system.

He added that mechanisms on winches used to raise stop logs, weighing 1,000 pounds have also been damaged. One year, an actual stop log, (with estimated dimensions of 12'x12"x3") was lost.

Mr. Chard said reports he has received indicate no ring buoy was on the dam when Mr. Burlington man, father of seven, was drowned.

Trenton police have confirmed that there was no buoy on the dam at the time of the accident.

Douglas Greenley, father of the dead man, said Wednesday due to medical reason he could not jump in after his son, a non-swimmer.

"If the buoy had been there, I would have thrown it over," said Mr. Greenley. "It was the first thing I thought of after I heard Bill yell for help."

He was trained to do that, having worked so long on the lock," said Mr. Greenley, who retired as a worker at Lock One in 1971.

He said he had rescued one man by throwing the buoy into the river at the foot of the dam.

Mr. Greenley said he tried unsuccessfully to get a phone from the top of the dam and threw his life jacket down.

The dam stretches across the Trent River at the north end of Lock One, and is immediately south of both the CNR main line and Highway 401.

Lock One, a boat cable fence is built on the southern side of the dam to prevent ice damage to the dam . . . none on the north side.

Signs posted on each side of the river state the dam should be used only at the owner's risk.

The Greenley drowning is the second fatality on the Trent so far, an unrelated accident, a Toronto man, Wesley Charlton, 21, was found dead in water off the government dock in June.

150 Job Openings Here Next Summer

Hiring will begin next summer for 150 local job openings at the new Procter and Gamble plant in the city's northeast industrial park.

George Willmott, president of the firm's Canadian division, told a Four Seasons reception Wednesday that the Belleville plant would be basically staffed with about 25 Procter and Gamble managerial personnel trained in production of the Pampers disposable diapers that the city plant will manufacture.

It was "less tangible things than taxes and transportation" that helped his firm finally choose Belleville as the location for their fifth Canadian plant, Mr. Willmott said. He cited skills in the area and the "great civic spirit" on the part of local people with whom his firm had conducted negotiations to bring the 170,000 square-foot plant here.

While Pampers, which Mr. Willmott said now is the leading disposable diaper sold in Canada and in the United States as dail 19 Canadian provinces, would be the sole product of the Belleville plant initially, Canadian vice-president R. D. Beadon added: "We hope there will be others later on down the road.

Mr. Beadon told his Belleville, including city officials, the Belleville plant would operate on a three-shift, five-day week basis.

C. (Pete) Wickemeyer, introduced Wednesday as the first manager of the Belleville plant, said its operation would be almost completely automated.

Mr. Wickemeyer is a native of Ohio and holds a bachelor of science degree in mechanical engineering from Purdue University.

He joined Procter and Gamble's engineering division in 1957 and has served in several management positions since that time. Since 1972 he has been the production plant manager of a Charmin Paper Products Company plant in Pennsylvania.

Mr. Wickemeyer and his wife, Judith, have three children: Katherine, 17, James, 15 and Susan, 10.

Farmer Says Migrants Keep Food Costs Down

TRENTON — Two of the Quinte region's largest producers of fruit and vegetables have spoken out against those who recently expressed opposition to farmers hiring migrant workers instead of Canadians to harvest their crops.

Eben James, principal of Glenburnie Farms with holdings in Prudence Processors Ltd., Trenton, insists it would be necessary to close down both operations without migrant labor. If such action were taken, 190 people would be out of work, he said.

The composite Mr. James represents employ 80 Jamaicans for work in orchards and in the fields for about two months in the fall. Started as an experiment five years ago, the undertaking developed into a successful operation.

In the event migrant workers are prevented from entering the country, explained Mr. James, Canadian families already trucked by the rising cost of food would be dealt an even harder blow.

If Canadian workers aren't prepared to produce and we are prevented from flying people in to do the jobs Canadians don't do, then procedures and vegetables will triple in price," he said. "It would be no use Canadian society has become so affluent that people who formerly worked in orchards and fields choose to find easier means of getting along."

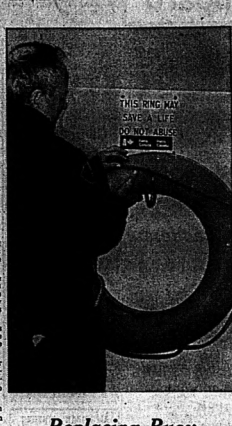
Some Canadians prefer to draw unemployment insurance rather than accept farm work where they are needed so badly this time of year, he said.

In concurring with Mr. James, Ralph Rector, principal operator of Bayview Farms said migrants aren't better than Canadians but they are more co-operative.

"You can count on them to stay on the job even if it rains," he said.

He employs 18 Jamaicans at Bayview Farms for the apple harvest.

Employers of migrant workers in the Quinte region bear the cost of individual flights from Jamaica return — $300 — and under contract guarantee the worker the prevailing minimum wage — $2 an hour this year, raised to $2.25 Oct. 1, next year. The employer provides decent living accommodations including clean blankets and bed linen.



Replacing Buoy

A Trent Canal worker at Lock One replaces a ring-buoy on Dam One in Trenton this week. During summer, buoys have either been stolen or broken by vandals. Canal officials claim the lack of one may have been a contributing factor in the death of a Burlington man in Augus.

No Regulations For Buoy Checks

By AL EARAS
Staff Reporter

TRENTON — No federal government regulations exist for the safety of lifesaver for Trent Canal, but coupled with ring buoys is considered important, Canadian Parker Canada superintendent said Wednesday.

Mr. Christopher Parker, manager of operation at the canal's 49 locks and 11 dams, said ring buoys are placed at dams only as a public service.

The lack of Parks Canada-made regulations was revealed during an inquest into the drowning of a Burlington man in Trenton may have been avoided, if . . .

Kenneth Greenley, the 45-year-old father of an eight-member household, turned drowned Aug. 9 after he fell from dam one, while fishing.

No buoy existed at the dam at the time of the accident. One coroner's official, however, said he believes its presence and may have saved the man's life.

Canal officials and other local authorities have long been in the area, although not a major problem, is a persistent, recurring problem.

Buoys at Dam One in Trenton and at Frankford and Six vanish, authorities say.

"Do the whole," said Mr. Parker, in a telephone interview from Peterborough. "We're getting more vandalism around the Trenton area than on the entire system."

A Daily Intelligencer claim to check if buoys are missing are made during the peak summer months, it was learned.

Buoys are replaced only when they are reported missing or when a worker at the Trenton Lock One notices one gone while inspecting water level over the nearby dam.

Mr. Greenley said: "As soon as we know it's gone it's gone. It's replaced."

Horace Chard, a canal operations supervisor, said earlier this month "there is no daily inspection of the buoys and dams."

"In the summer time, he (Lock One lockmaster) gets over one or two or three times a day. It just depends if a buoy he is putting boats through."

The Lock One lockmaster is responsible for overseeing the operations from that of the lock and its adjacent dam.

Mr. Chard, responsible for the operations from the Murray Canal to the town of Hastings, said a week could go by without a problem.

He added that on occasion a buoy is not hung at Dam One.

Educators Praise Hasting's System

By LENNY WILLIAMSON
Staff Reporter

A group of 30 visiting educators left Belleville Wednesday impressed with programs and policies here.

"I've give my eye teeth to teach in Hastings County," said one of the superintendents and principals from Ontario and Quebec participating in a week-long series of workshops in professional development. The series was organized by the Ontario Council for Leadership in Educational Administration. It began in Toronto, continued here and moved on to Kingston for the remainder of the week.

The visiting educators heard teachers, principals, educational assistants, and superintendents tell how professional development and in-service training is conducted in this county.

They smeared at the grassroots' participation in decision making," commented a visitor. "A director of education told us in Toronto at the beginning of the week that it was impossible and here we see it working."

Another of the people in Hastings County realize what a dynamic system they've got is Ralph Ireland, a Peterborough educator.

He added that he didn't know of a place where money was better spent.

Marilyn's (tratrpayers) certainly getting their money's worth," he added.

The visitors were intersting in the education centre, formerly Queen Alexandra School, and asked for a tour of the building. One of them had been shown around earlier by the chairman Mac Smith.

"It's not very often a board chairman will take you on a personal tour," he said in rounding up Hastings County hospitality.

Vandalism Helps Increase Telephone Cost

By COLIN BRUCE
Staff Reporter

Vandalism of telephone booths and theft of cash is running up a big Bell Telephone bill was estimated by telephone officials at more than $30,000 in 1973. It's a bill that eventually is picked up by the consumer.

Ottawa Bell officials say "pay telephones and booths are the favorite targets for vandals who just like to tear the set apart, and freelancers who steal cash."

There are 301 pay telephones in the Belleville dial exchange. About 196 of these are telephone booths.

George Thompson, Bell's manager here, said "the problem of vandalism in the Belleville area isn't as bad as in other places".

Mr. Thompson said vandalism here ranges from pouring soda pop into the coin phones to total demolition of the booth — as in the case of the unit at Zwicky's Island when it was first installed.

"There is a continuing effort to minimize vandalism," said Mr. Thompson.

When a booth has been vandalized, the entire unit is shipped to Montreal where it is returned to a production line for overhauling.

"Labor cost is the main thing," said Mr. Thompson.

Mr. Thompson said the "most common" destruction at a booth is shattering the telephone directory.

"After using the book they rip it out completely or sometimes just the page they need," he said. "The number-1 replace the book is 26 per cent of the cost."

There's a thin line dividing vandalism and hard use.

"Anything the public uses gets a pounding," said Mr. Thompson. "It's just part of the way people handle things."

In the face of this vandalism, Bell Telephone has a "social responsibility" to provide telephone booths, he said.

"Whenever there is the suggestion there is a need for emergency, public communication, we have a telephone booth," said Mr. Thompson. Parks and swimming pools were cited as examples.

The placement of a booth is a "judgement call . . . an early consideration in planning booth locations is available protection," he said.

Booths are "multi-businesses," said Mr. Thompson. "They are a profitable operation . . . we make them so.

"If it's not profitable we (Bell) seriously consider removing it," he said.

This profit orientation is not the prime function of the "emergency" communications booths Mr. Thompson classifies as a "social responsibility".

"We must fulfill the needs of the people . . . including the provision of emergency booths," he said.

Pirates Take East

Pass Ball by Cub Catcher Kills Cards Title Hopes

BY THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

Rain might be wet for pitcher Steve Stone of Chicago Cubs to stay away from St. Louis, but it let a ball get him in the bottom of the ninth inning Wednesday night and gave the Pirates look advantage, winning 5-4 in 10 innings and the National League East Division title.

Chicago appeared to have the baseball game won with two outs and a man on third in the ninth inning. Right-hander Rick Reuschel struck out pinch-hitter Ron Roberton for what would have been the final out and Stone, after the relief pitcher threw from behind the plate, was greeted by Manny Sanguillen racing home from third to the dugout to begin his overtimes.

Forty innings later, Sanguillen drove in the winning run with a bases-loaded infield single off Steve Dunning on their way to the National League pennant. They moved to 3½ games ahead of runner-up St. Louis Cardinals who had their season spoiled Montreal Expos postponed because of rain. The Expos will not be made up.

The Pirates start the best-of-five National Saturday against Los Angeles Dodgers in Pittsburgh.

Elsewhere, Los Angeles edged Houston Astros 5-4 in 10 innings, Atlanta Braves bombed Cincinnati Reds 13-3, Philadelphia Phillies shaded New York Mets 3-2 in 10 innings, and San Diego Padres dumped San Francisco Giants 4-3.

"We do make things interesting, don't we?" said Al Oliver after his 10th-inning single in the Pirates' dressing room. Even Sanguillen's winning hit gave a curiosity; a batting title for third baseman Bill Madlock that Madlock failed to handle.

A Pirate fan and a Cardinal fan would have forced a one-game playoff for the East title.

"We were 14 games under .500 on June 24 and here are we are finishing 14 games over .500," said Pittsburgh Manager Danny Murtaugh. "That's playing great baseball and you can't take it away from those guys."

Hank Aaron closed out his career with his 39th homer, No. 733 lifetime, but refused to say it was his last game. He said earlier in the season this would be his last year.

Phil Niekro hurled a four-hitter for Atlanta against Cincinnati and moved into the National League's second 20-game winning spot. The Braves' Andy Messersmith of Los Angeles.

In the Pirates' record, what could be Aaron's last homer ever came off Rawly Eastwick. Dave Cash singled and Lee Lacy doubled him home in the 10th to give reliever Charlie Hough, 9-4, the Los Angeles win over Houston. Rookie outfielder Greg Gross collected three hits for Houston's 14 as a club single-season record of 184.

Bill Robinson was 3- for-5 for Philadelphia as New York with a sacrifice fly off starter Jerry Koosman. Dave Cash and Lonnie Smith drove in the first two Phillies' runs with a single and Willie Montanez added a sacrifice fly.

John Ellis scored four times in the stock inning to win San Francisco Jefferson Joe Morris walked Dick Colbert with the bases loaded to force in the winning run. Gene Garber wild-pitched home another run.

Few Fans Watch American League Finish Up Season

BY THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

The fans said goodbye to the Kansas City Royals in 12 innings Wednesday, finishing 32 seasons with Detroit Tigers. And they finished with a goodbye game prematurely.

They said goodbye to Ken Aspromonte of Cleveland Indians, promoted to be replaced by Frank Robinson, major league baseball's first black manager.

And they said goodbye to the baseball season.

There were 34,822 fans on hand. But that was for the entire six-game American League schedule Wednesday.

But then everything was tied up in neat little bundles and nothing counted—except for records, post season awards and next year's salary.

In the race for the record—East division champion Baltimore Orioles edged Detroit Tigers 5-4 and Oakland A's beat 2-1 to California Angels; Texas Rangers swept Minnesota Twins 3-2; Cleveland beat Boston Red Sox 8-4; Chicago White Sox 5-4 and Milwaukee Brewers 2-1 to Kansas City Royals first beyond Kansas City.

Manager Billy Martin ignored the designated hitter concept and let Jenkins become the first pitcher to bat in the first-game of a double header during the regular season in the club's history. Jenkins and Rangers' first hit off rookie Jim Hughes, then scored on Jim Sundberg's single.

Cleveland will break a racial barrier when Robinson's appointment. It was the Indians who, in 1947, had the distinction of being the first black player, Larry Doby.

Robinson said goodbye to his 1974 playing days with a bang, driving in two first of which was with the 32nd homer of the year and 97th of his career in Cleveland's win over Boston.

But it was Rusty Torres' homer, opening a two-run ninth that enabled Gaylord Perry to finish at 21-13.

Ron Hunsberg's 10th homer, which followed Alex Johnson's single in the first of which was all Pat Dobson needed to finish the day at 19-16.

Sparky Lyle pitched the last two innings and gave up Milwaukee's run on Bob Coluccio's single in the ninth.

Chicago scored a run in the opening without a hit, Kansas City reliever Bruce Dal Canton wild-pitching in the winning run.

Celtics Ousted by Greeks

By REUTER

Glasgow Celtic, European Cup winners in 1967, were knocked out of the first round Wednesday when beaten 2-0 by Greek champions Panathinaikos.

Celtic and the Greek team played to a 1-1 tie in their first encounter.

It was only the second time in nine years of European Cup action that Celtic has been knocked out in the first round.

The rest of the European Cup favorites moved through to the second round, with Feyenoord Rotterdam (Holland), Ujpest Dozsa (Hungary) and Leeds United (England) among the qualifiers.

In the Cup Winners Cup, former European champion Fenerbahce of Turkey beat 5-1 on aggregate after beating Twente Enschede 4-1 in the second leg.

Chamberlain Glad It's Over

SAN DIEGO (AP) — "I'm glad it's over," said Wilt Chamberlain after announcing of the highest salary ever paid a professional basketball coach.

The experiment with a 7-foot-2 center-turned-coach failed, and Chamberlain claims he never was paid what was promised in a one-year contract providing what he called much more than $600,000 annually with a two-year option.

The money in the first year was supposed to be paid in two lump sums, one before the 1972 season started at a later date, he said. When the second payment wasn't made, Chamberlain said he refused to show up for the games last season—the first public explanation for missing them.

Monday's announcement of Wilt's retirement was later confirmed by Chamberlain, who said he was proud of his year of coaching after 15 years in the National Basketball Association.

Frankford Huskies' winger Tom Crawford (6) a fourgoal man in Huskies 10-4 win over Cobourg, Monday, tied up linesman Jack Wednesday. In 8-3 victory at Trenton. Pete gets plenty of attention from defencemen while Cobourg goalie Ron Fowler looks on.

18 Goals in 2 Games

Huskies Are Rolling

TRENTON — Frankford Huskies ran their goal total to 18 in two Ontario Hockey Association Senior C encounters in victories of last season's powerful rivals Cobourg Cougars here, Wednesday night.

Led by diminutive left winger Alec Gamble, who opened and closed their scoring with hats, Frankford followed up a 10-4 thrashing of Cobourg Monday with 8-3 decision, Wednesday.

Although they are satisfied with their club's early showing, officials of the Frankford team are aware of the fact the Cougars will be stronger once the regular schedule opens. Cougars' coach, Vern McGregor is using the exhibition games to get a look at several promising rookies. He has yet to decide on a first team.

Huskies appear to be just as shy away from being ready for league play. They've played five games and even a perfect record against C. team's may not start in Sunday's Intermediate when the season gets under way for real.

Gamble was flying last night. And he had plenty of company as Huskies showed Cobourg who had a 72.

Defenceman Ron Ferguson, Gary Payne, Ken Jacket, Robbie Arkedis, Pat Pannel and Paul Bedard shot the other Frankford goals. Arkedis helped himself to three assists and Bedard had a pair of helpers.

Mike Ryan and Paul Bevan took care of the Cobourg goals. Brian Reid drew a pair of assists.

As in the game in Cobourg, Monday, Cougars stayed within striking distance for two periods but were unable to keep pace in the final 20 minutes, It was a 4-3 game heading for the third period.

The winners took 11 of the 18 minor penalties handed out.

BCI Stops PECI

PICTON (Special) — Belleville Collegiate Institute secure came up with a superb defensive effort Wednesday, limiting Prince Edward Collegiate to just 38 yards in total offence and only a lone first down in Bay of Quinte Football League action.

Dick Rodrigues and Russ Simmons scored one major each as BCI won 13-1.

PECI's only point of the game came when they punted into the BCI end zone and it earned for a safety. Their only first down of the game came in the fourth quarter as a result of a BCI penalty.

BCI plays again Wednesday as Madoc and PECI visits Napanee a week from today.

Adolescence is a period of rapid changes. Remember 15 years ago, for example, a person at age as much as 30 years.

Maybe grandma had more time to cook then, she didn't have to spend so much time reading the ingredients on the label.

Doctor told our friend he needed more leafy greens in his diet — so he switched from dentists to mint julips.

Harris Disappointed

Tardif and MacGregor Back, Cheevers Misses Work Out

MOSCOW (CP) — Coach Billy Harris of Team Canada wasn't in a mood for converse. time.

He left Luzhniki Arena wearing a frown on his players Wednesday morning and he told reporters to prepare for tonight's sixth game of the eight-game hockey series with the Soviet Union.

The Canadians have a one-win, two-loss-and-one-tie record and two less, the game will be televised on CTV, starting at 12:30 p.m. EDT.

Harris refused to allow Canadian reporters into the dressing room after the morning workout and would not answer questions about the team.

It is believed he was unhappy about the way some of his World Hockey Association players went through the practice session—a sloppy, non-contact session.

He also might be concerned about goaltender Gerry Cheevers, who learned Wednesday that his father-in-law, John Sciamanda of St. Catharines, Ont., died in hospital. Cheevers, however, is expected to play.

WHA Loses Two More To NHL

By THE CANADIAN PRESS

Vancouver Canucks and Phoenix Roadrunners got the World Hockey Association to a 10-team membership Wednesday night in its exhibition series against the National Hockey League.

California only whipped the Blazers 6-0 as Los Angeles Maple Leafs downed the Roadrunners, a new entry this season, 5-3 to give the NHL four wins and a defeat against the WHA.

The only WHA victory came Sept. 21 when Houston Aeros slipped St. Louis Blues 5-4.

In WHA exhibition games, Quebec Nordiques beat Chicago Cougars 6-4; Minnesota Fighting Saints blanked Michigan Stags 5-0; and Minnesota Oilers and Toronto Jets battled to a 3-3 tie.

The Seals scored four goals in a four-minute span in the third period, with Marvin Mott getting two goals and an assist—to beat the Blazers. The game was three minutes longer than scheduled.

In Phoenix, the Leafs handed the Roadrunners their first exhibition loss with three goals in the first period and two in the second.

Ian Turnbull, Dave Kaut, Eddie Shack, Ron Ellis and Jim Harrison scored for Toronto. Denis Potvin, Bob Sabatini, Bill Orejel and Bob Forsek scored for Phoenix.

Jimmy Watson's goal at 8:49 of the third period snapped a 4-4 tie and led the Nordiques to victory over the Cougars.

Alain Daigle, Michel Parizeau, Real Cloutier, Ronald Lachace and Alain Caron got the other Quebec goals. Wes Livingston, Duke Harris, Brian Conacher and Hugh Hudson scored for the Cougars before 675 fans in Chicago.

A total of 35 minutes in penalties were issued, including two misconducts to each team.

Goals by John Arbour and Danny O'Shea gave Minnesota the win spoiling the Stags' debut in Michigan. The Stags' roster was made from Los Angeles where they played the last two years.

Before 631 fans in Bakersfield, the Oilers came from behind twice for their tie with Pip Dye, Doug Barrie and Ray McKay scored for Edmonton and Danny Spring got both Winnipeg goals.

Nesting Boxes Distributed

TORONTO (CP) — Les Smith, 48, of Parwell, says he first knocked a nest right from eaves and has since distributed 40 nesting boxes across the countryside.

"I was taking bee Tours Nova when I spotted a chickadee's nest near an orchard," he said. "The discovery sparked my interest a day but became an very rare in Ontario. It was like finding a penguin falcon."

Mr. Smith said the nest was made in the knothole of an old fence post and was about 14 inches from the ground, which allowed access for rats, mice and other predators.

Mr. Smith said he worried about the fate of the four young birds and decided to build nesting boxes which would allow more protection.

He says the main reason for the scarcity of bluebirds is the introduction of the house sparrow and starling, which have few natural enemies.

Mr. Smith said he has little to look forward to in the birds in his boxes until he found out that placing a tin can around the attached pole prevented predators from climbing up to the nest.

Later he used pipe fittings to deter the predators.

Mr. Smith who is an inspector of machine shops for Massey-Ferguson, does not own property so he travels about putting up the boxes.

He has boxes in Ontario, Quebec, Saskatchewan and British Columbia.

Mr. Smith said he believes the last bluebird sighting in Toronto was in 1930, when a pair nested near Grenadier Pond in High Park.

Ants May Be Cause Of Sequoias Toll

SEQUOIA NATIONAL PARK, the giant sequoias, Calif. (AP) — Carpenter ants may be toppling the oldest and largest living things on earth, bled in six years, in 1966, a 60-year-old woman was killed carpenter ants. when a tree fell on her as she ate breakfast at a picnic table here.

Last December, a 35-foot limb fell from the General Sherman Tree, largest of the sequoias, which rises 272 feet above the forest floor and is 30.8 feet in diameter.

In August, every one. The fallen giants were teeming with

In an effort to determine what is killing the trees native to the southern Sierra Nevada, the National Park Service has hired myrmecologist Charles David, one of only about two dozen ant experts in the world.

For three summers, David has been going to sights in the groves of giant trees, spying on columns of the nocturnal insects trooping in and out of sequoia trunks and branches.

Armed with a flashlight covered in red paper to avoid disturbing the ants, David counted as many as 500 ants going by in a minute's time in columns two inches wide.

"The ants have a queer bite," he said. "They draw blood and they spray acid that tastes bitter on my fingers."

David said the half inch-long ants do no actually eat the sequoias.

"They merely hollow out the trees for nesting."

The ants may not be entirely responsible for killing the sequoias John R. Parmeter, an plant pathologist at the University of California at Berkley, said three-fourths of the fallen trees had extensive fungus decay in the roots.

"Such carpenter ants and de cay may have been going on for a long time," he said.

Popular Pianists Open Concert Season

By EUGENE LANG

Personal favorites Arthur Whittemore and Jack Lowe made their third appearance at Belleville Mondey evening in spite of a 974-75 concert series presented by the Belleville Community Concert Association.

Those with long memories will recall that this popular piano team was last heard in Belleville in the early 1950s, then returned in the 1960s and in each case won their audience's acclaim as early as they did this week.

The opening half of the program consisted entirely of works by 20th century French composers, who are known to most pianophiles for their writing mainly for two piano ensemble. It is perfect projection was given at Poulenc's Capriccio, which like a concerto, was scintillatingly by Whittemore and Lowe in 1957.

Debussy's familiar Prelude to the Afternoon of a Faun, in its original form for six orchestral version, was played in the eastern board two pianos arranged by Ravel. Nevertheless the two artists were in complete sympathy with the variety and fragility that becomes of two minds and one thought.

Ravel's choreographic poem La Valse was given a marvelous performance by the two pianists. It is, of course, a difficult to as well known in its orchestral form. The original version for two pianos is seldom heard.

Whittemore and Lowe excelled in every aspect of their masterpiece.

An inspiration was introduced in the second half of the program when the audience was asked to choose from a list of 10 tunes by the artists. A request list was distributed with the program and all members were asked to submit their favorites. Six of the listed numbers were used to fill this song of the recital.

Three of Brahm's Op. 39 Waltzes for the piano duettists were played with a trifle too strict interpretation. A fourth waltz was digital by Arthur a nd Jack a f, the s ixth. Years ago, apparently from Rachmaninoff's First Two Piano Suites.

The waiters tuned to country and western music (the Nashville sound) in the second and concertive arrangement of Brown.

America's George Gershwin was represented by two selections. Rhapsody in a new arrangement of selections from Porgy and Bess, played by the Three Preludes for Piano. The former dimmed the medium over the dramatic with the Gershwin tunes brought a ed with a discretionary amount of sentimentality.

For encores, fullwaiter attended applause at the end of the scheduled program, the audience was treated to J. S. Bach's celestial Jesu, Joy of Man's Desiring.

Finally, an arrangement by Whittemore and Lowe of the hackneyed Bolero. This was a perfect curtain piece to be exhibited both pianists to full advantage in a unity of precision and purpose.

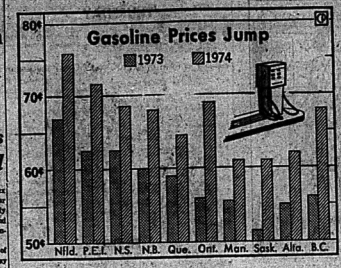
Alex Karras Joins Cosell

NEW YORK (AP) — Alex Karras, former defensive star for Detroit Lions, has officially joined Howard Cosell and Frank Gifford on the ABC Monday Night Football team.

Roone Arledge, president of ABC Sports, said Wednesday Karras has signed a contract with the television network for the remainder of the National Football League season.

Karras had been working on a part-by-game basis since he replaced Fred Williamson, as replaced Fred Williamson, assistant former pro star who was fired after the preseason.

The old tradition that the show must go on remains as who would ever forget Gulf Jack Lowe had a badly injured finger that was taped up through the whole recital!



Go West for Gas

Gasoline prices have jumped for all provinces in Canada from last year, but the prairies remain the the area with the lowest prices.

The provinces hardest hit by the price hikes were Ontario and British Columbia, where the price of gasoline averaged an average of 12 cents a gallon. Graph shows the average prices paid for a gallon of gasoline in each province in 1974 and a year ago. (CP Newsmap)

Immunity Not Given Indians

TORONTO (CP) — Attorney-General Robert Welch said Wednesday that Ontario has given no immunity from prosecution to Indians who took part in a violent demonstration in Ottawa Monday.

Commenting on reporters outside a cabinet meeting, Mr. Welch said a delegation of Indians may have been told that "anything was granted."

About 13 arrests were made in Ottawa in connection with the demonstration.

The Canadian leaders asked Tuesday that all charges be dropped and that Ontario pay for transportation for the members of the Native People's Caravan.

Mr. Welch said no decision was made by the cabinet on the financing request.

Quebec Theatre On Broadway

MONTREAL (CP) — Quebec theatre could gain a strong foothold on Broadway with Oct. 14 opening of Michel Tremblay's two-act drama Hosanna at the Biltmore Theatre. John Goodwin, Mr. Tremblay's agent, said Wednesday.

If the play translated from the original French, is successful on "Broadway, it might "make the Bijou Theatre a launching pad for Quebec theatre," Mr. Goodwin said.

Mr. Tremblay took the English version of Hosanna, a tale of two transvestites in Toronto "where it has been immensely successful," said Mr. Goodwin.

The play broken all records at the Tarragon Theatre where it's playing in Toronto.

Mr. Goodwin was in Toronto in Quebec, it played before packed houses.

New Quebec Stars Are Dime a Dozen

By PAUL GESSELL

MONTREAL (CP) — Scrape together a few thousand dollars, find a singer who believes has talent and voila, a producer has a new recording artist and a budding star.

Producer Guy Francopinone, the pop music scene is populated by many finds-to-be-stars who made-dazzle their audiences with singles that never hit the charts.

Yves Vincent and Roger Wallace, who formed the record company Vibration as Montreal's answer to would have a label to record on, are determined their paths will not be littered with one-hit wonders.

"Shelf-shrivel," said Vincent. "What she says is different, her voice is different. And they have been invested in producing an upcoming single with pop oft."

They were forced to form Vibration because of the difficulty in gaining June, who has been traveling the Quebec country-music circuit, a major label.

London Records of Canada Ltd., which is handling the distribution, disappointed Wallace when June's name was left off the list of the label's artists.

London highlighted its big-name stars, Andre Gagnon and Ville Emard Blues Band. A host of other artists did would be artists brought up the rear.

Among such group was Carnival Man (soft carnival), which is described by a London spokesman as Quebec's answer to the Vanilla Fudge of the 1960s.

Carnival Man, composed of seven women and four men, managed to survive the initial singles' test and now has launched its debut album.

The sound, not unlike the Vanilla Fudge bumping and grinding in French, is relatively new in Quebec where French-languages music, who are more familiar with the sensual ballads of Rene Claude or the soft-edged rock of Robert Charlebois.

The two ambitions men behind Miss Wallack are aiming for the day when they, too, can present an album.

"When we got that album together, we should have a thing like this," said Wallack as he surveyed the crowd of people listening to London's new release.

"We're trying to get something lined up on the CBC's Telescope," said Vincent.

"Just think of the thousands of people who would see her," said Vincent.

Once June gains a large Francophone audience, Vincent said, will record in the uncontested king of Quebec pop music can sing in English, why not June Wallack?

"But it's much easier to start in French," said Vincent.

"There's too much competition in English, especially from the United States and Britain."

Moves for Dismissal

NEW YORK (AP) — Musician conductor Lyle Skitch Henderson moved for dismissal of his become tax evasion indictment Wednesday on the ground that former president Richard Nixon was not prosecuted by a similar dedication scheme.

Henderson's lawyer, Louis Nizer, moved in United States District Court to have the charges resulting from the dismissal counsel to the University of Wisconsin set aside as discriminatory and selective prosecution."

Nizer claimed a $176,000 tax deduction for the donation of his presidential papers to the National Archives, but it was later disallowed by the Internal Revenue Service.

Henderson, 58, claimed a $100,000 deduction for donating scores he had written for the NBC Tonight show. The Internal Revenue Service charged was "virtually worthless."

Judge Edward Weinfeld set Oct. 4 for a hearing on the motion.

Hearing Carried

NEW YORK (AP) — The three major United States network said Wednesday they will carry live television and radio coverage of President Ford's scheduled Oct. 10 appearance before a House of Representatives judiciary subcommittee, where he will be questioned about his pardon of former president Nixon.

The hearing is scheduled to start at 10 a.m. EDT. CBS, NBC and ABC spokesmen said their networks will carry his testimony live from start to finish.

Solar Power Would Benefit Many People

STIRLING, Scotland (CP) — Sun-filths at the north of Scotland could benefit from solar-powered devices almost immediately, according to Dr. H. J. Brinkworth, speaking at the British Association meeting in Glasgow.

Dr. Brinkworth, reader in mechanical engineering at University College, Cardiff, said that solar heating could help the region's population. Yet, living within degrees of the Arctic Circle, it could count on one thousand different hours per square metre of energy from the sun each year.

A clinic could run its hot water supplies and air conditioning in wards and theatres from the energy falling on its roof. The top of a house could power a fridge or a table, and a barn roof could grab enough power for a family to irrigate 10 acres of land. Use of other roofs could raise productivity in local industries, such as growing watercress drit to the towns.

The sun is also the perpetual source of power capable of meeting Kealy future demand, he said. The problem is that energy demand was less than 1 kilowatt per sq. metre, some kilometres in a favourable part of the earth. Even in the United Kingdom, not noted for its sunshine, solar radiation was only a little less than half that in the most favored regions. Improving solar energy was now the subject of research throughout the world.

Dr. Brinkworth said some ways of using solar energy were already economic and prospects for others were becoming good, as the era of cheap fuel passed away. A solar energy industry was beginning to arise in Britain.

Sharp Increase Forecast In Japan Investment Here

TOKYO (AP) — Japan's investment in Canada should surge in the years ahead, say senior Japanese government and business officials.

"There will be a sharp increase, no doubt about it," a key Finance Ministry official commented told visiting Canadian reporters recently.

The end of Japan's so-called economic miracle is part of the reason. The country faces serious domestic problems and an uncertain outlook abroad.

Cities, notably Tokyo with 11.5 million people, are badly congested. The air is fouled. Demands, fuelled by inflation and rising expectations, are soaring.

All the fine heightened Japanese interest in foreign investment, particularly in resource-rich countries like Canada.

Initial reconnaissance processes often are high on energy consumption and low on profits, executives of major companies in Japan.

The Japanese say it makes sense to build more plants abroad and bring materials back in a cleaner semi-processed form to feed the country's industrial network.

"Partly because of this, Japanese investment in Canada should grow rapidly in the next decade," the finance official said.

Japanese investors spent $200 million in Canada during 1973, about three per cent of the total $6 billion invested abroad during the year.

The official, who asked not to be named, speculated that about 10 per cent of all Japanese capital invested outside may be coming to Canada by 1985.

"The signs point that way," he said. "We expect the rail with the long-emphasized Canadian government procurement rules are materials before they are shipped abroad. This would mean more jobs for Canada."

Japan bought $1.3 billion in Canadian goods in 1973, nearly all raw or unfinished materials. More than 70 per cent of the $1 billion Canada bought in return was in finished goods from companies employing Japanese workers.

Government spokesmen here say they understand Canada's desire to turn the situation around and create more manufacturing jobs in Canada but that the pattern is hard to change overnight.

"It will take time," said Yoshiho Sato, a North American affairs specialist with the Japanese foreign ministry.

Growing Japanese investment in Canada will contribute to a rising volume of Canada's exports of raw products, he said. But negotiations to build plants abroad are sometimes slowed down by government red tape.

The Japanese officials mentioned obstacles such as Canadian foreign investment review legislation and the licensing requirement designed to protect farmers and the province.

They were echoing the official government view, particularly on the Foreign Investment Review Act.

But the finance ministry spokesman said the legislation has caused little actual concern, even though it appears to raise investment obstacles.

A key reason is the high level of United States investment in Canada, he said. It was so extensive that Canada probably would want offsetting investment from other countries in the future.

"That puts Japan in a good position because our investment in Canada is low."

The spokesman said he expects Canada to deal with foreign investment problems by diversification, not by turning foreign capital away at the border.

He said Japan takes a cautious official position on the Canadian foreign-investment legislation because it subscribes to a free-investment agreement drafted by the International Organization of Economic Co-operation and Development.

Canada is a member of the Paris-based organization but has not signed the agreement.

"We can't say your legislation is good, not officially," the spokesman said.

"But I think it's a wise move. You're a large country with many natural resources. It's only logical that you want to control development.

"Every (developing) country should have an agency to screen foreign investments — the benefits of foreign investment."

Until outstanding policy questions are settled, Japan hopes Canada will avoid any temptation to impose export restrictions that might reduce available resource supplies.

The Keidanren, the most powerful businessmen's organization in Japan, says there is a trend, even in Canada, toward "resource nationalism" that threatens the Japanese economy.

With a population of 110 million and a land mass smaller than most Canadian provinces, Japan depends almost entirely on the outside world for its raw materials.

Almost every week Prime Minister Kakuei Tanaka flows, wants international co-operation to solve world economic problems.

No country should restrict exports or even protectionist trade barriers, Tanaka said in an interview before embarking on a September resource diplomacy tour to Canada and other countries.

Economic and international economic co-operation more than ever before."

Miner's Memory Goes Back to '33

VICTORIA (CP) — Fred McFetridge has a long and vivid memory that spans almost 70 decades. He will be 98 this winter.

He can recall people, places and things that others have long forgotten and his memory is particularly clear about gold mining.

A recent news story on the possibility of re - opening the Bullion Mine near Likely, B.C., sent him back to his youth and dreams and stirred he calls a gap in the history of the mine.

The Bullion Mine in Dunlop Bill's Gulch was one of the most spectacular and the most placer mines in its heyday in Canada. It was managed by John B. Holmes who was brought to B.C. from California in 1897 by some directors of the Canadian Pacific Railway to scrutinize the gold-bearing gravels of the Cariboo district.

"The Bullion was a gigantic dig and Holmes took out millions in gold," said Mr. McFetridge. "The mine was idle for a while after Holmes became of lack of water for placer mining. It was opened up again in 1933 and brought in by hydraulicking. I helped install it."

Mr. McFetridge's hydraulicking operation failed until 1935 when it was acquired by Bullion Placers Ltd. under the management of Roy F. Sharpe."

And this is the guy where McFetridge took his start. He was in a construction camp when Sharpe approached him to be foreman.

"The also of the dig and all those many years in the past and I didn't know anything about the mine except what I had read. Sharpe had four resident engineers there—he sure knew how to throw money around.

"Sharpe pursued a big shovel that cost thousands and thousands of dollars and the mine was run by electrical power and telephone.

"The mine was very fine — about the size of a pinhead — and I maintained that really the gold was being buried next to the river through the pipeline. Sharpe had too many heavy equipment for such a small operation."

In Hobson's time, Bullion Camp became a sizeable community of the hillside above the pit. There was a sawmill, offices, powerhouse, machine and electrical shops, barns, stables and a boarding house for employees. But the doctor had private residences and bunkhouses. Now only a big gash discovers the commotion.

When Mr. McFetridge arrived, about the only building left standing was Holmes's Hotel.

"It had two large dining rooms and a gigantic range, the biggest I've ever seen. The hotel burned down when I was there in 1934 and there was nothing we could do about it. I'd like to have one for the cookstove."

Mr. McFetridge left the Bullion Mine and moved to Likely, B.C., next hint back to his youth and dreams and stirred he calls a gap in the history of the mine.

The Bullion Mine in Dunlop Bill's Gulch was one of the most spectacular and the most placer mines in its heyday in Canada. It was managed by John B. Holmes who was brought to B.C. from California in 1897 by some directors of the Canadian Pacific Railway to scrutinize the gold-bearing gravels of the Cariboo district.

"The Bullion was a gigantic dig and Holmes took out millions in gold," said Mr. McFetridge. "The mine was idle for a while after Holmes became of lack of water for placer mining. It was opened up again in 1933 and brought in by hydraulicking. I helped install it."

Mr. McFetridge's hydraulicking operation failed until 1935 when it was acquired by Bullion Placers Ltd. under the management of Roy F. Sharpe."

The Night Chicago Died Against Montreal in Moncton

By THE CANADIAN PRESS
Chicago Black Hawks should have stayed home or away from Montreal Canadiens.

The Hawks received an early Thanksgiving present from Montreal Canadiens Tuesday night.

The Habs rallied from a 3-1 deficit to defeat Chicago 5-4 in a National Hockey League exhibition game at Moncton, N.B., before 4,000 fans.

Early in the game, Chicago defenseman Keith Magnuson shot the puck into his own net while trying to clear it, and the Canadiens were on their way to a 2-1 triumph.

In other games, Philadelphia Flyers beat Buffalo Sabres 6-1; Pittsburgh Penguins blanked St. Louis Blues 3-0; Detroit Red Wings downed Washington Capitals 6-2; Atlanta Flames beat Providence Reds of the American Hockey League 7-1; Minnesota North Stars and Vancouver Canucks played to a 3-3 tie; and Los Angeles Kings defeated San Francisco Seals 5-4.

The Canadiens led 2-0 after the first and 4-1 at the end of the second before 2,946 fans in Moncton.

Jacques Laperiere and Claude Laforge paced the Canadiens with two goals each, while Guy Lafleur, Gerry Shutt and Serge Savard—given credit for Magnuson's home-team goal—added singles.

Chicago's scoring:

Goaltender Tony Esposito allowed six of the Montreal goals before he was replaced by Denis DeJordy early in the second period by Michel Dumas.

Mikita was absent from the Chicago lineup. It is not known immediately because his son was injured in an accident.

Tom Bladon scored two goals for Philadelphia and Joe Watson added an other. Simon Nolet, Bill Sutherland and Bobby Taylor also scored for the Flyers.

Philadelphia made it 6-0 before the period was over.

The victory gave the Flyers a 4-1-1 record in exhibition play; Buffalo fell to 3-4.

Three power-play goals, two of them in the second period, gave Pittsburgh its victory and provided a shutout for Gary Inness, former goaltender with University of Toronto Blues.

Syl Apps, Dave Burrows and Chuck Arnason scored for Pittsburgh, now 4-2. It was the first defeat for the Blues following three victories.

Rookie Bill Lochead's two first-period goals helped Detroit pick up its first win after five defeats. Other Detroit goals were scored by Charlie Burns, Gary Bergman, Earl Anderson and Doug Roberts before 1,383 fans in London, Ont.

Denis Dupere and Mike Byers replied for the Capitals, 6-3 t.

A third-period goal by Dave Balon gave the Flames their win in Providence. The Reds outshot the Flames 37-28 and got their only goal from Jerry Toppazzini.

Bill Goldsworthy's goal with 40 seconds remaining and goalie Ken Rivard on the bench for an extra attacker gave the North Stars their tie against the Nighthawks. J. P. Parise scored Minnesota's other goal, while Scott McFall and Alain Langlais connected for New Haven.

Early power-play goals by Andre Boudrias and Don Lever led the Canucks to their win. Dave Dunn scored what proved the winning goal when he beat Gary Edwards at 16:51 of the final period.

The Kings trailed 4-1 early in the final period, but Bob Murdoch, Tommy Williams and Gene Carr scored for Los Angeles to make it close.

Proposed NHL Rule Changes Rejected

MONTREAL (CP) — The National Hockey League announced Wednesday that 11 of 12 proposed rule changes decided to reduce delays in games.

A proposal to award a free shot when the faceoff spot is used against a team which freezes the puck—stalling by the goaltender behind the puck for more than three seconds was defeated by a vote of 15 to 3.

Also rejected, recommendation that all player substitutions be made "on the fly" when a minor is served or a penalty imposed was rejected 11 to 7.

H.H.L. president Clarence Campbell said in a statement he was surprised that the rules committee proposals, by a special committee appointed by the league's annual meeting in June, were turned down.

"Games have changed these rules during the training camp exhibition series prior to Oct. 1 and clearly indicated that they were achieving the desired results.

"The time required to play games was substantially reduced in the games to an average of two hours and 11 minutes, and the public reaction to the changes appeared to be entirely favorable."

Remaining exhibition games and the 1974-75 season matches will be played under last year's rules.

King of Soccer Publicly Retires

SANTOS, Brazil (Reuter) — Pele, lonely on the pitch with tears streaming down his face.

As he slowly turned to the four sides of the arena, still standing but arms raised in a last farewell, a roar of "Pele, Pele," was torn from 30,000 fans.

This was the scene Wednesday when amid cheers, tears, fireworks and fireworks, Edson Arantes Do Nascimento, 28, retired at last and regarded by many as the greatest soccer of all time—finally.

The electrifying moment came in the 31st minute of a friendly match between Pele's team Santos and Porto Preta in the town Vila Belmiro Stadium. Pele played the first game of his career 18 years ago.

Suddenly the 23-year-old soccer idol, hero of three World Cup winning teams who has scored more goals than 1,284 games) than any other player, dropped to his knees.

The other players stopped and approached, some of them touching his head.

Slowly rising to his feet, Pele, as he has been known for most of his soccer career, removed for the last time his black and white striped No. 10 shirt and handed it over to a fellow player.

Pele was replaced in the game by Gilson.

Many fans and Pele himself had hoped that he would score his 1,284 goal that day, but it was his replacement who got the first of the goals which gave Santos a 2-0 victory.

Capitals Make Changes

LANDOVER, Md. (AP) — Murray Anderson was sent to Richmond of the American Hockey League. Both are defensemen.

The Capitals also announced that winger Bill O'Shea had been added to the roster but a Toronto spokesman said later O'Shea's attorney had called to report that the winger was expected to have a tryout with Minnesota North Stars of the NHL.

PROVIDENCE BEATEN

Balon's goal came at 16:51 of the third period.

Jerry Toppazzini was the only scorer for Providence.

Atlanta outshot the Reds 37-28 and got their only goal from Jerry Toppazzini.

44 Die, 1000 Hurt In Quake in Peru

LIMA (AP) — Peruvian air force planes and helicopters crisscrossed the countryside today to evaluate the effects of a severe earthquake, Thursday.

Earlier, government officials announced slightly-altered figures that 44 people had been killed, 92 were seriously injured, 91 of them seriously. Several cities or towns in central Peru reported extensive damage.

Workers in Lima, the capital, began clearing shattered walls, fallen concrete and broken glass from the streets. At least two houses collapsed.

In Canete and Chincha, coastal cities south of Lima, 60 per cent of the houses were reported destroyed.

Emergency medical centres treated slightly-injured or hysterical people. Authorities said 92 were admitted to hospital, 976 others were given first aid and 486 were treated for shock.

The quake struck at 9:21 a.m.; and shocks continued for nearly an hour after the initial tremor.

Pedestrians on their way to work dashed to the nearest park or street stars. Many entreated passing motorists to drive them home so they could save their families. Hundreds of drivers drove through the millions of Lima's dusty, narrow streets, along with ambulances and fire trucks. People screamed for help from apartment windows.

Communication between Lima and the outside world were briefly broken. Water from broken mains flooded the streets. Three historic churches—La Merced, San Agustin and Prado—were damaged.

In Callao, the port of Lima, a 100-foot grain elevator collapsed, dumping its harbor pier to sea.

Much of the panic was due to the memory of the devastating earthquake on May 31, 1970, in which 30,000 persons were killed and another 50,000 were reported missing.

The U.S. Geological Survey reported that the quake Thursday hit 7.7 on the Richter scale, a measure of ground motion as recorded on seismographs. The 1970 quake measured 7.8.

Assassination Attempt Tale Is Questioned

NICOSIA (AP) — Left-wing newspapers today disputed a Cypriot government report of an attempt to assassinate Acting President Glafkos Clerides, while right-wing papers accepted the story and suggested foreign powers were involved.

A government communique issued after a meeting there with gunmen in a speeding car Thursday night five minutes before Clerides was due to drive past the spot on the way home from his office. The gunmen escaped, the communique said.

The government of Clerides's route had been under police surveillance for several days, leading to speculation that there would be an attempt on his life.

Officer on Relief Plane Tells of Hondurans' Ordeal

OTTAWA (CP) — A story of hungry, footsore refugees staggering out of the hills of storm-battered Honduras for their first food in seven or eight days was released by the armed forces Thursday.

The forces released a dispatch from information officer Doug Stushing, who flew to La Ceiba, 120 miles from the Honduran capital of Tegucigalpa, in an armed forces Hercules.

The Trenton, Ont.-based Hercules, with pilot Capt. Lew Paproski and a crew of six is flying air missions a day through rugged mountain territory between Tegucigalpa and La Ceiba.

To date it has flown about 90,000 pounds of food, medical supplies and clothing.

Stushing tells this story:

The refugees, drifting into La Ceiba, made their way to the Goloson Airport, where the Hercules off-loaded its supplies. Members of the Honduran emergency committee began feeding them, giving them what clothing they need and then are forced to break the news to them that the next group can be moved for.

With nowhere to go and no emergency shelter available, the people drift out to the highway, and back toward town at nightfall. They head into the decimated fruit and grain fields to sleep on the ground. The rainy season has started with daily rainfalls of two to three inches.

Choloma, where thousands are believed buried under mud and wreckage, was virtually wiped by the largest loss of life. It is in this area that the Help Honduras Foundation from Cobourg, Ont., is doing most of its work.

The Hercules originally came here with a cargo of medical supplies, food and clothing gathered by the foundation. That load now is being used in a refugee camp and at an infants' centre.

Agriculture was hard hit and Peter Tacon of Agriculture consultant for the Canadian International Development Agency (CIDA) in Honduras, learned that there is a need for food grain for immediate planting.

'Medical Duty' Seen To Let Doomed Die

EDMONTON (CP) — Dr. J. E. Moriarty of Calgary said Thursday that a decision to withhold duty to withhold emergency life-saving treatment from patients for whom such treatment means a painful death is justifiable.

Dr. Moriarty, chairman of the Canadian Medical Association's council on community health, said doctors may have not only probable legal justification but a definite medical obligation to prevent painful, inevitable death.

But, Dr. Moriarty told a symposium on euthanasia sponsored by the Ramsay Cushing Hospital Association of Canada that orders should be written prohibiting the use of such emergency measures if the effort will only lead to certain painful death shortly after.

He said it was the responsibility of the attending physician to decide if "to save their lives is no kindness in the next week or month."

Physicians of Canada recognize there are conditions of ill health which are preferable to death."

He admitted there are difficult, doubtful cases, adding there "is no point in running in drugs that only serve as an embalming fluid."

Dr. Moriarty said the doctor's legal position will be reviewed soon by a joint meeting of the Canadian Medical Association and the Canadian Bar Association.

Manitoba Plan Said Faulty

WINNIPEG (CP) — A provincial government commission has concluded that a plan to build an integrated forest industry in northern Manitoba with large sums of public money was hastily conceived, improperly supervised and taken advantage of by international profiteers.

The three-member commission released its six volume report today following an extensive look at the Churchill Forest Industries (CFI) scheme over the Past, Man.

The report says Dr. Alexander Kasser, a naturalized U.S. citizen now resident living in Europe, developed the plan for "self-enrichment."

His commission received an estimated $28.4 million in excess fees, virtually all tax-free, the report says.

It adds that Dr. Kasser, using anonymity and secrecy and more than a dozen corporations on two continents, made huge earnings of $33.5 million from CFI and would have made more had the project not been taken over by the province.

Criminal charges were later laid against Dr. Kasser and six other foreign nationals but Dr. Kasser has not been located and three others are residents of Switzerland which has no extradition treaty with Canada.

The Swiss residents have been identified as Oskar Reiser, mentioned in the commission's report as Kasser's European agent; Alfred Robert Zeiger, general manager of one of the companies hired as contractor for the project; and Kurt Wuest, representative of another company owned by Kasser.

Three United States residents have also been charged. They are Stephen Mochary, Kasser's son-in-law; Bernard William Goldenberg, a New York lawyer, and Stanley Mollette, former president of Canapulp Exports Ltd. of Montreal.

The provincial government says the U.S. state department has said publication of the report should not affect an application for extradition of the three.

The commission, which makes 36 recommendations in its report, concludes that the former Conservative government under Duff Roblin was ill advised to embark on a multi-million dollar venture in 1965 with virtually no knowledge of its partners from the private sector or their financial backing.

Communist Role Seen Essential

ROME (AP) — The collapse of Italy's 26th government since the Second World War is causing more concern than usual because no new coalition capable of coping with the grave economic crisis seems possible without Communist participation.

The long-drawn-out question of a role for the Communists in the government was a major factor in the collapse Thursday of the centre-left coalition headed by Premier Mariano Rumor.

The Italian Communist party is the largest in the West, the second largest party in Italy. It gets one out of every four votes in national elections and controls the powerful General Confederation of Labor. It also controls the city governments in Bologna and several other municipalities.

Cause of Plane Crash in North Is Withheld

PROBISHER BAY, N. W. T. (CP) — An inquest into the crash of a jet that killed nine persons last February was told Thursday the cause has been determined but cannot immediately be released.

Robert Phillips, a ministry of transport aircraft accident investigator, told the inquest he could reveal only the first two pages of his final report on the crash. Those pages dealt with safety matters and general technical information.

He told Coroner Michael Moore the remainder of the report was confidential and was awaiting final approval by department officials before being released.

B.C. Asks Tariffs Be Eased

VICTORIA (CP) — British Columbia believes that Canadian tariffs on manufactured goods are a major impediment and it wants removal "of artificial barriers to increased world trade."

In a provincial brief to federal Trade Minister Alastair Gillespie, Economic Development Minister Gary Lauk also said B.C. wants provincial representatives at trade talks in Geneva.

The talks are conducted under the General Agreement on Tariffs and Trade, (GATT) an international pact governing tariffs and other matters respecting trade.

The B.C. brief, released Thursday, said some industries need "special consideration on a continuing basis" and referred to agriculture and shipbuilding and repairing.

"We accept the fact there may be some painful adjustments to be made in reducing tariff barriers. But support or establishment of an effective adjustment assistance program to ease these dislocations."

Debts for Oil Under Study

WASHINGTON (CP) — Problems of oil debts have been given top priority by the International Monetary Fund (IMF) and its new policy committee headed by Canada's finance minister, John Turner, ordered its executive directors to do possible solutions.

Turner was elected chairman of the new 20-member ministerial committee, which will act in an advisory capacity and work to set up a permanent group with executive powers.

The committee was established at the IMF' annual meeting which ends today.

Creation of the new political-level committee demonstrates a desire by members of the 136-country organization to work closely on economic and policy matters.

Turner said at a news conference following the organization' meeting Thursday that the committee will not be bogged down by technical details.

"We are dealing with the major political problems as they emerge."

The major problem now, he said, is recycling all funds. Recycling is the word used to describe the hoped-for solution to huge funds accumulated by countries which must import oil.

Higher prices for oil, other basic commodities and manufactured goods have sent many countries in debt—some estimates are for a combined debt of one billion dollars—and these countries want access to money to counteract making profits.

A communique issued at the end of the new committee's organizational meeting directed the IMF staff to study "as a matter of urgency the adequacy of existing financial facilities, their terms, arrangements, and to report to the committee" on "the possible need for additional arrangements, including enlarged financing arrangements through the fund, and to make proposals for dealing with these problems."

The new committee is the successor to the Committee of 20, set up two years ago to find a program of world monetary reform. That plan still is in the formative stage and further work will be part of the duties of the new group.

Six Egg Producers Sue for $2 Million

TORONTO (CP) — Six Hamilton district egg producers are suing the Ontario Egg Producers' Marketing Board for nearly $2 million in charges they say the board collected illegally and exemplary damages.

In a writ issued Thursday, the producers say the levy is a form of sales tax but contend that only Parliament can levy such a tax.

The current nine-cent-a-dozen charge finances the Ontario board's activities and those of the Canadian Egg Marketing Agency (CEMA), the federal body which disposes of surplus eggs.

The farmers say they will withhold payment of the levy.

Apple Harvest Looks Good Despite Early Cold Weather

PICTON — Prince Edward County "survived" in the meeting but fell asleep with indications of much larger crops than in 1973.

Waupoos farmer Jim Hesket, Prince Edward's representative to the Ontario Apple Growers Convention, says cold fall nights teamed with sunny days are coloring the apples rapidly. He describes the crop as "up considerably" over 1973 when the harvest was approximately one-third of the usual crop throughout Ontario.

In Prince Edward County, the Macintosh apple accounts for from 60 to 70 percent of the total crop. Other popular varieties include Delicious and Spy.

The reason the Macintosh is smaller because of dry summer weather says Mr. Hughes. The trees are heavily loaded but there was enough rain earlier this year to size the apples, he said.

He noted that the size of the Mcintosh apple seems to vary from year to year, depending on rainfall.

In his orchard, apples are picked for $4 per hamper and up.

The grower observes the pick-your-own plan as being welcomed by many farmers in highly popular with consumers. The farm has an opportunity to purchase his apples cheaper while enjoying the pleasure of the orchard. Many of the pick-your-own customers at the Hughes orchards are residents of non-apple growing communities such as Kingston or Napanee.

Mr. Hughes comments that there does not seem to be any problem this season in hiring pickers. Many growers have employed Jamaican laborers, who came to Canada during the Jamaican labourers have been hired to assist in the harvest. Local residents also are employed picking the apples.

Mrs. Creasy and her husband advertise a pick-your-own plan and he says most of her customers are from neighbouring districts. A number of grocers picked up by the consumer sale for $2.50 in the Creasy orchards.

The Quinte band will lead a parade of 1,500 tri-service cadets on Sunday, provide music between events and Quinte's stage band and jazz ensemble will play for a Saturday night dance. Guests for the ceremonies will be former Governor General Roland Michener and defence minister James Richardson.

Ellis Demands Honduras Aid

From The Ottawa Bureau of The Intelligencer

OTTAWA — External Affairs Minister Allan MacEachen told the House of Commons Thursday that he and officials of the Canadian International Development Agency are considering the possibility of providing further help to the international relief supplies to hurricane-ravaged Honduras.

The minister was replying during the daily question period to Jack Ellis. The Progressive Conservative MP for Hastings, who said material contributed by Canadians has already made what Mr. MacEachen termed a "substantial contribution" to flows relief supplies to Honduras. In addition, a national defence plane now is in Honduras assisting in the transportation of supplies to critical areas.

Mr. Ellis called the generosity of Canadians tremendous and said the Government should provide a plane.

"If there's anything that's typically Canadian, I think this is it," he said.

Mr. MacEachen said he is planning to send another plane to Honduras in the "very near future".

Outside the room, Mr. Ellis said that Maud-Johnson of Canada Ltd., a Belleville firm, is prepared to donate nine tons of powdered food products for relief operations in Honduras.

In all, about 50 tons of material have been accumulated, much of it at Belleville, Trenton, Cobourg, Collingwood and Montreal, Mr. Ellis said. The material includes clothing, foodstuffs, medicine and bedding.

Bumper Crop

Apple pickers at the Creasy Orchards, Waupoos, don't have to do much moving from tree to tree this fall to fill their baskets. Heavily-laden trees make their job much easier. Jerry Pearsall of Bloomfield is one of the lucky pickers working through the orchards.

Two Die in Head-on Crash

BRIGHTON — A two-car, head-on collision on Highway 2, four miles east of here Thursday, claimed the lives of Gary Steven Schriver, 18, of 30 King St., Trenton and Walter Meyer, 16, of 130 Ontario St., Brighton.

In satisfactory condition in Trenton Memorial Hospital are the brother of one dead youth, Michael Schriver, 16, of 30 King St., and a Brighton youth, Kevin Tremayne-Pengelly, 17, of 17 Young St.

A hospital spokesman said today Schriver sustained a fractured left wrist and right ankle while Tremayne-Pengelly had both ankles and the left wrist fractured.

Provincial police said Schriver was westbound on Highway 2, a half mile west of Smithfield, when it was in collision with a vehicle in the process of passing an eastbound car.

Brighton provincial police said a vehicle driven by Kevin Tremayne-Pengelly was eastbound on Highway 2 when it pulled out to pass a car driven by Donald Richard Haley, 35, of RR 2, Brighton. The Tremayne-Pengelly vehicle was in collision with a car driven by Gary Schriver in the westbound lane.

Police say both vehicles were written off. The Haley vehicle sustained minor damages and the sole occupant was unhurt.

Cecil Paul, council information officer, said he hopes this year's Apple Day will produce as much as the total raised in 1973.

Apple Day is the only regular annual money-raising for scouting activities. This year's record walk-a-thon was the first in five years.

Headquarters for this day and a half campaign will be the Trenton-Dundonald Road downtown.

Apples the scouts will be selling — expected in total about 250 bushels — have been donated for the 12th year by Murray Township farmer Rhan James.

Chief Wants Lights At Busy Intersection

City council will be asked to give budget consideration in 1975 or installation of traffic lights at the corner of Adam St., and Carrollton Rd. in Belleville.

This was the recommendation by the city traffic and light committee this week, following a traffic study and report on the intersection submitted by Police Chief Douglas Cruddis.

The chief reported that as a result of a major growth of industry in the city's northeast industrial park, traffic volumes at the intersection warrant some form of control during peak hours of the day.

It was noted that the Adam St. industrial park is growing rapidly while Proctor and Gamble will triple its present 150 employee force by Christmas.

Manpower Places Fewer Students

TRENTON — Fewer Trenton area students were placed in summer jobs this year than in 1973 as Canada Manpower officials experienced a drop in demand for summer help at CFB Trenton, and among construction trades and cash crop farmers.

Manpower centre Wes Nesbitt said here Thursday the three sectors of the local economy are the largest summer employers of both secondary and post-secondary school students.

Student Manpower offices open in Trenton from May 1 to Aug. 30 this year, placed 328 fewer students in 1974 than last year.

In total, 997 of the 1,586 students who registered with Student Manpower were placed in jobs this summer. Of these, 668 obtained work that is classed regular — longer in duration than a week. The remainder worked at casual help for periods less than five days.

College and university students placed in either casual or regular work numbered 169.

At the student gradings at CFB Trenton were but 188 year, said Mr. Nesbit.

This year, vacancies by federal government departments, the federal government," he explained. The estimated 120 students hired were, under 18 years of age, and the requirements for clerical staff or bridges.

The construction industry is another area in which employment is down this year, he noted. But this year, it was "very slow at the beginning of the year in May to July."

Farmers growing strawberries did not hire as many pickers as was usual in previous years, he added.

"A lot of farmers went to pick-your-own fields," he said. "Normally, we put in about 300 strawberry pickers. This year we only placed 130.

Tomato ad spc's growers also failed to hire students "by reason of the fact that they lose them in the peak of their harvest period."

Farmers, said Mr. Nesbit, try to get adults for the fall harvest season. He added that when harvesting is being done most students have returned to school.

Another job placement was handled by a separate Manpower office here for the fifth year, its four-member section was staffed by three post-secondary students and a graduate assistant.

Scouts Sell Apples

TRENTON — Scouts and cubs in Trenton will be carrying on a three-watered tradition here today and Saturday as, apples in hand, they ask town residents to support their annual Apple Day fund-raising campaign.

The green-clad lads will be stationed at key points during shoppers' appointments. Saturday, Thanksgiving Monday and on disastors say cubs and scouts will be canvassing Trenton homes.

Cecil Paul, council information officer, said he hopes this year's Apple Day will produce as much as the total raised in 1973.

Apple Day is the only regular annual money-raising for scouting activities. This year's record walk-a-thon was the first in five years.

Minister Okays Budget

TRENTON — The budget for the Prince Edward Children's Aid Society will not be cut, although the ministry of family and social services is only supported a $5,000 reduction for the county.

Nora Reynolds minister of social and family services has accepted the original budget submitted by the Prince Ed. Board of CAS.

The proposed cut was proposed by Mrs. Reynolds, and approved by Mrs. Reynolds in a letter to Mr. Reynolds.

He explained a $5,000 budget cut would not permit the CAS to handle three or four additional children or allow it to offer specialized care that might be needed.

Lands on Lawn

The Picton Animal Hospital had an unexpected visitor Thursday morning when a car ended up on the front lawn. Bread truck driver Harry Wickett, 28, of Picton has been charged with following too closely after his truck bunted the car driven by James King, 78, Picton up onto the hospital's lawn.

Car Lands On Lawn

PICTON — A Picton man has been charged with following too closely after a two vehicle collision on Main St. Thursday morning.

Harry Wickett, 28, of 326 Main St., was charged after the bread truck he was driving was in collision with a car driven by James King, 78, of 69 Main St., Picton. Impact of the collision drove the King vehicle on the lawn of the Picton Animal Hospital.

Police said damage to the bread truck was $175 and to the car $250. Mr. King was taken to Prince Edward County Memorial Hospital where he was treated and released.

Causeway Closing

BIG ISLAND — The Island causeway will be closed Tuesday, October 8, while Prince Edward County road employees install and back-fill a new culvert.

Hydro power to the island farm community will be interrupted periodically during excavation work.

The island will be shut off from 7 a.m. Tuesday morning until completion of the work.

Homes Cheaper Here

As high as home prices may be, there should be some solace for Bellevillians in a recent survey that places this community well down the cost scale.

Undertaken by Royal Trust Company, a major mortgage lender, the survey checked the average price of two types of home in cities across the country as of August 1.

The typical house surveyed was five to eight years old with a full basement. One price was sought for detached three-bedroom brick bungalows with a one-car garage, another for two-storey, four-bedroom brick homes with two-car garages.

As expected, Toronto prices topped the housing hit parade, with the two types of home carrying $70,000 and $120,000 price tags, respectively.

At the low end of the purchase price spread was Sherbrooke, Quebec, where the two homes were listed at $28,000 and $50,000 averages.

Belleville was well down the list of Ontario cities. The three-bedroom bungalow averaged $38,000 here, with the four-bedroom two-storey going for $58,000.

Compare these prices with Barrie ($48,000, $78,000), Guelph ($46,000, $68,000), and Peterborough ($39,000, $70,000) and prospective home-buyers in Belleville may feel some comfort.

But a $38,000 bungalow is still beyond the means of many families with even two breadwinners.

That is why, Royal Trust's survey concludes, the trend toward alternate types of accommodation condominiums, residential co-operatives, and mobile home parks — is on the increase.

The scarcity of serviced land is another factor that may lead to a tapering in demand for single-family dwellings.

Realtors say property now accounts for as much as 50 per cent of a home's purchase price, where it was only 30 per cent ten years ago.

Too Many Cooks?

We've all seen those little desk plaques that read: "Isn't this a beautiful day? Now fuck watch some expletive deleted come along and louse it up."

That's similar to the feeling one gets in the wake of the provincial pledge — at long last — to do something about the bottleneck bay bridge situation.

We finally get promised the new high-level span Quinte area residents had traffic-jammed about for years when everybody decides the cabs needs some fresting.

"How about a tunnel instead?" and "why not put the bridge halfway between Trenton and Belleville?" have been two of the less-than-informed local queries.

There are two basic reasons why a new bridge should be built as soon as possible on approximately the present bay bridge site, and they both concern the element of time.

If construction is not under way as soon as possible, the cost factor may rule out the project's feasibility.

The Quinte Skyway at Deseronto was seven years old in September. Its over-all length of 3,800 feet and height of 100 feet makes it similar to what would be required at Rossmore.

But the Deseronto bridge cost a mere $3 million. How much more would it cost now and how much more will our skyway cost with each month of delay? As for an alternate site, costs of land acquisition alone rule that out.

Time is of the essence for another reason. If construction is not begun while a government in office is committed to a Belleville skyway as a priority, those traffic tie-ups may continue.

We don't forget there are rumors of a provincial election.

Anti-profiteering on Agenda

Legislative Program Provides Something Old, Something New...

By VINCENT EGAN
Business and Consumer Affairs Analyst
Thomson News Service

The legislative program for the new session of Parliament which opens this month includes some "something old, something new."

It has fallen to the new consumer and corporate affairs minister, Andre Ouellet, to provide something old (the anti-profiteering bill, revisions of competition policy) and something borrowed (the anti-inflation bill, virtually an NDP platform plank).

Mr. Ouellet is the fifth minister to hold the seven-year-old portfolio he has inherited. That portfolio is often regarded as a political dumping ground for spheres of interest—some of which are contradictory—and difficult to administer because of conflicting interests.

The new minister, true to the tradition established his predecessors, will have to steer a growing public cynicism about the gimmickry practices of corporations toward real consumer protection.

Ad for the doctrinaire "anti-profiteering" bill, Mr. Ouellet contends that it could play at least a small part in the government's over-all program to "combat inflation"—aiding the old Trudeau-Turner claim that Ottawa's economic performance has not been bad as some of its critics charge.

The anti-profiteering bill was first introduced in the last session of the minority Liberal government by Herb Gray, then consumer affairs minister. The new minister, true to the tradition established his predecessors, will have to steer a growing public cynicism about the gimmickry practices of corporations toward real consumer protection.

As for the doctrinaire "anti-profiteering" bill, Mr. Ouellet contends that it could play at least a small part in the government's over-all program to "combat inflation"—aiding the fight against the year before.

But Jean Chretien now advises restraint. He's good reason for fear from a minister in his position. Before taxpayers string hanging in the streets, however, let's wait and see if Chretien's mood is swept away by Mr. Chotien's own level of government.

wage increases).

The government may indeed need a tool to use in dealing with the problem of profiteering.

But the NDP picture of wide-spread gouging and profiteering by business—a picture used to justify the bill—is open to question—doesn't stand up to economic analysis.

If absolute profits have been piling at an high rate this year, real—they have failed to diminish to offset new increases in industrial sector that is being starved of the capital it needs to grow.

Investors are not putting their savings into industry, largely because they regard current profit figures as vastly over stated by on-paper inventory held by companies to investors depleted ability to replace plant and equipment.

In the last 12 months, only one substantial stock issue—by Noranda Mines Co.—has been sold in Canada.

An economy without a continuing flow of new capital will wither, like a plant without water. The NDP's hypothesizing of the bond and stock market by disillusioned investors means that business will have to rely on its own retained earnings for the capital it needs.

The source may well dry up next year, if the rate of increase in corporate earnings drops to the 4.4-per-cent level predicted by the Conference Board in Canada.

Before it bashes ahead with the job of forging its new anti-business look, the government must distinguish between today's very high absolute profits and the low rate of return on investment.

It would be less than useful to the long run to provide workable investment incentives to individuals and to business. New productive capacity could then help overcome shortages, provide new jobs and check inflation faster than all of Mr. Ouellet's legislation.

This Computer Operator MUST be Home on Time

By DON O'HEARN
Queen's Park Bureau
Thomson News Service

Every week-day morning John Flowers is up, shaves, has breakfast and then goes out to work at his job as a computer operator.

His routine is quite normal, except for two differences. One is that Flowers must be back home by 5:30.

And the second is that Flowers' home is in a penitentiary—in this case the Guelph Correctional Institute.

For Flowers is one of 225 men and women in Ontario and countless others in Canada, who, humble, Saskatchewan. New Brunswick and federal jurisdictions who, under what is known as the "temporary absence program" serve time by going out to work every day.

This plan, first started in some U.S. jurisdictions generations ago has been used in Canada by more progressive governments since 1959, when the necessary legislation was approved by the federal parliament.

And, unlike the federal weekend leave program which has run into problems, the program seems to be pretty well accepted, and is, by all standards, successful.

In Ontario, which has the broadest record, nearly 2,500 inmates have been on the plan since it first started.

Out of these only 7 per cent have had their privilege revoked and been taken off the plan.

And the great majority of these revocations have been for administrative reasons.

In fact almost entirely from alcohol.

There have been the occasional cases of escapes, attempted escapes and one of attempted murder. But such crimes are the exception rather than the rule, two cases in the five-year period.

In the standard case of revocation the inmate has been found for a drink after work and has returned to the jail bonded and late.

But considering the conditions the plan operates under, that is not surprising.

Naturally, there must be intensive screening of both the inmate and the job before absence permission is given.

Each absence is not a ... but is the ... of the plan.

There is an incentive for a prisoner to keep shirts clean and shoes with the ... on.

In fact, incentive is probably the greatest regulator of all, it will take a good deal of ... to get into ... where nothing else would.

Very naturally, few don't want to lose their privileges.

Also care must be taken that the job fits the prisoner.

Thus a bartender's job came up for a prisoner who was sent out a prisoner to fill it. But at the last moment it was discovered he had a record of alcoholism.

A bar might seem a strange place to send a reformatory bender. But, Flowers said, in that the fact he was surrounded by booze made him important if he was otherwise justified; say it he had been a bartender on the outside.

The scope of jobs under the program covers a spectrum, all the way from straight labor to skilled operators in whatever is specialist.

Some employers ask that foreign inmates be put on the program. They could have been paid regularly and have built up on an escape charge while drinking, or ... while driving or even forgery.

The employers want them and they are put them, and this is usually permitted if at all possible.

In fact officialdom leans over in try to make the plan work. Instead prisoners are moved in institutions, perhaps even jails, closer to their jobs, if they are allowed to have their own cars if they have been and need them.

Efficiency, and this, of course, is not his right name, is a good example of those on the program. Now at 38, he was an alcoholic. One night after ... he was driving his car ... in a fracas and was convicted on a serious assault charge. He had been a good worker, however, and his employer wanted him back.

The advantages of this program are obvious.

It allows prisoners to keep up their place in the community and at the same time maintain their ... with their families.

Their pay is handled by the ministry, with $40 week going for board, a certain sum for support of the family, and the ... balance, minus a small spending allowance, kept for the prisoner until release.

One apparent problem would seem to be homosexual activity with prisoners not having privileges resuming those that do.

This, however, apparently isn't a serious factor.

There is a certain amount of segregation. But, once again, incentive is the big controlling element.

Most of those who don't have the absence privileges want it and they know that if they kick over the traces they won't get it.

Today in the province of Ontario there are more than 19 per cent of the total prison population now is under this temporary absence program and the trend is for its advantages to be extended to ... and more prisoners.

A few years ago the scene of the program in charge of Ontario's penal institutions was changed from "parole officer" to "correctional services."

Temporary absence was one of the things in mind when the change was made.

For correction is the humane name of the penal game today and temporary absence is one of its show-piece features.

Planning for Future Should be Priority

Editor,
The Intelligencer:

The main thrust of the report, "Priorities of People", in directives for roads, sidewalks, recreation facilities and more is ... complete involving greater costs.

Any discussion of priorities for this or any city must surely be an exercise in possibilities. For are we not very concerned, as are our senior governments, with the economic probabilities of increasing inflation.

Higher wage demands, settlements of our citizens on fixed incomes and needs of the less fortunate.

What the provincial grant picture will be for 1975 is not very clear, when our wage settlements have been ... and we need real increase we have in our tax base, then and only then can we sensibly deal with our citizens' quite reasonable but separate priorities.

It is on record that we have plans for major road, bridge, dam and underpass construction. Perhaps the priority here should be to ask council to display a greater sense of urgency so that all of these can be advanced a year or more.

There is the priority that involves city and neighboring municipalities. The people in the townships need us and we need them. We need each other's ... hospital and other facilities.

The priority is for planning for the future — planning for land use and government structure. Can there be any doubt ... believed that we cannot forever go over separate ways. Surely sowing of this seed of priority will reap rich benefits for the people of Bathurst and our friends, fellow workers, ... farmers in townships both north and south.

Pringle's Report Awaited

TORONTO (CP) — Judge John Pringle's report into the controversial May 11 drug raid on the Landmark motel in Fort Erie, Ont., likely will not be available before the end of the month, Solicitor-General George Kerr said Thursday.

Judge Pringle's royal commission, set up after a public outcry arose over the conduct of police officers during the raid, held numerous public hearings during the summer in St. Catharines.

Mr. Kerr said the delivery of the report was delayed because Judge Pringle was called to sit on a case while preparing his inquiry findings.

Nixon Angry

LONG BEACH, Calif. (AP) — Former president Richard Nixon angrily cursed at a news photographer who trailed the photograph him in a hospital corridor Thursday, the photographer and witnesses said.

Kent Henderson of the Long Beach Independent Press-Telegram said Nixon's face contorted and he yelled, "You son-of-a-bitch," when he saw the photographer emerge outside an office where Nixon had just completed tests.

Henderson said he was so shocked he didn't take a picture before it all subsided. He said Nixon's shoeshine around and pushed him back into the office he was leaving.

Strap Banned

LONDON, Ont. (CP) — The strap will remain out of London public schools following an 8-to-1 vote of education vote Thursday to maintain a ban on corporal punishment established in February, 1973.

Despite the emotional debate, a teachers' spokesman warned that disgruntled teachers might start a work-to-rule campaign to protest the decision.

KINGSTON (CP) — Guards at Millhaven institution rejected a motion Thursday to "emphatically reject" a two-year wage offer proposed by the treasury board and the Public Service Alliance of Canada, the guards' union.

The agreement, covering 2,500 federal prison guards, offered a 28.5-per-cent increase over the two-year period starting Oct. 1, and would replace the old contract which expired last Monday.

DETROIT (AP) — The justice department plans to tell the United States Supreme Court to shut down Reserve Mining Co. because it is dumping 67,000 tons of waste daily into Lake Superior, the Detroit Free Press reports.

Publicity in Court Cases Is Considered

OTTAWA (CP) — Pros and cons of publishing the names of persons arrested for minor offences have been collected by the Ontario Press Council for public distribution as a pamphlet.

here are no conclusions drawn by the pamphlet and views range from favoring full disclosure to providing as much protection as possible for defendants arrested for lesser crimes.

Dr. Lita-Rosa Belcherman of Toronto, council member heading the committee that prepared the pamphlet, said the aim is to stimulate public discussion on the issue which she sees as the clash between two civil rights—the right to know and the individual right to be considered innocent until proven guilty.

Canada's Automakers Enjoy Record Sales

TORONTO (CP) — Canada's major automobile manufacturers have achieved record sales during the 1974 model year.

The all-time highs, revealed in figures released Thursday, reflect a continued sustained demand for automobiles in Canada despite a general concern about inflation and high prices.

Industry buying tended to favor the small compacts and sub-compacts, a substantial portion of sales were still in the medium-to-large-car range.

A buoyant agricultural sector, plus a significant move to recreation vehicles kept truck sales high, the Big Four sources agreed.

General Motors of Canada Ltd. of Oshawa, Ont., had combined vehicle sales of 473,489 units during the 1974 model year, exceeding the previous record set in 1973 by 9.9 per cent or 42,380 units.

Ford Motor Co. of Canada Ltd. of Oakville, Ont., reported total Ford and Mercury vehicle sales in the 1974 model year, which concluded Sept. 30, were 230,951 units, up 8.3 per cent from the previous model year record of 305,526 units in 1973.

Chrysler Canada Ltd. of Windsor, Ont., announced 46.5-per-cent increase in passenger car sales in the 1974 model year to 106,146 from 101,886 cars in 1973. As a result, record 46,000 cars were delivered, a 30.5-per-cent increase over the 34,- 811 trucks sold in 1973.

American Motors (Canada) Ltd. of Brampton, Ont., said that during the 1974 model year they sold a record 27,833 units, an increase of 42.7 per cent ahead of the 19,496 sold last year. The 15-per-cent increase on the previous record set in 1965 when 23,783 units were sold.

Shulman Wants to See Prisoner in Russia

TORONTO (CP) — Dr. Morton Shulman, New Democratic Party member of the Ontario legislature for the Toronto riding of High Park, says he wants to travel to the Soviet Union to check on the health of a political prisoner there.

Dr. Shulman told a news conference Thursday he wants to examine Valentyn Moroz, a Ukrainian writer now serving a 14-year prison sentence for "anti-Soviet propaganda activities."

Walter Tarnopolsky, a university professor and chairman of the committee for the defence of Valentyn Moroz, said the prisoner was reported to be on a hunger strike and that he also has been held incommunicado in his prison by Soviet authorities for some months.

Dr. Shulman said he wrote to Alexander Yakolev, the Soviet ambassador, early in September, asking for permission to travel to Moscow and visit Moroz. He said he received no reply to his letter or a subsequent telegram.

Members of the defence committee said Moroz allegedly has been beaten and subjected throughout his imprisonment to tactics designed to break their spirit.

U.S. Officials Promise Lake Cleanup Proceeds

WASHINGTON (CP) — United States government environmental officials have assured their Canadian counterparts that U.S. commitments to clean up the Great Lakes will not be delayed by lack of federal money, a senior American official said Thursday.

Fitzhugh Green, associate administrator of the U.S. Environmental Protection Agency (EPA), said the assurances were given in Ottawa Wednesday when the Canadians repeated their concern about the effect on the Great Lakes program of a White House decision not to spend about $9 billion of the $13 billion that Congress allotted for a three-year program of waste treatment facilities.

"To date, we have had no delays in our program," Green said in an interview, reiterating what he said the Canadians were told at the Ottawa meeting.

"We said that we doubted impoundment would lead to future delays, but if it did appear likely to cause delays, then additional funds would be released."

The Ottawa meeting, involving 30 persons from both countries, was the fourth stock-taking session to discuss progress and problems on the 1972 Water-Quality Agreement signed by President Nixon and Prime Minister Trudeau.

It will probably be the last such session until after the

Policeman Praised By Jury

TORONTO (CP) — A coroner's jury found Thursday that Metropolitan Toronto police officer acted "in the performance of his duty" in the intelligence, courage and resourcefulness in a situation in which he shot and killed Richard Lindsay, 26, of Toronto last Friday.

The jury made its findings after hearing two days of evidence from 20 witnesses. Testimony indicated Lindsay drank, argued with his wife and said he was going to die but take some policemen with him. He left his house armed with a .45-calibre automatic pistol.

Constable Douglas Diplock, a member of the police force's special gun-call unit, confronted Lindsay face-to-face in the front yard of an east-end home where Lindsay went after the argument with his wife.

The constable testified he shouted to Lindsay to drop the gun. Lindsay allegedly replied: "Drop it, you bastard," and the man ran toward the police detail at his head and said saying, "I'll kill you, pig."

Police and coroner officials on hand supported Constable Diplock's testimony.

The five-member jury recommended that the police commission continue to provide the gun-call unit "because of the increase in offences involving firearms."

Social Security Cheque For Sick Man Is for Dime

LOS ANGELES (AP) — Social security officials and Herald Smith feel what they think he has coming is himself this dime.

That's the amount they listed on a cheque the 59-year-old former Chrysler Corp. worker received this week.

Smith, who retired in 1969 after suffering a heart attack, had applied to social security for assistance to help pay for the gas he averages each month for treatments.

At the meeting, Canadian Environment Minister Jeanne Sauve expressed satisfaction at the two-term outlook for water quality in the Great Lakes but warned that the rate of progress in programs to control pollution must greatly affect the world trust in the field of environmental protection.

Canadian delegates stressed the importance of having comparable vessel waste regulations well in place before the target date and expressed their will ingness to promulgate existing draft Canadian regulations calling for high quality treatment.

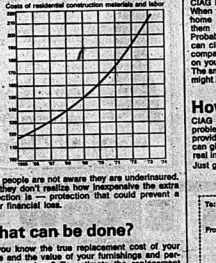
Insurance. How much is enough?

A good question if you own a home or furnishings in a rental apartment. You insured your property and belongings to protect your investment, but has your insurance kept pace with rising replacement costs?

The problem

Inflation and escalating prices have left far too many Canadian homeowners and apartment dwellers are underinsured. These people could lose a lot of money if their property were damaged or destroyed.



Most people are not aware they are underinsured. And they don't realize how inexpensive the extra protection is — protection that could prevent a major financial loss.

What can be done?

Do you know the true replacement cost of your home and the value of your furnishings and personal belongings? To estimate the replacement cost of your home, use the outside dimensions to calculate the area in square feet. Then multiply this figure by the local construction cost per square foot. Your CIAG office or representative will be happy to give you the construction cost for your specific area, and any other help you may need. Remember, this is only a guideline. A professional appraisal is the best way to get an accurate evaluation.

To find the value of your furnishings and personal belongings, just do a room-by-room inventory. CIAG has a handy inventory guide to help you.

When you establish the replacement cost of your home and the value of its contents, compare them with your present insurance coverage. Probably there is a significant difference. You can close the gap now by asking your insurance company or representative to increase the limits on your home protection policy.

The small premium you pay for adequate coverage might be the smartest investment you'll ever make.

How CIAG can help

CIAG is concerned about the underinsurance problem. If your home protection policy no longer provides the coverage it was intended to, CIAG can give you help in estimating and meeting your real insurance needs.

Christine Vekstara offers fresh pastries at the Bay of Quinte delicatessen

Deli Delights in Store

Four years ago Christine Vekstra bet that Trentonians had cosmopolitan tastes and would use and appreciate a European-style delicatessen.

She was right. And her Bay of Quinte Delicatessen became a nearly instant success.

Now Mrs. Vekstra, who runs the business on her own, is beginning all over again in Belleville with a branch store.

Opened recently at the former location of "Chuk's Gourmet World", the store features smoked meats and sausages, prepared salads and many varieties of cheese along with staff goods from poppy seeds by the pound to Swedish lingonberries. A special feature is fresh German pastries like strudel and Black Forest cakes.

Mrs. Vekstra says she had no previous business experience when she was offered partnership in a new delicatessen business. She took the opportunity hearing as the word along. The partner left and Mrs. Vekstra carried on alone with occasional help from her husband.

"At first store was heavily used by Bellevillians who kept asking 'Why don't you open a store in Belleville?'"

She finally decided to take their advice and bring her stock of special foods to the city.

Open only two weeks, she's already confident the store will be popular.

"We've had a very good response so far," she says. "In Trenton I knew we'd be popular with people from the base who had been in Germany and were used to these foods. But Belleville people seem to want delicatessen, too."

Besides over-the-counter sales, Mrs. Vekstra makes meat and cheese platters for parties, charging about 50 cents per person for the service. This year she plans to extend a popular Trenton service to the Belleville store. She'll make up holiday baskets for gift-giving and deliver them within the city.

Mrs. Vekstra, who emigrated to Canada from Holland 19 years ago, admits that two stores mean twice as much work though her six employees carry much of the load. In spite of all the help, she works a minimum 48 hours a week in the store.

All that work is contributing to her success but Christine Vekstra says the key is quality. "If you carry good food, people will buy it."

COOKING TIP

When cooking a large cut of meat on a rotisserie, use a meat thermometer. But when inserting it, make sure it does not touch the metal spit.

IT'S GREAT TOPPING

Fresh oranges, diced, combined with fresh strawberries and sugar to taste make a delightful and nutritious topping for vanilla ice cream and fruit sherbet.

Second Glance

OVER THE GRAPE VINE

"King Frederick VII was angered, when he (Hans Christian Anderson) drank to the toast with water instead of wine, and roared:

'When you drink, don't cheat!'

'Your majesty, when I drink with my King, water turns to wine,' came the suave retort, so quickly made, that the king laughed."

The Shoemaker's Son — by Constance B. Burnett.

GRAPE-GATHERING. — This gorgeous "September morn" makes going to the market a joy. It's jolly-making time, which means: a basket of grapes.

We've been rather "grape-minded" since reading the travel-book BLUE MOON IN PORTUGAL by Wilfrid and Elizabeth Younger. Not content, W. at E. (for short) tag along with little fact-nudges, such as:

("One of Portugal's major industries is the suspended exploitation of grapes." Adding that logic is alright, they say, but there's nothing in wine-making which is the most fascinating, oldest craft in the world — "as old as civilization.")

NO QUINTE GRAPES! — "No, Ma'am, we don't grow 'em to sell," answers a local market matron to our question, amidst a colorful display of his produce of vegetables and fruit. "The soil or the climate here, maybe, just isn't right for grapes. There's lots of grapes for sale over here, though ... from Niagara ... And now we go."

(W. and E. are saying that in Portugal it is the same way. Just one district — the Douro region — is the only place in the whole world where — "the schist soil, the steep terrace, the freezing winters and the glittering summer sun, alone have the conjoined power" to grow it.")

GRAPES — CIVILIZE — "Yes, Niagara seems O.K. for grape-growing," says the grower, Mr. Clayson, from whom we buy. "... and down in Fredonia grapes, rather than Concords are likely to be caught with the frost. Of course, it takes years to cultivate the vines ..."

(W. and E. interrupt, to remind: "Remember what we said about the vine-stock. It cannot be cultivated by seed. It takes at least three years to bear fruit and twice that time to come to full production. Only farmers, with a settled community can tend it. In Mediterranean countries, vine-cultivating is one of the signals that civilization has begun; that man at last has become that dual and important thing — a resident, agricultural creature.")

PROPER MARKET SELLING — "As for selling the grapes, we prefer market selling, such as we do here," the Niagara grower says, "rather than sign a contract to the wineries."

"Oh, yes, I help my husband pick the grapes. It is a busy time for us," adds his next, slack-garbed young wife, "though I had never done that until I was married. Our farm was my husband's — from home."

(W. and E. snicker: "Don't forget with the ivy and the vine come Dionysus. For port grown by the farmers in Portugal, we explained only the women pick grapes in the Douro, and cut out the bad berries from any cluster. The men carry the grapes to huge vats (lagares) which will hold 18,000 pounds all to be trod upon by the naked foot which is ideal and irreplaceable. For example, the juice must not be crushed or too much tannin will be extracted and the wine spoiled. It sounds romantic and easy. It is neither. The grapes are not only slippery; they are as cold and antagonistic as a member; hostile to human flesh. Then suddenly the mass becomes alive, it bubbles and spits. Or more simply, it ferments.")

Boy Spends Life in Bubble

HOUSTON, Tex. (AP) — David, a three-year-old boy born without a natural skin or the touch of a mother's human hands, lives in a plastic bubble, and doctors say he may be able to continue living so until five, elsewhere.

David suffers from a disease known as severe combined immune deficiency. His body lacks defenses to fight against disease. Even bacteria that normal people easily throw off might kill him.

For three years he has breathed filtered air, has eaten food and has been cuddled only by hands "encased in thick rubber gloves" which dangle from the walls of his crib.

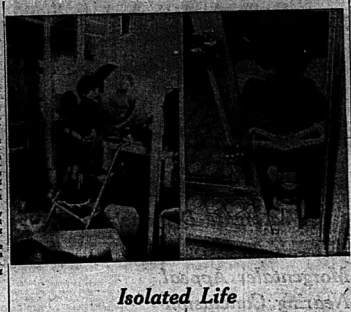
He was delivered by caesarean section Sept. 21, 1971, and immediately was placed into a plastic-walled bubble. He has lived there, plastic and germ free ever since.

"It's only in the last month or six weeks that he's begun to think about getting out," said Dr. Doris Freedman, a professor of psychiatry at the Baylor College of Medicine in Houston.

"I think that the next step is to help him trying to remove himself from that room. The whole question is: How long can you keep a person in a plastic bubble?"

At the request of the boy's mother and father, hospital officials have declined to give their names or last three letters, Dr. Freedman said in an interview.

He also is agile and strong. He romps and climbs and plays ball inside his see-through-or-look-inside world.



Isolated Life

Ann Landers

Teen Likes Dad's 'Company'

By ANN LANDERS

Dear Ann Landers: My question is for the girls. I'm a 16-year-old boy with a couple of pimples. It's unnatural for a normal, good, 16-year-old girl to invite her father into the bedroom if he has company with whom she thinks a baby?

I am not a prude or a Puritan but it seems to me that this sort of thing is out of line. Am I wrong? — Mrs. Bob's Wife

Dear Wife: Many people try to find fault with their parents who have children. They have no thinking problem with their own children, but when they're wife," or they never touch it. Maybe it's time for you to tell this people may be alcoholics.

Dear Ann Landers: I work at a job where I'm under pressure all the time. Sometimes I'm so nervous I can't sleep. I've been told that I'm a perfectionist and that I'm my own worst enemy.

In the meantime the kids don't even try to talk to him because his fourth love handles is no excuse.

Dear Ann: I will print my letter and say something about this. — Dear

Ontario Refuses To Quash Charges

TORONTO (CP) — A group from the American Indian Movement (AIM) made an unsuccessful attempt Thursday to persuade the province to try to quash charges laid against 16 Indians who took part in the violent disturbances at Parliament Hill in Ottawa last May 30.

It was the second attempt in three days to have the charges dropped.

About 15 demonstrators were in court with the rest of the Ottawa contingent locked out.

Six members of the AIM group held a 50-minute meeting with Attorney-General George Kerr after storming outside the building before the short talk, an hour, chanting and waving a large, torn case.

The Indians emerged from the late afternoon meeting, apparently satisfied at Mr. Kerr's reaction.

Alex Akwesasne, a member of the Cree Indian band from Moose Island, Ont., said Mr. Kerr told them he would not drop the charges, but would try to work on their other complaints.

The Indians also asked about better treatment for Indians on reserves, especially in the field of education and housing.

Del Riley, from the Chippewa reserve near London, Ont., a member of the Union of Ontario Indians, said he went with the AIM group to help them in their discussions.

He said they asked Mr. Kerr to a full inquiry into the Parliament Hill violence because it is a general feeling among Indians that the clash between the Indian demonstrators and 200 members of an elite RCMP riot squad might have been provoked.

Riley said later the results in regard to receiving a report on the incident "are the same as they were yesterday."

Mr. Akwesasne said he felt the solicitor-general "does not want to step on anyone's toes."

Mr. Akwesasne, his hair braided and sporting an intricately beaded vest and a bandana, windbreaker, said, "we just don't know a lot of things — it's maybe something we will get done."

Later, Mr. Kerr described the meeting as very frank, saying that is needed when matters were covered during the discussions.

Mr. Kerr said AIM and some hope for the demonstrators facing court action.

"I told them I was that the law should take its course," he said.

"It is important that the Indian groups had been infiltrated by Communists. It may be as well as far as the people involved are concerned."

Mr. Kerr said he has written to federal Solicitor-General Warren Allmand and Indian Affairs Minister Judd Buchanan and expects to hear from them about the progress of Ottawa's investigation into the incident.

Morgentaler Appeal Nearing Conclusion

OTTAWA (CP) — The Supreme Court of Canada is expected today to wind up the hearing of Dr. Henry Morgentaler's appeal against conviction on a charge of performing an illegal abortion.

The arguments for the Montreal doctor are just about completed in the crowded courtroom. Thursday. They ranged from a charge of bias on the part of Quebec Justice Minister Jerome Choquette to defences based on the British North America Act and the Canadian Bill of Rights.

The Crown's case against the doctor starts today.

It's one of the few Supreme Court hearings that have attracted large numbers of reporters and there was some grumbles about all of the press not getting into the hearing.

As a result, Chief Justice Bora Laskin today set aside seats for reporters after a meeting with a press delegation in which the chief Justice stated his views that press coverage of the court left much to be desired.

The nine-man court had many questions to ask defence lawyers Claude Sheppard and George Flam as they put Dr. Morgentaler's case in Thursday's hearing.

Mr. Sheppard was stopped short in his claim that Mr. Choquette acted for political reasons in preferring the charge on Dr. Morgentaler. The lawyer said the justice minister deprived the doctor of some of his rights.

The chief justice cut short the argument, saying it would have been argued in lower courts and that the minister acted within his powers.

The chief justice also cautioned Mr. Flam against arguing that Parliament acted ultra vires (beyond its authority) in passing the new abortion laws in 1969.

"Parliament may have been foolish; it may have been naive," said the chief justice. But those were not grounds on which a court would strike down a law. It required judicial review.

The Montreal lawyer ran into a hornet's nest when he tried to argue that because Canada had borrowed certain provisions of the Canadian Bill of Rights from the U.S. constitution, it must follow certain decisions made by the U.S. Supreme Court.

He made particular reference to two recent cases in which the U.S. court said the right to privacy included the right for women to terminate their pregnancy.

Mr. Justice Louis Phillippe said Mr. Flam was insulting the Canadian court with that argument and the chief Justice told the lawyer he was "pushing this court too far."

Dominican Terrorists Scale Down Demands

SANTO DOMINGO (AP) — Terrorists holding seven hostages in the Venezuelan Consulate for a week have scaled down their demands, but the Dominican government is expected to hold out for full surrender.

Shouting from a consulate window through an improvised cardboard megaphone, guerrilla leader Radames Mendez Vargas said reporters conditions inside the consulate are becoming intolerable.

He said he is dropping his demand for $1 million ransom and will settle for safe passage to Mexico and Peru for himself, the other terrorists and some of the 32 political prisoners whose freedom he had demanded earlier. Six terrorists are believed to be holed up with the hostages.

There was no immediate response from President Joaquin Balaguer, but Dominican officials and foreign diplomats said they believe the retreat by Mendez Vargas strengthened the government's determination not to compromise.

These sources said they believe the terrorists will eventually agree to free U.S. diplomat Barbara Hutchison and the other six hostages in exchange for safe conduct abroad for themselves alone. The government said earlier this week it would agree to that.

Thursday afternoon, U.S. Ambassador Robert Hurwitch and the Spanish ambassador put the daily delivery of food, water and other supplies to the hostages in the consulate fence. A man in a yellow shirt, presumably one of the terrorists, emerged from the building, handed a note to a policeman, picked up the box and returned to the house.

The contents of the note were not disclosed.

Hurwitch said the guerrillas' demands for safe conduct are unacceptable so far: apparently they are not feasible. But he said it may be days before the situation is resolved.

He added that the Dominican government has assured him it will not resort to violence unless provoked.

National Indian Brotherhood Speaks for Ottawa Protesters

OTTAWA (CP) — The National Indian Brotherhood asserted itself Thursday as leader of the country's 300,000 Indians, taking up the cause of a militant band of natives camped in an old stone federal building.

Clive Linklater, vice-president of the brotherhood, told a news conference that Indians want an independent investigation of a Parliament Hill riot where Indian protesters say they were beaten by club-swinging RCMP riot police.

The brotherhood has never formally backed the native protest which began as a caravan in British Columbia last week. But Mr. Linklater said the 200 or so young militants represent a "legitimate point of view."

"We found to know whether it was the riot squad of the RCMP who in fact rioted," Mr. Linklater said, claiming that the brotherhood had evidence that the protesters were the victims, rather than the perpetrators, of violence in Monday's melee.

He called for an investigation headed by a judge of the Supreme Court of Canada to put aside answers to a number of questions, including the part played by the RCMP riot squad, the part played by Communist Party of Canada (Marxist-Leninist) agitators, the exact sequence of events; the group which brought on the violence.

At the same time, Mr. Linklater said the brotherhood will hold a special executive council meeting Oct. 9-11 and has requested a meeting with Prime Minister Trudeau and Cabinet to act to discuss issues facing the country's Indians.

The issues brought out by the protesters — poor housing, poor education, poor health conditions, high unemployment rates, high life expectancy and the over-all state of poverty — have seen the brotherhood has failed in trying to deal with for years.

And while suffocal de Jonghe Hans they "would like to see action by a team sent to remedy long-standing social and other ills affecting Indians.

Railways Need Five Billion

MONTREAL (CP) — A cash outlay approaching $5 billion will be needed over the next six years to maintain Canadian rail services in the face of steadily rising freight traffic, Robert A. Bandeen, president of Canadian National, said Thursday.

"The point has now been reached where we have just about extended capacity to the limit of the present plant, and what is needed now is a major building program — about as large in scope as the original building of the transcontinental railway," Mr. Bandeen said.

In a speech to a meeting of American railway executives and officers, Mr. Bandeen said freight rates should be allowed to rise, to help cover railway improvement expenses.

The $5 billion estimate "is related to commercially-viable freight services only," he said.

"There are additional expenditures required if rail passenger services are to be improved, if grain systems are to be modernized, if non-economic branch lines are to be maintained, and if additional trackage is to be built for reasons of national transportation policy."

Opinion on Price Of Fuels Critical

WASHINGTON (CP) — Canada's Energy Minister Donald Macdonald said Thursday that concern on what the current world price should be for fossil fuels is critical in efforts to conserve energy use.

Underpricing of the resources would encourage "wasteful and extravagant use, hastening the time when they will run out, the minister said in a luncheon address to the American Enterprise Institute.

Mr. Macdonald also told the group that conservation of oil, gas and coal consumption, particularly by industrialized countries, is of high priority until alternative energy sources are available.

"If the world is to avoid a serious or alternatively underpricing these resources and thereby encouraging misuse of them, a more realistic view of the real price of these resources must be taken.

Mr. Macdonald told the meeting it was difficult to avoid the conclusion that the Organization of Petroleum Exporting Countries (OPEC) performed a service when it increased oil prices by focusing attention on rapidly depleting world supplies of fossil fuels.

Experts felt if present consumption rates were to continue, world supplies of oil, natural gas and coal would be exhausted by the middle of the next century.

Available uranium supplies, if used at a higher price and used in breeder reactors, might extend the estimate by 175 years.

"The augmentation ... which may occur in these estimates by technological breakthroughs in the areas of fusion, hydrogen and solar conversion, to name only three, is of course impressive," he said.

Mr. Macdonald, who was scheduled to meet today with U.S. energy officials, said he felt increases in the export price of Canadian natural gas and imposition of an export tax on crude oil were "partly a response to market forces."

Both measures have drawn criticism from the U.S.

The export tax, currently $5.50 a barrel, had been imposed to bring the price of domestic oil up to prices charged on the world market, where supplies for Eastern Canada were being purchased.

Funds from the tax allowed the government to subsidize the higher cost of those imports, the minister said.

The gas price increase was designed to bring "natural gas in line with the market values of competitive fuels, both to conserve a valuable non-renewable resource and to stimulate development."

Time Will Not Publish If Tax Privileges End

OTTAWA (CP) — The federal government has been told that publication magazines will cease publication of its Canadian edition if certain tax advantages for advertisers are withdrawn.

The warning came from Stanley T. Lathe of Toronto, president of Time Canada Ltd., in a brief to State Secretary Hugh Faulkner.

Mr. Lathe said the company will be forced by severe reductions in advertising revenue to Canadian operations if the government acts on proposals to end the special tax status.

He said the effects would be felt throughout the publishing and related industries in Canada and would result in closure of Time Canada, staff members earning $1.2 million this year, loss of $1 million in advertising agency commissions and the drying up of $3.7 million in contracts to the magazine's printers and suppliers.

In addition, Mr. Lathe said the government would lose $1 million in tax revenues and about another $1 million to conveyors, machinery lessors, the post office and Canadian media doing promotional services for Time.

The cabinet is said to be close to a decision on whether or not to revoke concessions in the income tax act allowing Canadian advertisers in Time and Reader's Digest to make tax deductions for advertising expenditures.

The move was recommended four years ago by the Senate Senate committee on the mass media and has the strong support of Senator Keith Davey, the committee chairman and national campaign director for the Liberal party in the recent general election.

CAS Declares Moratorium on Selected Infant Adoptions

By ISABEL BUGGAN
Staff Reporter

A moratorium on adoption of Canadian infants a year old and younger has been declared by the board of directors of the Family and Children's Service in Hastings County.

The moratorium will be lifted, says board chairman Allan Swanson of Bancroft, when the supply of available infants meets the demand.

The Children's Aid Society will cease to accept further applications from couples seeking to adopt Canadian children unless one spouse is physical or mental handicap. However, older children, and those with mixed racial origin or with mental or physical handicaps will still be available.

"The problem we're facing here has already been in existence across the province for the last five years," says CAS Director, Bruce Kerr. "But there hasn't been a necessity for us to take action until now.

"We know full well that it will take us a long period of time to fill the need brought about by an increasing number of applications and decreasing number of babies.

"There are 85 applications on hand now for adoption of infants, some of them originating in 1971.

"There'd be no jobs in the CAS still doing home studies of adoptive parents who could not hope to have a child for at least three or four years," says Mr. Kerr.

"They'd be suggesting their energy is useless areas when they could be working with people who are in need of their services now," he adds.

Mr. Kerr attributes the current demand in adoptable babies to both the pill and the more adequate family benefits programs that give assistance to single mothers.

"There was alarm and concern when unwed girls first started keeping their babies," says Mr. Kerr, "but we've come to see we were wrong. With some social and financial help they can retain possession and cope very well."

The meeting also heard that couples who had hoped for a pink-cheeked blonde-haired baby girl will now change their sights to include the older children who are available.

"I want to emphasize that we are not discouraging adoption of all these children in our care who are of mixed racial background, or who have mental or physical handicaps," Mr. Kerr adds.

Corke Attacks Planning Board For Lack of Constructive Action

ALDERMAN Ben Corke charged Thursday night that Quinte Planning Board is more concerned with accounts and ledgers than it is with area planning.

The board was formed through order of the province seven years ago to provide area planning and guidelines for controlled development of both urban and rural areas. It is composed of delegates from the municipalities of Trenton, Belleville, Sidney Township and Thurlow Township and the Village of Frankford.

"The board — as it has developed over the years — seems to have little influence in planning," said the alderman.

Thursday night's meeting was described by the alderman as "a perfect example of non-planning".

"We had almost no planning discussion tonight," he said.

The meeting held Thursday in Sidney Township offices, lasted more than two hours.

Mr. Corke said he is concerned about the amount of material delivered by the board as "a matter of local interest only."

When a topic is considered in this manner by the board, discussion and decision is left in the hands of the individual municipality.

"At least 75 per cent of the issues are of local interest only," said the alderman. "I'm beginning to wonder why I come all the way up here."

It is time for the board to appraise itself and justify its existence," said Alderman Corke.

The alderman suggested that the board meet every three months rather than every month.

"We have to have a board to supervise the Quinte planning staff," he said.

Budget for the planning board this year is proposed at $208,000. With three months remaining in the fiscal year, expenditures so far have totalled about $143,000.

Belleville picks up 54 per cent of the budget followed by Trenton which absorbs about 21 per cent. Sidney Township is assessed about 13 percent; Thurlow, 10 percent and Frankford, two percent.

Savings Bonds Popular With Local Residents

By JIM SHELLE
Staff Reporter

Belleville residents can always tell when fall is here. That's the time when employers are asked to enrol in the Canada Savings Bonds (CSB) company payroll plan.

"In the Quinte area about 90 per cent of all members of large industries participate in the Canada Savings Bond payroll savings plan," says Brian Knudsen, CSB organizer under the Bank of Canada.

As organizer of the program, Mr. Knudsen covers an area ranging from Peterborough and Lindsay in the north to Newcastle in the west and Napanee to the east.

"Generally speaking," he says, "there is a good percentage of employees buying bonds, averaging 25 per cent of all those participating.

"In my territory as a CSB organizer under the Bank of Canada there were subscriptions for $5.3 million worth of bonds last year. This year's target is $6 million," said Mr. Knudsen.

Mr. Knudsen says employers must implore employees to having the savings plans 30 their plant and says they actively promote the idea as a public service — this does not interfere with deputation from the public who wish to comment on the plan."

In opposition to a special meeting, Alderman Corke said is an interview the plan should be passed along to Toronto quickly.

"It's pretty detailed work and I don't think the plan should be taking the time for this," said planning director Bert Kenny.

Board Completes Plan Duties

The Quinte Planning Board — co - ordinator of regions development — decided Thursday night to sever itself from Belleville's official plan now that the concept stage has been completed.

A set of model bylaws and legislation for enforcement of the concept remains to be completed. The board will be now is in the hands of Belleville's city council and will be presented Monday night, said Alderman Ben Corke.

Then, in a motion, said it had completed its job by administrating the official plan and the remaining zoning bylaws "are of local interest only."

"It's pretty detailed work and I don't think the plan should be taking the time for this," said planning director Bert Kenny.

The motion stipulates the Belleville subordinate planning advisory committee should handle formation of the zoning bylaws and should be answerable to city council.

Alderman Corke — commenting on the plan — said "battle lines are already drawn among the aldermen."

The alderman said there is a council faction that prefers the plan be discussed in a special meeting.

He said council "is charged with the responsibility of passing it on or not ... this does not interfere with deputation from the public who wish to comment on the plan."

In opposition to a special meeting, Alderman Corke said is an interview the plan should be passed along to Toronto quickly.

Transit Usage Grows

Belleville Transit Commission statistics show an increase in passengers so far this year of more than 60 percent — double the increase anticipated by the commission in its budget considerations.

Figures for the current year to date total are up 13 percent from January to July — a record considered "very good" by commission staff.

Last year, 1.3 million passengers travelled in the commission's 15 transit coaches and these carried fares totalling in excess of $39,000 mike.

Ordinarily, the transit commission operates on a yearly passenger increase of about three percent as a guideline for setting a budget.

The 1.3 million passengers counted in fare revenue of slightly more than $720,000.

This total revenue topped $900,000 transit expenditures resulted in a $180,000 operating deficit of more than $120,000 to be borne equally by the city and the province.

This year's deficit is predicted at $170,000.

Retarded Students Join Belleville's Workforce

By LENNY WILLIAMSON
Staff Reporter

A program unique to eastern Ontario has been operating from William R. Kirk School here for the trainable mentally retarded this fall.

Eighteen members of the senior class at the school, aged 16 to 20 are going out two days a week to work in city businesses and industries.

The work experience program is the brain-child of the school teacher Dale King and Yvonne Rachette.

The enthusiasm of their pupils is reflected in their anticipation every Tuesday and Thursday morning, as they set out in their bus to go to work — the first opportunity they have had to make a contribution to society.

They told they love their jobs, and their employers commended their willingness to work.

The program depends upon close liaison between teachers and employers. The teachers spend a great deal of their time consulting with employers, most of whom exhibit a sensitivity and concern for absent in industry.

They observe, consult and continue to improve the suitability of student job.

"They're constantly running around," observed school principal Walley Dever of his two senior class teachers.

"They set it up by themselves and it's working out."

The intention now is to have the retarded students on their original jobs for the year. However experience has taught the teacher that mobility may be more practical.

"We want them to gain as much experience as possible, while they still have understanding teachers to support them, experience that will help them eventually to take meaningful jobs," says Mr. King.

Mrs. Rice is lauded in his praises of local businessmen who accepted his students in faith. On a few occasion he ran into a question or morale.

"If your students come in here and do as good a job as our regular employees," he was asked "how do you think that will affect morale?"

Problems arise in unexpected quarters.

The mentally retarded were often offended by the brutal humor and racy jokes they hear on the job.

Ironing out these disturbances is all part of a teach-

EMO Course Trains Residents In Emergency Radio Operation

Further strengthening of essential radio links in case of emergency is the aim of Quinte Area Emergency Measures Organization's radio operators' course this fall.

This year the course will be conducted at the EMO office in Ben Bleecker Auditorium Oct. 7 21, 28 and Nov. 4 and 11.

Angus Duffy, area EMO coordinator describes the course as one that "teaches the efficient use of the airwaves." When the course is completed, operators will be tested by the federal department of communication and those who pass will receive restricted radio operator licences.

Mr. Duffy says more than 600 have taken and passed the course in the 15 years the local EMO has been in operation. Each year, he says about 30 take the course and old wes pass become additions to the EMO network. With a base station in Belleville and one in Bancroft, the Quinte Area EMO stretches from Deseronto in the west to Brighton in the west and effective radio contact is essential to its operation.

This year, Mr. Duffy says, there about 120 qualified operators available to EMO. "But we can always use more."

Schools Target Of Thieves

City police report three high schools and a public school were entered overnight and in some cases money removed.

Police said some time during the night thieves broke into the safes of the three high schools by pounding upon the masonry wall with something resembling a sledgehammer.

Police said the method of entry was the same in all three cases. An undetermined amount of money was removed from Centennial Secondary School and Moira Secondary while no money was taken from Quinte Secondary.

Sr. John A. Macdonald public school was also entered by forcing a back door and less than a dollar in change taken.

Radio Links Essential

Essential to efficient operation of Quinte Area Emergency Measures Organization is reliable radio contact between widely-spread centres in the area. EMO co-ordinator Angus Duffy indicates base station in Belleville to which other stations report. EMO's radio operators' course keeps supply of trained operators available to the organization.

Officiating (?) Is Under Fire As Soviets Take Command

MOSCOW (AP) — Many blamed the officiating, but centre Serge Bernier was gentle Stanley Cyclist Vitali Trelak responsible.

Trelak's performance led the Soviet Union to a 5-3 win Thursday over Team Canada '74, giving the Russians three wins, a draw and two losses in the international hockey series.

The sixth game was marred by two fights—one in the second period between Bruce MacGregor of Canada and Valery Vasiliev, who drew only five minutes penalties during a 14-year professional career.

"We had a tremendous hockey game going and it probably would have stayed like that to the end."

Centre Serge Bernier said goalie Vladislav Tretiak had more to do with Canada's defeat than any penalty could have.

"He's a good one," said Bernier, who had at least four great chances. "He reminds me a little of Ken Dryden of Montreal Canadiens."

Bernier and Tretiak spoke briefly while madness was surrounding them at the end of the game.

"I told him he's a super goalender," said Bernier. "I'm right. He is."

Television viewers in the Soviet Union and eastern Europe saw only the beginning of the brawl.

The Moscow television cameras switched off the camera and put on a poetry recital.

Vasiliev, the ice hog, bled during the ninth after Leo Boivin and Vic Hadfield had punched him several times. While Lev was fighting with Kharlamov, defenseman Paul Shmyr of Canada was throwing punches at Mikhailov.

Vasiliev's goal at 2:42 of the first period came with Marty Howe in the penalty box and Boivin and Lev shouted he had taken only 34 seconds to open scoring.

It appeared a rout was possible until Howe collected a Shmyr shot past Tretiak. In the second period, Gordie Howe and son Mark combined for Gordie's goal at 6:15 to even the score.

It was followed at 8:31 by Andrei's goal. Then came the MacGregor-Vasiliev incident, and Shatalov scored while Canada was one man short.

In the third period, Kharlamov slipped a puck between goalie Gerry Cheevers' legs.

In all, Canada served two 10-minute misconducts—to Marty Howe and Marc Tardif—along with MacGregor's major a nd four minors.

Alexander Yakushev played sporadically for the Russians and appeared to be favoring his knee. Alexander Maltsev left the game in the first period after Henke landed a rugged check but no word was received on whether the veteran would play again.

Calls for Jail Sentence

'Hooligan' Ley Riles Boris

MOSCOW (CP) — Soviet coach Boris Kulagin said Thursday that Canadian defenceman Rick Ley is a "hooligan" who should be sentenced to 15 days in jail for his part in a brawl with Valery Kharlamov moments after the Russians defeated Team Canada 5-3.

"A person like that is persons not grata in our country," said Kulagin.

Kulagin held a news conference that in the Soviet Union players who engaged in violence after the game were sent to prison for 15 days, but there was no suggestion that the Canadian would be jailed.

Kharlamov left the ice bleeding from the mouth after frustrated Ley had punched him several times. No penalties were called in the incident.

Coach Billy Harris of Canada asked if the same law would apply to Valery Vasiliev, who punched Bruce MacGregor three times in the same period.

MacGregor and Vasiliev drew five-minute major penalties for fighting although MacGregor never dropped a stick or a glove.

International rules exactly that the aggressor in a fight gets a 10-minute penalty, during which a team must play short handed.

"I thought we had a super hockey game until that," said MacGregor. "After that, it just went through the motions.

MacGregor's penalty came during a penalty to Mark Howe. While Howe was still in the penalty box Yuri Shatalov scored to put the Russians ahead 4-3 and help wrap up their victory.

"I know I might get heavy game home," said Paul Henderson. "Especially after that call on Bruce. It's just a joke."

Ley said frustration led to his attack on Kharlamov.

"We know we got most of the penalties and the Russians get away with murder," he said. "It's awful."

Canada served 23 minutes in penalties to nine for the Soviet Union.

Team Canada general manager Bill Hunter said outside the dressing room that the performance of Russian referee Viktor Dombrowski proved once again that international officials must be improved.

"Officiating has not kept pace with he fabulous growth of hockey," he said. "It's unfair to the fans and players the way it is stands now.

Kulagin had no complaint with the officiating. He said for the second time in a row it is unfortunate players don't know how to control themselves.

He said Canadians must realize the referee is in control of a game until the conclusion. After that, civil law takes over.

Most Canadian players said the penalty to MacGregor ruined a promising hockey game.

"It was a fiasco, thats all you could call it," said MacGregor, who drew only five minute

Boycott Game

Team Canada Officials Upset

MOSCOW (CP) — Officials of Team Canada boycotted the sixth game of the Canada-Soviet series Thursday to "bring to a head" discussions over alleged interference by the Russian hosts.

Gordon Juckes, executive manager of the Canadian Amateur Hockey Association, and other ultimate indignity was the Soviets forcing team owners to appoint a Canadian official party from Canada to sit in Moscow.

At a hastily called news conference Canadian officials said they didn't consider pulling the team out of the series but chose this method to make sure the Russians know we didn't get the special treatment they promised us."

There was regret, too, that Team Canada players and fans were not happy with their accommodations and some evening several times before they were satisfied.

Gordie Howe, the 46-year-old elder statesman for Team Canada, who was cheered by the apparent bugging devices in his room at the Intourist hotel, said he could suitable living conditions only Thursday morning.

Juckes said the three-hour delay at the airport when Team Canada arrived Monday from Helsinki was followed by poor accommodation, poor seats for the opening game and a general indifference to the needs of Canadians.

After the first game here Tuesday, Canadians protested to Soviet officials but the Russian action to improve the situation was not satisfactory.

The Canadians said that every Soviet ticket request during the first four games in Canada and eight games in Canada was met. In addition, the Soviet delegation received first-class accommodation and transportation and special courtesy at customs.

Ice Time Refusal Proposed

TORONTO (CP) — A city of Toronto committee has a proposal that any group refusing to adopt the recommendations of an Ontario government inquiry into violence in amateur hockey be refused ice time.

At a meeting Thursday the city's park and recreation committee called for a meeting of city arena managers and local hockey associations to discuss how the committee might reduce violence in amateur games.

If the lead is followed by at least one Toronto borough, the Ontario Hockey Association may have a massive problem on its hands. The OHA has not implemented the report's recommendation which would call an automatic game misconduct penalty to any player penalized for a major penalty for fighting.

Mayor Val Lootsma of the Borough of North York said Wednesday his municipality would seriously consider closing the city's pool.

North York's arenas, especially North York Centennial Arenas, are used extensively by OHA teams.

Petes' Goalie Too Much for 67's

By THE CANADIAN PRESS

The Peterborough Petes' hot streak of Frank Saliva's domination of Ottawa '67s.

The Peterborough goaltender picked up 36 shots Thursday as the Petes thumped Ottawa 9-5 in one of two Ontario Hockey Association Major Junior A games.

Sudbury Wolves edged Owen Sound 4-3 in the other contest.

Saliva, who recorded three shutouts against the '67s last season, had his busiest time Thursday in the first period, blocking 16 shots as the teams played to a scoreless tie.

The Petes jumped into a 2-0 lead in the second period on goals by Tony Casolaro and Pete Kuzmack. Stan Gratton and Paul Fyfe and Paul Evans each scored during a one-minute, 57-second span in the third to complete the Peterborough scoring.

Ottawa's goals were credited to Frank Dennis and Jim Pritchard.

Bucs Had Upper Hand Over Regular Season

PITTSBURGH (AP) — Slugger Bob Robertson of Pittsburgh says he isn't worried about Los Angeles Dodgers.

"The writers are going to look at Los Angeles' record and our record and say we don't have a chance," he said as the Pirates prepared for the opening game of the National League baseball playoff here Saturday.

"We beat them here and we beat them out there (Los Angeles) during the year. In a five-game series, it's a dog-eat-dog situation."

The record shows the Dodgers with 102 wins and 60 losses — the best in baseball this year — coupled in the tough West Division. The Pirates were 88-74, the lowest total of victories for any first-place club in the East, where only one other team finished above .500.

In the regular season, the Pirates were 8-4 against the Dodgers, grounding out gamely in Pittsburgh and going 5-4 in Los Angeles, including 3-1 in the Western Division. Pittsburgh was 44-36 compared with a 44-46 mark in the West.

But there are some other numbers floating around that favor the Dodgers. Take 1964 and 1965.

Those are the won-lost records of Don Sutton and Andy Messersmith who will be hurling the first two games for Los Angeles. Sutton is their second-win average of 1.32 for Sutton and 2.59 for Messersmith. Both stack them up against their opponents on the mound.

Jerry Reuss, who had more triumphs than anyone on the Pirate staff, with a 16-11 record, will carry a 3.50 average into the opening game. Jim Rooker 15-11 and 3.77, pitches Sunday for Pittsburgh.

Messersmith struck out 327 batters, second in the league, while Rooker led the Pirate staff with 139.

Ballou was 2-2 and Messersmith 1-1 against the Pirates. Reuss was 3-1 and Rooker 1-2 against Los Angeles.

Los Angeles go... off to the best start in the majors and was able to coast through a late charge by Cincinnati Reds.

Pittsburgh got off to the worst start in the majors and climbed past five clubs in a September-long fight with St. Louis that went to the last day of the season.

Last May 26, the Pirates hit their lowest percentage record at 14-26 or .350. The Dodgers, at that time were 33-13 or .717.

The rest of the season the Pirates won 74 and lost 48 while the Dodgers were winning and losing 67.

"I would have to say this club is not going to get its recognition. It deserves," said Pittsburgh manager Danny Murtaugh after his club sewed up its fourth division title in five years.

The Dodgers are in possession of their first division championship, Los Angeles' last pennant came in 1966, before the inauguration of division play.

Game time Saturday is 1:05 p.m., EDT.

Don't Stop Now, Says Robinson

CLEVELAND (AP) — Frank Robinson, the first black manager in the 105-year history of the major leagues, says he doesn't know what baseball people are thinking. "but I hope...I hope that they don't forget about hiring any more."

He also doesn't want to get involved in worrying about the reality of Jackie Robinson's coaching staff.

"I hope it...I name three black ones and a white one you don't get on me and I don't want to get on me if I name three white coaches and one black one."

Robinson was honored Thursday—just after his selection to manage Cleveland Indians in the American League was formally announced—by President Gerald R. Ford, baseball commissioner Bowie Kuhn and others.

Robinson, repeatedly trying to minimize the racial aspects of his appointment, referred to a public hearing in 1967 by Jackie Robinson when he joined the club organization.

"If I had a no-wish in the world today," Robinson said, "that would be to have Jackie Robinson here to see this happen.

"I want to be judged by my expertise on the field. I was born black and now that I'm a manager, I guess I have to be a black manager."

Robinson will make an estimated $180,000 from his one-year pact as player-manager of the Indians.

Robinson thanked a long list of people for helping him become one of baseball's a tars during his 19-year career.

Robinson, the only man to be named most valuable player in both leagues, gained his managing experience as boss of the Santurce club in the Puerto Rican winter league.

He was there for five years and he is not sure whether he will return this season. He said it depends on how much trouble the owner will have trying to replace him.

He says he expects a busy winter trying to pick his coaches, being involved in trade talks and attempting to meet all his players.

Basketball Great, Jerry West Retires

LOS ANGELES (AP) — Jerry ball Association with 25,192 West, Los Angeles Lakers superstar, announced his retirement as a player Thursday, saying he felt he no longer could play basketball the way he wanted to play the game.

West's No. 44 jersey was retired along with the player who made it synonymous with basketball greatness.

The 36-year-old 13-time all-star selection at guard said his decision was firm.

"If you sacrifice your standards, you're not being honest with yourself," he added.

West will continue with the Lakers organization but his duties have not been defined.

He finished his career as the third highest regular-season scorer in the National Basket-points, including the 1969-70 individual scoring championship when he averaged 31.2 a game. He also owns the best individual scoring performance for a guard, tallying 63 points against New York Knicks on Jan. 17, 1962.

His records, many achieved in playoffs, include the most career points in playoff history with 4,457, and a single season with 988 in 18 games in 1970.

Although West missed much of last season because of pulled stomach muscles, he said the problem did not figure in his decision to retire.

"It was my decision", he said. "I know myself more than anybody else and I know it was time to retire."

Who to Play Where Is Oakland Problem

OAKLAND (AP) — It's playtime Oakland A's are juggling second baseman.

Dick Green will start at second in the best-of-five American League baseball playoff, which opens here Saturday, against Baltimore Orioles. Manny Trillo is the backup man because of Ted Kubiak's ankle injury.

If some other problems crop up, manager Alvin Dark isn't sure what he'll do.

"We have problems, like whether Reggie Jackson can play in the field," Dark said.

Right-fielder Jackson, the A's leading home run hitter and the league's most valuable player in 1973, pulled a hamstring muscle Sept. 20 as he slid into the field during the final 10 games of the season.

"I probably could have come back last weekend, but they wanted to be sure I was ready for the playoffs," said Jackson, who took part in a special batting practice session Thursday with most of the other regulars.

Dark would like Ray Fosse to start as catcher for defensive purposes, but the .198 hitter may be replaced by power-hitting Gene Tenace, the regular first baseman. The move would start a chain reaction, with Joe Rudi moving from left field to first.

The A's and Orioles both had workouts scheduled this afternoon at the Oakland Coliseum, where about 40,000 fans are expected Saturday to watch Jim Hunter, 25-12, pitch against the veteran Mike Cuellar, 22-10, in the opener.

Oakland, en route to a second straight league championship and pennant, advanced to the World Series by beating the Orioles in five games last season.

Baseball Attracts 30 Million

NEW YORK (AP) — Major League baseball attracted more than 30 million fans during the 1974 season, according to figures released Thursday by Commissioner Bowie Kuhn's office.

The unofficial total for the two leagues was 30,027,063, a 0.9 per cent from last year's 30,126,926.

The National League attracted 16,946,620 and the American League 13,432,604.

Of the 24 major league teams, 17 drew more than one million fans, including Cleveland Indians, Texas Rangers and San Diego Padres each of whom were under the 900,000 mark.

Los Angeles Dodgers topped all clubs with 2,655,674, almost a half-million more than Cincinnati Reds' 2,184,387.

Plenty of New Faces as Bobcats Tackle Oshawa in Opener

By MIKE BRADSHAW
Sports Staff

The Belleville Bobcats open another Metro Junior B league season tonight at Kinsmen Field Arena. At 8 p.m. the Cats host the Oshawa Legionnaires in what should be a record crowd of 1,000 fans.

If this Bobcat season is anything like the last one, Bobcat fans are in for some exciting hockey and the local opener should be a thriller. Last season Belleville lost only three games at home and finished second overall behind Whitby.

The Cats clobbered Oshawa by scores of 9-2 and 10-3 in two exhibition games last week. Their only regular season meeting with the Legionnaires was a 7-3 Bobcat victory.

Belleville has four regulars from last year's club missing for tonight's game. On top of the four regular players are Bobcat coach Bob Moore, Bruce Clark and Bob Moore, and former Junior C star Danny Lapensée.

Included in the returning players trying to make the team is Jim Richardson, the Cats' highest scoring player last year, and the league's second highest point getter.

Two players that won't be around tonight are Rick Langstaff and referee, Andy Mitchell. Langstaff is still waiting for his release from the team the CNE's Ivan Imlach. Oshawa. He and his family have moved to Belleville, but he is unable to acquire his release and therefore can play no games for the Cats.

Mitchell is sitting out a five-game suspension placed on him by the league executive last year.

Also out for tonight's contest is Wally Dalzard. He received a two game suspension last week which expires following tonight's game.

Belleville has eight or nine fine young rookies included in tonight's lineup that should be more than capable of filling in any empty spots.

In the Cats' season opener last Saturday, they tied Whitby 5-5. Although Whitby is a first year club in the league they have many excellent rookies and will probably be in contention for one of the top spots in the league.

Tonight Belleville will be trying to pick up where they left off last night. Many with their tremendous 10 and two, won-loss record during the regular season they also went seven for eight during the playoffs on home ice.

No matter who comes to town they'll have their hands full with the Belleville Bobcats.

Tigers Claw Trojan Teams

Moira Secondary School Tigers opened grudgeball season with another Tiger victory, this time over the Trenton Trojans in Trenton, Thursday. Adding insult to the defeat, the Tigers swept the doubleheader 2-0.

The Senior Tigers, soundly beaten by the Trenton Junior Tigers, 24-14, in Trenton, displayed earlier in the season form as they clawed the visitors to a 12-0 victory.

Moira Junior Tigers Kim Alexander and Mike Hall corner Trenton High School defender.

The 0-0 game in the Trojans' backyard was a defensive struggle between Moira Tigers and Trenton Trojans. Moira Tigers' defensive unit was led by Mike Hall, Kim Alexander and Rick Alexander. Moira Tigers' offensive unit was led by Dave Hall, Kim Alexander and Rick Alexander.

Moira Tigers' Kim Alexander, attempting to pick up two yards and a first down on a power dive in the third quarter, did much mutilating to the Trojan defense.

Only a great defensive play by Moira's Rick North prevented a touchdown after the Tigers had marched to the Trojan 20.

And later, Trojans gained an impressive stand when Trojans had three shots at the goal line from inside the 10 but failed to score.

Moira quarterback Scott Sharpe's passing game was built on short passing game but had three long throws pitched off. Halfbacks North and Mike McCausland picked up plenty of yardage on off-tackle plays.

As far as the Junior Trojans were concerned, it was a case of too much Peterson. The Tiger halfback tiggid the Trojan regularly and with success, many times dragging tacklers with him for three or four yards.

Running mate Charlie O'Malley also figured prominently in the TSS ground game. He and Peterson each picked up a touchdown with O'Malley's coming on a 40-yard ramble early in the second half.

Running back Larry Walsh was a standout for the losers.

Quarterback Tim Scott scored two TSS majors on keepers and the winners' final scoring play came on a perfect halfback option with Peterson finding Kirk Fleming in the open for six points.

Darrell Lake converted the first TSS touchdown but the other four majors went without the extra point.

After Scott's first touchdown and the convert were on the scoreboard, Moira bounced back to take the lead when Trojan quarterback Paul Hayman crashed over from the one-yard line on a keeper play.

Kim Quigley ran the ball in on a sweep for a two-point conversion and it was 8-7, Moira.

From that was all a fired-up Tiger defence was willing to concede.

Off on another long rambla during Thursday Ray of Quinte High School Football action at Trenton, is Junior Tiger halfback Steve Peterson. Two Moira Trojan defenders move in to cut the runner off. Peterson was a standout as TSS topped Moira 21-8 to avenge earlier 30-6 setback.

Hapless Wings Fall to Caps

By THE CANADIAN PRESS

Washington Capitals are hooked left winger Mike Marson must have a set spot for Detroit Red Wings.

The Capitals, one of the National Hockey League's weakest teams this season, along with Kansas City Scouts, defeated the Red Wings 4-3 in an exhibition game Wednesday night in Ann Arbor, Mich., with Marson scoring three goals for the victors.

In the Capitals, it was their second straight win over the Wings, 6-7, after losing three and tying one in previous pre-season games against Buffalo Sabres, Montreal Canadiens and Philadelphia Flyers.

In other games, Montreal beat Boston Bruins 3-1 in Montreal, while St. Louis Blues whipped their farm club, Denver Spurs of the Central Hockey League, 9-1.

Defenceman Reavey tied Minnesota Fighting Saints 3-3 in overtime, Edmonton Oilers and Winnipeg Jets battled to a 4-4 draw and Phoenix Roadrunners whipped Des Moines of the International Hockey League 6-2 in other National Hockey Association games.

Marson, one of two black players with the Capitals, played last season for Sudbury Wolves of the Ontario Hockey Association Major Junior A league, where he was in scoring with 35 goals and 58 assists for 94 points.

The other black member of the Capitals is Tony White, who played last year for Etobicoke Indians of the OHA Junior league.

Other Washington scorers were Gordie Brooks, Jack Egers and Mike Bloom. Detroit's Mickey Redmond, Hank Nowak and rookie Bill Lochead replied for the Wings, outscored 40-21 in pre-season games.

The Washington club their record at 3-3 against the Bruins on goals by Yvon Lambert, Guy Lafleur and Pete Mahovlich.

The Bruins took a 1-0 lead when Greg Sheppard scored at 2:19 of the first period. Lambert tied it at 1:41 of the third, Lafleur put it in at 14:33 and Mahovlich clinched it at 19:38 when he fired into an empty net.

Ken Broderick started in goal for Boston and was replaced in the second by Gilles Gilbert who finished the game. Michel Larocque went the distance for the Canadiens, who outshot the Bruins 36-23.

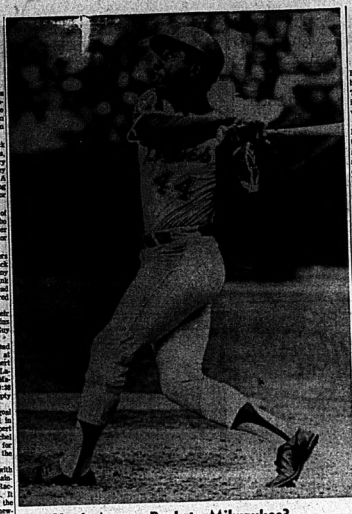
Steve Andrascik's goal with less than three minutes remaining in the game gave the Blues their tie in St. Flint, Mich. It was the first contest for the Racers, one of the WHA's newest clubs.

Bob Plicher and John Sheridan dashed in goals for Indianapolis. Bob Boyd scored twice for Minnesota with Murray Hall getting the other. Ron Busniuk of the Saints had three assists.

Both teams had a number of scoring chances in the 10-minute overtime.

In Edmonton before 300 fans, Danny Gerard's second goal with less than eight minutes remaining gave the Jets their tie with the Oilers. It was the second straight tie between the clubs after three 7-3 Wednesday in Saskatoon.

Anders Hedberg, Heikki Riihiranta and Ted Hargreaves scored the other Winnipeg goals. Doug Barrie had two goals for the Oilers with Ed Ryan, Rusty Edwards and Rom Climie getting the others.



Hank Aaron—Back to Milwaukee?

Brewers Eye Home Run King

MILWAUKEE (AP) — Milwaukee Brewers' President Bud Selig remained virtually silent, but rumors persisted Thursday that baseball career home run king Hank Aaron will join the team next season to finish his baseball career in the city he represented in his first 13 major league seasons.

Selig said only that "Aaron or quite a few others would help" the Brewers as a designated hitter.

However, the Milwaukee Sentinel reported the 40-year-old superstar had cleaned out his Atlanta Braves' locker of everything but his uniform, which is competing his 21st major league season with a record 733 career home runs.

Aaron, who has said he is "far from through" as a player is reported to have turned down a $75,000 a year public relation job with the Braves.

The Braves are reported not to want to sign Aaron as a player, even if he agreed to the maximum 20 per cent cut in his $200,000 a year contract.

Sherman Leads Stars

CHICAGO (AP) — Quarterback Tom Sherman threw touchdown passes of 43 and 45 yards and scored a fourth in a 25-point Charlotte first half splurge that put the Stars out-distanced Memphis Cities Friday 41-30 to advance their World Football League division title hopes.

The win gave the Stars, in the second quarter to take a 23-13 halftime lead.

Trailing 41-23 entering the final quarter, the Fire scored on Cyril Pinder's 10-yard run after Lonny Crittenden ran 22 yards on a fake punt to the Star 22, trimming Charlotte's lead to 41-30 with 6:40 left.

The Fire later reached Charlotte's two-yard line, but with 30 seconds left Phil Freeman's fourth-down pass was intercepted in the end zone.

Sahara Leader Surprised

LAS VEGAS, Nev. (AP) — Rookie Bobby Heins surprised himself with a five-under-par 67 Thursday for a one-stroke lead in the $125,000 Sahara invitational golf tournament.

"I only hit three or four shots I was proud of, but every time I looked up the ball was going straight for the flag," said Heins, who hasn't come close to making expenses and has survived the cut only five times in his brief career.

Johnny Miller, winner of eight titles and a record $353,021 this season, was five strokes back with a par-72.

Ben Kern of London, Ont., had a 71, George Knudson of Toronto shot a 72 and Bob Panasik of Windsor, Ont., fired a 73.

J.C. Snead and journeyman Dave Eichelberger matched 67s on the 6,800-yard, Sahara-Nevada Country Club course to share second.

Former champion Chi Chi Rodriguez, Miss Hill, Ken Still and John Schroder were at 68 while defending title-holder Lee Mackey was in a big bunch at 69.

Tom Weiskopf, who was paired with Miller, managed a four-under-par 68.

Jack Nicklaus, Arnold Palmer, Gary Player and Lee Trevino are not competing.

"I've never been pumped up this much in my life," said Heins after breaking par in an opening round for the first time in his life.

He made his big move with a burst that produced five birdies in seven holes beginning on the seventh, then faltered slightly coming home.

Suspension For Durbano

PITTSBURGH (AP) — Defenceman Steve Durbano will miss regular-season National Hockey League games because of a suspension handed down by league president Clarence Campbell.

Campbell issued the suspension for body-checking following investigation of an altercation in Kansas City during a Sept. 25 exhibition between the Penguins and the Scouts.

Durbano was handed a match misconduct and an automatic $200 fine after he turned around and swung his stick at Scouts' Gary Coalter. Under those rules, swinging a stick is considered an attempt to injure. Coalter and Durbano also were penalized for roughing.

Wiebe Involved With His Stories

BY KATHERINE KENNEDY
The Canadian

The problem is to make the reader begin Rudy Wiebe in the title selection from his first collection of short stories, Where Is The Voice Coming From?

An affair 25 years old should acquire some of the shiny translucency of an old man's skin.

But, in the case of the Cree warrior Almighty Voice, who escaped from a Prince Albert guardroom where he was confined for an unprovable act and made a fatal, three-day stand in a poplar bluff of the Minnechinas Hills, precious details are contradictory.

The 35-year-old author sets out on a journey to locate true events and characters involved in the saga, in a moment of realization that literature is power and for most of all his stories, he explains that he can not "pretend to objective, omnipotent distance" — an element in what is happening.

This personal involvement, the realization that what has happened in the past is still a present reality, accounts for the vitality and emotional intensity of the stories.

From a revolt by Manitoba farmers, who defied law and Winnipeg endeavors by pulling on culverts to let their flooded land drain to the incredible endurance and craftiness of Albert Johnson, a trapper who escaped his RCMP pursuers by creating a mountain of the habits of winter survival, 34 snowshoe backwards, the voice is always compelling.

And, although Inuktitut conscience transcends geographical boundaries, the voice is distinctly Western Canada.

The newness of the land, its development and the personality to their natural environment parallel the fresh perceptions and impulsiveness of the characters in Wiebe's stories.

The title story about Almighty Voice illustrates how first Ilest to be seen is a voice of wide brown supersedy from Almighty Voice's skull, and three strands of hair.

Mr. Wiebe puts words and events into contexts that give the reader a sense of richness and understanding.

"Sometimes it would seem that it would be enough . . . to hear the names only. The grandfather One Arrow; the mother Spotted Calf; the father Sounding Sky the wife named, of all things, Pale Face; the cousin Rising-Up-To-Sky . . .

But hearing cannot be enough, says the author. "The

Your Horoscope

By Bernice Bede Osol

Saturday, October 5

Aries (March 21-April 20) This will be an active social day for you. Chances are it will be small talk that leads you not to go to extremes in entertaining.

Taurus (April 20-May 21) You have a tendency now to pay too much for things. Better you let somebody else persuade but don't go overboard.

Gemini (May 21-June 20) During the early part of the day you will have time to ponder your relationship with your helpmate. It will have a lot to be worked out.

Cancer (June 21-July 22) You are not as fair as you should be in dealing with others. Don't act as you are in dealing with yourself. You will cause a problem.

Leo (July 23-Aug. 22) You will have your wits about you and be out of the fog at toward evening. Friends could easily talk you into doing something silly.

Virgo (Aug. 23-Sept. 22) Be careful not to get yourself in a situation where you have to embellish the truth a bit to cover up something you wrote or took good to others.

Libra (Sept. 23-Oct. 22) If you want short to do something special for your baby, don't try to save them or charm them by it. Hide talk will suffice.

Scorpio (Oct. 24-Nov. 22) Treat lightly in a situation where you are going to help someone and think a friend feels the same. He may not.

Sagittarius (Nov. 23-Dec. 21) You are too easily swayed today by one you are closely associated with. Though your humor instinct will flash little warnings.

Capricorn (Dec. 22-Jan. 19) Unexpected gains or gifts reliable. When you say you will do something, you do it. However, today will be an exception. You will not.

Aquarius (Jan. 20-Feb. 18) You will not follow plans you have thought through. Rather, you will leave things to chance. They won't work out as you hope.

Pisces (Feb. 20-March 20) An opportunity now or are presently available to will not be exploited to its fullest because of your indifference.

IN MEMORIAM

HUTCHINGS — In loving memory of our father Sidney Charles who passed away Oct. 4th, 1973.
Our family circle has been broken,
A golden chain is severed,
A heart of kindness worn for a while,
We know with tears unseen,
Some day we hope to meet again,
Where partings are unknown.
Sadly missed by son and daughter-in-law Bill and granddaughter Sharon.

STEPHENS — In loving memory of our dear mother, Mrs. Bessie Stephens who passed away Oct. 4th, 1973.
Remembrance is a golden chain,
That links those we love with us in heart.
To have, to love, and then to part,
Is the hardest sorrow we must bear,
Yet years may wipe out many things,
But this they will not wrong,
Memories are golden chains,
Which bind us to the past.
Sadly missed by Iris Dorothy.

STEPHENS — In loving memory of our dear mother, Mrs. Bessie Stephens who passed away Oct. 4th, 1973.
God knew that he was suffering,
That the end was drawing near,
He gently said, "Come to Heaven,"
And mother answered, "I am here."
Lord, it is hard to part with one so dear,
To lay the valley of rest so fair,
We cannot see why you took her,
But you know best.
We will meet our loved one there, And tell her how much we miss her.
Sadly, daughter Shirley and family, Belleville.

CARD OF THANKS

We wish to express our gratitude to Dr. Hutchinson, Dr. Hamilton, Dr. Fleming, Dr. Fisher, Dr. Irvine, Nurses and Staff of Belleville General Hospital for their kindness and attention during the illness and passing of our husband, father and grandfather, Mr. Ernest Whitehead.
Mrs. Ernest Whitehead.

The family of the late Emily Wood wish to express their sincere thanks to their friends, relatives, neighbours and staff of Bayshore Manor for their kindness and sympathy during the illness and passing of Mrs. Wood. Your kindness will always be remembered.

39 DUNNETT BOULEVARD

Somebody cared and our new listing is brimming over in "Love-ing Care." It is a family home in a fine neighborhood with, of course who is, regretfully, moving out of the Province. Less than 10 years old and featuring 3 bedrooms, 2 beautiful baths with vanities, two attaining the master bedroom which has a "his" and "her" walk-in closet. The kitchen is fit for a Queen with cupboards and counters galore. Cozy family room with attractive fireplace and sliding doors to the patio. Living room, dining room, plus one half-bath complete the picture. You'll be surprised at the financing available on this almost new home. Just listed and priced below reproduction.

OLDER EAST HILL

I'm solid brick with 5 rooms on the main floor and 2 rooms on the second floor plus 2 bathrooms. At present I'm duplexed, but I could easily be converted back to being the delightful family home that I once was. I'm located on one of the nicest residential streets in the city. I'm shown by appointment only and I'm priced in the low $'s. Pick up the phone now and make a date to come and see me.

THIS COULD BE IT!!

Country home situated on 1 acre just six miles from the city on Country Road, 4 bedrooms, bath, large living room, dining room, kitchen. Full price $20,000.00.

WITH A BIT OF LUCK

... you can buy too much for your money. This property could be very interesting to the investment-minded buyer. Two brick homes side by side, close to downtown. Reasonable taxes. Enquire tonight.

Chinese Painting Is Taught in B.C.

VANCOUVER (CP) — Ching Ku Chang, better known to his friends as Bennie, is a master artist who has been painting and calligraphy to both oriental and occidental students for 30 years.

The 55-year-old former civil servant from Taiwan lives in Vancouver with his wife, daughter and 3-year-old son.

The walls of his house are filled with examples of his art. Tranquil black and white portrayals of the Fine Gentlemen — the bamboo, the orchid, the plum — and fantastical, half-real paintings of legendary Chinese religious figures.

Mr. Chang's son-in-law, oboist Robert Cheng, explained that copying is an honor in Chinese art. Artists consider it a privilege to repeat the perfection of their ancestors; its says a lot that he is now difficult to draw and is the closest to actual representation.

"Chinese painting has taught me to really look at things for the first time," said Hilton Greene, a member of the Asian Art Society of Vancouver. "It makes us very critical of Western artists. They tend to depict without really seeing consequently they fall down on this attention to detail."

The Chinese try that you couldn't let the brush run away with you, that you must make it perform," Mrs. Greene said. "But this very difficult, whereas the Chinese pupils who have used a brush in school seem to manage much better."

Mr. Chang's paintings include bamboo in all its natural state, bamboo in the rain, bamboo in the clear sky and bamboo in the snow which is a remarkable black painting leaving only the bamboo and calligraphy outlined in white.

Robert said Mr. Chang is one of the few artists who can paint bamboo in the wind—one of the most difficult.

"The calligraphy is the symphony that he feels for the bamboo," said Robert. "There is a saying the taller the bamboo, the more she bows humbly." Mr. Chang feels such sympathy for this most respected plant. He is sad his father-in-law is delighted with the progress of the Canadian pupils.

"If there is any way he can pass on to others the art of Chinese painting, or our culture, then he will do it. For that he would die."

Not Racist

WINDSOR, Ont. (CP) — Dr. Betty Stephenson, president of the Canadian Medical Association, said Wednesday that her earlier comments about foreign medical students at University of Toronto were not racist.

She had said that an issue is raised by the fact that 25 per cent of the first-year class in the university's faculty of medicine are students from a foreign country. Taxpayers, facilities, classroom space and immigration officials must decide the policies to follow in this situation, Dr. Stephenson said.

"I wasn't being racist about it at all," she said in an interview Wednesday after a meeting of the Essex County Medical Society.

Consumers, Labor and Business To Get Marketing Board Seats

OTTAWA (CP) — Agriculture Minister Eugene Whelan completed a political balancing act Thursday, announcing that non-farm representatives soon will be appointed to the National Farm Products Marketing Council.

He said during the Commons throne speech debate that new representatives on the council — an umbrella body over the federal egg and turkey boards — will include consumer, labor and business representatives.

The announcement followed a clash over the issue with Bert Hemmerling, chairman of the food prices review board, and a public squabble with Consumer Affairs Minister Andre Ouellet.

Mr. Whelan said previously that farmers are not represented on other government agencies and outsiders were not needed on agricultural boards.

Now he hoped the addition of new blood to the farm marketing council would start a trend.

"I hope it will be recognized that we in agriculture have taken the lead and that we may expect representation of the consumer community to be appointed as members of other boards and agencies such as the CBC, the Canadian transport commission, the CRTC and Air Canada."

Mr. Whelan said he supports Prime Minister Trudeau's call for investigation of egg marketing by a Commons committee. This would provide a fair hearing for CEMA in the wake of the rotten eggs incident.

While Mr. Whelan was the official Liberal participant in Thursday's debate, the government made two major announcements in the House.

The first was confirmation that a bill to end the West Coast grain handlers' strike will be introduced, with debate expected to start Monday. About 100 workers have been on strike for several weeks in a dispute that has left grain vessels idle in Vancouver.

The second major announcement was that an agreement was reached by all provinces except Ont. 25 government members for the balance of the 1974-75 fiscal year.

By unanimous agreement, the Commons also set Oct. 23 as the deadline for reporting an spending estimates back to the Commons from standing committees which examine them in detail. Extended sitting hours will be in effect for the final debate from Oct. 23-25.

The second full day of debate on the throne speech ended with the expected defeat of a New Democratic Party amendment to the motion accepting the government's "clean-up" program plans for this session of Parliament.

Thirteen New Democrats were joined by 28 Conservatives, seven Social Credit members, Mr. Speaker and Independent Leonard Jones (Montreal). The 28 votes were bested by 139 members of the Liberal majority.

Standing in the 264-seat Commons is Liberal 141, Conservatives 95, NDP 31, Social Credit 11 and independent 1.

Food Enrichment Will Be Mandatory

OTTAWA (CP) — Proposals for a mandatory food enrichment program were announced today by the health department.

Dr. A. D. Morrison, assistant deputy health minister, said in a letter to food manufacturers that the government will decide every calendar year when the new rules should take effect.

The program includes putting back into milk, margarine and apple juice, with vitamins A and D, the government said.

The government said the new move was prompted by Nutrition Canada's findings that that many Canadians are not getting enough of these two vitamins.

Terry Goodyear, an official of the Grocery Products Manufacturers of Canada, said the industry has been waiting for the changes outlined by Dr. Morrison. The industry would welcome the proposals and work with the department on implementing them.

Mr. Goodyear said the food industry is also awaiting results of federal nutrition studies underway in provinces which will show eating habits in different regions. The studies were set up after the Nutrition Canada findings and final reports are expected soon.

Dr. Morrison said the Nutrition Canada report found the many Canadians were consuming inadequate amounts of vitamins A, C and D and minerals like iron and thiamine.

Under current regulations, the addition of vitamins and minerals to many foods is optional and left to the discretion of the manufacturers, said Dr. Morrison. "As a matter of public health, this should be made mandatory."

The proposals include the addition of vitamin D to a variety of fortified evaporated and skimmed milks and margarine; vitamin C to fruit drinks, vegetable and fruit juices, evaporated and skim milks; vitamin A to skim and evaporated milks and margarine; and the minerals thiamine, riboflavin, niacin and iron to flour and alimentary pastes such as pasta.

Dr. Morrison also said the government will be discussing with the industry the establishment of flour and pasta with such nutrients as magnesium, folic acid, vitamin E and pantothenic acid.

Others would also be discussions about enriching certain snack foods and dehydrated potatoes and the development of nutrient standards for ready-to-eat breakfast foods.

PM Will Announce Ministers' Wealth

OTTAWA (CP) — Long awaited details on the personal wealth of cabinet ministers will be made public Nov. 15, Prime Minister Trudeau announced Thursday.

A series of broad conflict-of-interest rules was outlined by Mr. Trudeau 13 months ago when the government took the position that disclosure of ministers' holdings would help avoid any conflicts.

"Our policy," he said then, "leaves each minister a very heavy onus to conduct his personal affairs in a manner which must not conflict or appear to conflict with his public duties and responsibilities."

Last December, the prime minister told the House of Commons he is a broader set of guidelines for all public servants.

Thursday, Allan Lawrence asked why it has taken so long for the cabinet to disclose personal worth.

Mr. Trudeau replied that it had taken longer than originally expected to organize the staff of officials to examine the most ministers' holdings will be made public Nov. 15. How cabinet members, appointed in a shuffle last August, will be given "a little more time" to straighten out their affairs, he added.

He had given ministers three options:

—Divest themselves of any holdings that may result in conflict of interest.

—Put holdings in a frozen trust where they could be sold or traded.

—Put them in a blind trust, where stocks may be invested or changed around, but not with the minister's knowledge.

Those who choose to retain their holdings must register them for public inspection. Exempt from the registry or control are private bank accounts, Canada Savings Bonds and government securities.

Dief Praises Marchand

OTTAWA (CP) — John Diefenbaker, the former Conservative prime minister, often has the appearance of a man who finds little good in the Liberal government.

Mr. Diefenbaker's attacks on the government and its policies have become almost legendary. But there are times when he singles out a government minister for praise.

Such was the case Thursday when he said nasty words for Transport Minister Jean Marchand.

"He is a remarkable orator. Sometimes he enlivens the House and I have always tried to be present whenever he speaks.

"Whether I agree with him or not, he has developed that indefinable parliamentary quality to such an extent over the years that I always enjoy hearing him speak even though, when he has finished, we have little or no idea of what he was actually endeavouring to prove.

"However, I say in all sincerity that I have great admiration for him as I have for all honorable members who endeavour to express themselves clearly and with honesty of purpose. I cannot say more at anyone than that."

That said, Mr. Diefenbaker launched into a wide-ranging attack on government policies.

Defence Minister Studying Possible Armed Forces Cutbacks

OTTAWA (CP) — Canada's inflation-hit armed forces are awaiting personnel and equipment cuts and studying how to trim their long-term, much-needed modernization program in an effort to remain within their budget.

Acknowledgement of the serious position the forces was given in an interview Friday by Defence Minister James Richardson who said he will seek additional money for the defence budget next year.

Mr. Richardson and other sources said there is intense study under way to see how the stretched-thin forces can live within a budget when inflation is running 10 per cent or more.

Already the forces have been allowed to drop to about 2,500 under authorized strength—this at a time when expanded peacekeeping duties are sapping available resources.

Mr. Richardson said there must be cuts in personnel and operating costs and capital expenditures will have to be deferred or perhaps cancelled.

He also said he must look at Canada's commitments to see if trimming is possible. Canada now has 2,500 troops serving with NATO in Europe 950 on Cyprus and 1,100 in the Middle East.

The minister will visit all three areas later this month and it is expected he will investigate reduction of the Canadian United Nations contingent on Cyprus.

The 1974-75 estimates call for expenditures of about $3.3 billion.

Sources say that some forces exercises have been cancelled already and others probably will get the axe. One official said search and rescue seems to be the only operation that will not be studied with a view to possible reductions.

An example of cost-cutting is the laying up of the submarine Rainbow in Esquimalt, B.C., two months in advance. She is to go out of service at the end of the year but was to have taken part in exercises later that.

Mr. Richardson commented in an interview after he was questioned in the Commons by Allan McKinnon (PC—Victoria), the new Conservative military critic.

Mr. McKinnon said he has heard that commanders have been warned of a 30-per-cent cut in operating and training expenditures this year.

Mr. Richardson did not deny this figure but replied that cuts will have to be considered in all areas—operating, personnel and capital expenditures.

Mr. McKinnon told reporters that a 30-per-cent cut would bring the forces to a standstill. He said the cuts show that Mr. Richardson's much-heralded policy of allowing the defence budget to grow seven per cent a year is now dead.

Mr. Richardson announced his seven-per-cent growth rate last October, saying it meant a new era for the forces because they could plan expenditures well in advance.

The authorized strength of the forces is about 83,000 men. At any time there are about 1,300 off strength for reasons varying from absent without leave to "invalided sick leave."

But at present there are about 80,500 in the forces and about 79,600 actually employed.

Mr. McKinnon also said Mr. Richardson is going to use needed defence department money to pay for an election promise.

He was commenting on an answer given by Dan McKenzie (PC-Winnipeg South). Mr. Richardson said that some defence money might go into the new facility in Winnipeg for maintenance of Boeing 707s. Most of the money would come from elsewhere, however.

Potter Slams Star

TORONTO (CP) — Richard Potter, Ontario's Minister of correctional services, declared The Star Friday for what he called "irresponsible and unprofessional reporting" in his handling of the story of the death of a prisoner in the city's Don Jail in September.

Hotstepper Moira Harrison, executive editor of The Star, said in a telephone interview that he disagreed with Dr. Potter's charges.

"We are not in the habit of publishing such stories without checking them through a variety of sources," he said. "We would not have published them if we had not believed them to be accurate."

Mr. Harrison said he is gratified that as a result of The Star's reporting, an investigation has been called.

"This is not the first time that a government official has objected to a news story that is embarrassing to him," Mr. Harrison said.

Dr. Potter said at a news conference The Star story, which appeared Oct. 3, was filled with "hearsay and contradictory information."

He did not specifically point out errors in the report.

The story dealt with the death Sept. 15 of Don Rasdino, 30, who was found hanging in a jail cell with his hands tied behind him.

Dr. Potter charged that The Star's story about the Rasdino death places the staff of the jail "under a cloud of suspicion that is not supported by any of the facts known to me."

The Star has also run a series of copyright stories quoting a former jail guard as saying that a number of prisoners have allegedly been beaten by guards at the jail.

The Toronto police are investigating those charges.

Earlier Friday, Police Chief Harold Adamson said in a public statement "there is no question" that Rasdino committed suicide.

Ceilings Raised For School Costs

TORONTO (CP) — Increases in expenditure ceilings for both elementary and secondary schools were announced Friday by the ministry of education.

The basic expenditure ceilings will be raised by 13 per cent to "allow all school boards to keep up with the cost increases that are beyond their control."

In addition, elementary schools will be allowed to increase their spending by an additional $80 a pupil to help keep pace with new trends in education for younger children.

The ministry said that inflation and higher teacher qualificatiolls necessary for modern educational programs are the increases.

The new spending limits will be $876 an elementary pupil, an increase, of $178, and $1,291 a secondary pupil, an increase of $160.

The ministry said that new trends in primary education make it necessary to maintain more available funds for elementary education—thus the higher increase for lower grades.

The extra $80 for elementary pupils means school trustees have the opportunity to reduce class sizes and hire needed consultants, executive secretary of the 31,800-member Federation of Women Elementary Teachers Associations of Ontario, said.

Notification of the increase in educational ceilings hasn't reached Hastings county yet, but public school board chairman Mac Smith was "pleased" with the information he read in this morning's newspapers.

"It's good they have increased the ceilings for elementary pupils," he said.

Mr. Smith said the "weighting factors" are a budgeting device aimed at adjusting provincial ceiling to accommodate all of the ordinary local needs will have more impact on this county. He said he doesn't expect to see the weighting factors for 1975 until January.

"It will be spring before the local implications of the minister's announcement will be fully known here," said Mr. Smith.

This is the fifth year of provincially-imposed budget ceilings on local school trustees to limit their increases in school-board spending. The trustees decide how much to spend within the upper limits set at Queen's Park.

Education Minister Thomas Wells said "weighting factors," a budgeting device aimed at adjusting province-wide ceilings to unusual local needs, will be introduced next month.

The ceilings announcement means that basic spending by local school boards might increase next year by up to $254 million over the $1.9-billion ceilings this year.

The pupil teacher ratios average 25 to 1 in elementary schools and 17 to 1 in high schools.

Miss Henderson said the extra money will allow trustees to reduce the elementary ratio by 1.5 next year.

French Pushed for Kindergarten

TORONTO (CP) — A provincial committee recommended Friday that French be introduced as a classroom subject in kindergarten no later than the junior division of elementary schools in Ontario.

The report, noting that the need for French is more urgent in some areas of the province than in others, suggested that after Grade 7, school boards declare French to be either a compulsory or optional subject, at the discretion of the local board.

The 13-member committee, made up of school board representatives, teachers, and ministry officials, was prepared over the last year.

Recommendations.

The report said students at the Grade 7 level and above should receive three hours and 20 minutes of French instruction each week and that principals should encourage the students to take French in high school.

Liberals Alter Lyrics Of National Anthem

OTTAWA (CP) — Legislation to make O Canada the country's official national anthem, and to change some of the repetitious wording, was introduced in the Commons Friday by State Secretary Hugh Faulkner.

The bill introduced previously without being passed, cuts out two "stand on guard" phrases and one "O Canada" from the standard version.

O Canada! Our home and native land!

True patriot love in all our sons command.

With glowing h earts we see thee rise,

The true North strong and free!

From far and wide, O Canada, we stand on guard for thee.

God keep our land glorious and free!

O Canada, we stand on guard for thee.

O Canada, we stand on guard for thee.

VIP Treatment?

OTTAWA (CP) — Severe fines and perhaps even jail terms are viewed by the new justice minister, Otto Lang, Andre Ouellet, as likely the only way to save the free enterprise system and ensure that consumers get a fair deal.

He called for a hard-line Combines Investigation Act and suggested that Canada follow the lead set by the United States, which has jailed company executives for offences such as price-fixing.

Wilson Warns Against Big Pay Deals

LONDON (Reuter) — Prime Minister Harold Wilson has warned "rogue employers" that they risk bankruptcy through price controls if they tempt workers with large pay deals in breach of his wage-restraint agreement with trade unions.

Wilson's warning, at a news conference in the Welsh city of Cardiff, followed a $144-million pay offer by the Ford Motor Co. to its hourly-paid workers in Britain and a pay increase of nearly 30 per cent for independent TV-review reporters.

Angered by opposition taunts that these made a mockery of his "social contract" with the unions—cornerstone of his governing Labor party's campaign for next Thursday's general election—the prime minister said: "Price control can be an effective deterrent against rogue employers. If they (employers) were going to charge more for their products on the home market because of their increased costs, they would simply be caught by price controls . . . and would put them selves into bankruptcy."

Wilson refused to say whether he felt the Ford or TV men's pay offers breached the social contract. But Chancellor of the Exchequer Denis Healey said in a radio interview that "on the face of it, the offer made by Ford is contrary to the social contract."

News Briefs

SANTO DOMINGO (AP) — The Dominican government is demanding the unconditional surrender of terrorists holding seven hostages in the Venezuelan Consulate. "There have been and will be no negotiations," the government said Friday in its first public statement since the siege began Sept. 27. The hostages include U.S. Information Service official Barbara Hutchinson and the Venezuelan consul and vice-consul.

Fishermen Feared Dead

LIMA (AP) — Peruvian officials said today they fear that 72 missing fishermen whose boats capsized during Thursday's earthquake have been drowned. The fishermen were last reported 38 miles offshore, exactly at the site of the quake's epicenter. If confirmed, their deaths would bring the official death toll from the earthquake to 125. The Peruvian government said another 1,702 persons were injured and an estimated 5,000 homeless.

Mounties Deal Drugs

OTTAWA (CP) — A Conservative MP charged Friday that some RCMP officers are forced to deal in drugs because they are underpaid and overworked. John Reynolds (Burnaby-Richmond-Delta) recalled the case of a former drug squad commander in Vancouver who was charged with making $50,000 from heroin seized in a raid. "You know they're not understaffed and have so much work to do, such as growing beards and going underground for months, that some have turned to working with the criminals."

Pay More for Pop

TORONTO (CP) — Charles Wilson Ltd. announced Friday it will raise wholesale prices on its soft drinks next Wednesday for the third time in a year, following similar increases by several other manufacturers. A spokesman for the company said the increase will be about one or two cents a bottle or can.

Seafarers Under Scrutiny

TORONTO (CP) — The Globe and Mail says the Ontario government is considering a public inquiry into activities of the Seafarers' International Union (SIU) of Canada. The newspaper says provincial police and Metropolitan Toronto police officers have been investigating union activities since Mid-April and that they favor a royal commission as the best method of examining the operations.

Sitting Pretty

The Lambert household was increased by seven last week. Tigger, the year-old white poodle of Mr. and Mrs. Randy Lambert, gave birth to seven pups, including one black one. And who better to enjoy the young pups than a toddler, in this case, Chad Lambert's nephew of the dogs' owners. The pups haven't got their eyes open yet but already they're a handful for mama, who has to take a nosecount usually at feeding time.

Giving: It Doesn't Matter Why

By JOAN FINNIGAN

We know, of course that people who give easily, honestly, freely as a mature expression of their being, are always people who in their past, and early childhood particularly, have been given to. They, in their turn, will pass on this manner of giving and so the chain goes round. We also know that people who cannot give or who find it hard to give, give with complaint (love, time, money, gifts, friendship, concern, whatever it be) are people who have not been given to by the early meaningful people in their lives. And so they give out of their hangups, or not at all.

Your reasons for giving to the United Way agencies run the gamut between these two poles: giving out of your heart and giving out of your hangups. Lots of mature people in the community give because they want to put something back into the world in return for all they have received.

United Way

Some people give for reasons closer to the heart; they have been helped by an agency or someone near and dear to them has been helped by an agency. For instance, I find, without exception, that people who have been given Red Cross blood in an emergency or whose loved ones have been given Red Cross blood in an emergency become, out of gratitude for this life-saving service, almost fanatic about supporting the Red Cross.

Some people give because it is their duty and some people give because they have strong humanitarian convictions, an integrated 'Lookout-to-the-universe philosophy. Some people give because it gives them an ego-lift and feeling of power and superiority; some people give to save face in front of others; some people give because it is good advertising.

Some people give just to get the canvasser out of their hair and others donate because they are absolutely convinced of the validity of the United Way agencies.

How much money you have doesn't have much to do with your giving in the context of the United Way campaign. I remember well my first year with the United Way when the employees of Hunt Bros. pledged to the last man. I also remember with shame and embarrassment the well-oiled executive who would give nothing.

In the lower income brackets some people give because they have friends and relatives who have needed and used the services of an agency and have heard, by word of mouth, how great the help was. Some people in the upper income brackets give and often annually because they well and truly bear responsibility for the fact of life. "From one to whom much is given, much is expected". Maybe a good mother or father's pattern repeated. Most of you reading this over can find yourselves here. Do I give out of my heart? Or out of my hang-ups? Does it really matter?

Campaign A Success

The Belleville and District Unit of the Canadian Cancer Society collected a total of $63,400 during the spring campaign. Chairman of the campaign was Brian Knudsen.

$50,000 Needed to Repair Ice Pad

TRENTON — The near impossibility of repairing or retarding the deterioration of the Trenton Community Gardens ice pad will necessitate an estimated $50,000 expenditure to replace the existing cooling system, Deno Getas, town parks and recreation director said Friday

Mr. Gettas said in an interview the one-inch diameter steel pipes laid in the concrete floor will likely need replacement within the next five years.

Ontario Arena Association (OAA) figures indicate that the effective life of an old brine-carrying steel pipes, as Trenton's are, is generally 15 years. After that time, the accumulated corrosive action of the salt and water mixture finally creates holes. Resulting leaks diminish the ice producing and maintenance capacities of the ice pad.

Mr. Gettas said the pad at Trenton's arena, built in 1957 for an approximate $100,000, is due to spring a leak.

"As yet, none have appeared, but we're anticipating this happening because of the past experience of other arenas. The OAA found 20 years is usually the maximum."

Preventative measures to prolong ice pad life are limited. At present, arena crews are maintaining a high Ph level to reduce the corrosive action.

Chemicals cannot be added to the brine without changing its cooling properties.

Mr. Gettas said once a leak exists, it is nearly impossible to find. A yellow spot on the ice merely indicates the brine is leaking on to the crack in the concrete floor. The brine may actually be spilling out of the pipes elsewhere.

In an arena floor 200 ft. x 190 feet, it would be difficult to find a leak in a system of pipes that stretch for approximately nine miles.

Repairing a part of the floor where a leak is suspected would only be a temporary measure

"In one year, it's a good indication of the state of other pipes," said the director. "I think that once you start developing leaks in the floor, unless you get leaks in the exposed end, you can't patch."

The estimated maximum $50,000 price tag for a new ice pad would depend on the kind that would be made in the plant. Replacement today would cost between $15 to 20,000.

However, said Mr. Gettas, even if it is replaced now there are no guarantees a new system would stand up. An arena in one town developed a leak in the new plastic pipe system only four years after it was installed.

Education Beat

Schools Offer Second Chance

By LENNY WILLIAMSON
Staff Reporter

We've had a call from a high school guidance counsellor who wonders if the public knows how easy it is for adults to get a grade 12 diploma.

The ministry of education changed regulations last January to help adults complete their education, but the word has been slow in getting out. Night schools in city secondary schools started Oct. 1, when the fall session began, and many of them offering credit courses by which adults could upgrade their education.

The ministry is now offering a "maturity allowance" of 15 credits for older people who go back to school. The maturity allowance recognizes that adults have picked up some knowledge along the line equivalent to the content of many high school courses.

However all mature students must take an additional four high school credit courses to get their diploma.

Here's how it works, in brief.

A mature student with grade 9 and 10 is considered to have 14 credits. Before last January he would have had to earn 4 further 13 credits before being granted a grade 12 diploma.

Now he is granted 12 credits in recognition of his experience, and has to take only four formal high school courses to get his diploma.

A mature student with only grade 8 standing would have to take 15 courses. His maturity allowance would give him 12 credits, and the other 15 would bring the total to the 27 required for high school graduation.

Guidance counsellors say the new regulations are a boon to armed forces personnel "who are always upgrading" and people who dropped out in grade 10 and suddenly find many jobs, for which they are otherwise eligible, now require grade 12. These people can earn a grade 12 diploma in one year at night school, or, through correspondence courses.

The new regulations also allow high schools to give adults credit standing for certain approved courses they have taken since leaving school, usually part of in-service training. This would apply particularly to technical courses taken by tradesmen.

Further information can be obtained by contacting the guidance department of any high school, where counsellors are especially keen to help adults interested in improving their education.

Harvest Underway In Soviet Union

KRASNODAR, Soviet Union (Reuter) — In clouds of dust two threshing machines crept across a gigantic wheatfield as the sun sank towards the rim of the Kuban River plain, the granary of southern Russia.

Another day, and all the wheat will have been gathered in on the Chaupsye collective farm. The life of the Soviet grain harvest is leaving this fertile area near the Black Sea and advancing northwards.

The weather is warm and dry, and the disastrous grain shortfall of 1972 already seems a bad dream as the Soviet Union looks well on the way to its second bumper harvest in two years.

On this farm the wheat has already been cut, and the combines now are picking it up and threshing it—a wasteful double process that can lead to serious losses if the weather turns nasty in the meantime.

From the wheatfield it is transported by truck to stand in the open air on asphalted yards where the remaining chaff is removed by a method dating back to the dawn of agriculture.

The Chaupsye farm, named after a Red Army hero of the civil war, occupies 14,600 acres of rich, black loam washed on the southern side by the Kuban River.

It was formed, in 1950 by merging six existing collectives, the first of them set up in 1928, and has a population of about 6,000 people—2,500 workers, the same number of children, and some 1,000 pensioners.

The farm's chairman, Pavel Vasilenko, describes it as typical of the area, but with its rich soil, Mediterranean climate and income last year of $10 million, it is scarcely typical of the Soviet Union as a whole.

As in all other Soviet production enterprises, the Chaupsye farm is plastered with posters and signs exhorting the workers to ever greater efforts and more productivity, with the grain figures a particularly emotive index of achievement.

An ordinary laborer on this farm earns about $1,800 a year, though a skilled combine operator can make around $4,000. The money is used to buy supplies from the collective.

The farm is responsible for every facet of the workers' lives, including the education of children, where party dogma has replaced the teaching of the church. Posters ridicule the remnants of religious belief.

There is a slow drift of young people away to better-paid factory jobs in the nearby territorial capital of Krasnodar, but it is claimed this loss can be made up by further mechanization.

About a quarter of the 2,900 houses scattered in half a dozen settlements on the farm have their own water supply. The rest must fetch their supplies from public pumps.

Each family is allowed just over one-third of an acre of private land on which to grow produce and rear a few animals for domestic use and for sale in peasant markets. Such private plots—about two per cent of Soviet farming land—accounted for almost one third of the country's agricultural output in 1972.

Mr. Vasilenko reveals that wheat production on the farm this year is estimated at 18,500 tons.

The yield of about 1.7 tons per acre, at least twice the national average, meets the plan laid down for the farm by the state, but is not up to the target which this "millionaire collective" set itself.

Early Lessons Remain for Life

By MARG HAYLOCK

PICTON — Cpl. A.J. Kea of the Picton detachment of the Ontario Provincial Police this week applied the lessons some elementary school students attending a safety bus patrol seminar at Prince Edward Collegiate Institute.

A qualified first aid instructor, Cpl. Kea demonstrated the application of direct pressure bandages with student "victims."

Basic first aid for shock victims and instructions for mouth-to-mouth resuscitation also were explained.

Purpose of the seminar was to cue bus patrollers on what to do in case of emergency on the road. In addition to first aid treatment, pupils were instructed in the use of fire extinguishers and evacuation of a bus in the event of a fire.

The seminar was attended by approximately 150 safety bus patrollers chosen in Prince Edward County.

Although pupils must be in Grades 7 or 8 before qualifying as patroller school instruction in emergency action is begun at kindergarten level.

Last week a bus load of kindergarten and Grade 7 pupils from Sophiasburgh Central School visited Picton fire hall to learn what happen when the siren rings.

Children were allowed to aim the fire hose and enjoyed listening to the siren. In addition they were given a ride in chief Leonard Tripp that the telephone number for their fire hall should be best known for emergencies. He displayed special safety posters provided for this purpose.

"We find the time to train children about fire safety is when they are children. This is the time to make them safety conscious," says chief Tripp.

The first aid instruction supplied to bus patrollers and the information provided during student tours of the fire hall indicates an excellent program to educate youngsters in emergency action.

Explained in simple, direct terms, the first aid instruction offered by Cpl. Kea equips the bus patroller with the knowledge needed to cope with accidents.

The pupils were cautioned of the importance of "keeping cool". If there is an emergency their classmates will look to them for reassurance and direction.

The first aid measures they learn now could not only be an accident aboard a bus, but in many situations where help may not be immediately available.

Students who learn the techniques of mouth-to-mouth resuscitation would be capable of assisting a drowning victim.

Instructed in how to operate a fire extinguisher, they may be able to offer help in a household emergency.

As Chief Tripp points out, the best time to educate children in safety is when they are young. Taught how to react in an emergency they can perhaps share their knowlege with others in a crisis.

Youngsters at the bus patrol seminar this week obviously were enjoying the instruction. Their question reflected real interest in the how-to of first aid.

Three provincial police officers participated in the seminar and this seemed an excellent opportunity for public relations. Pupils did not see the policeman just as someone who issues tickets. Instead, he came across as a friendly and experienced person eager to share valuable experience.

Similarly, the firemen explaining the use of station equipment were friendly and gave with practical suggestions.

As police and firefighters join in educating students in safety it seems a valuable addition to the school curriculum.

Trenton Bureau

Transit System Badly Needed

By AL ZABAS

TRENTON — An increasingly apparent public demand for bus service in Trenton may be answered in the not-too-distant future if town council continues its interest in a door-to-door dial-a-bus system.

This week, councillors fired some cost-conscious questions at Oakville transportation engineers in an effort to sound out such a service's role in Trenton.

It's the first step. Let's hope that council continues on the same track and asks Queens Park to subsidize a study to determine the feasibility of installing mini-buses here.

City driving is not one of our greatest pleasures. Other drivers, orange traffic lights, police on the watch for excessive speed, children chasing balls on roads, often are annoying.

Granted, a dial-a-bus system may not give one the privacy of one's own vehicle. It does, however, offer convenience, comparatively fast and cheap transportation, and, in many cities, other than that appointment one would have missed anyway.

Basically, the service operates in the following fashion. Fawn Doe, a woman with a limp living in the north end of Trenton, finds it physically difficult to come downtown to shop. She needs a car and she does not have a car available to her.

Mr. Doe, our imaginary John Doe's wife, picks up the telephone and dials a central dispatch office of the dial-a-bus service. She allows a half-hour, depending on the time of day, for the bus to, arrive at her doorstep.

The bus arrives either 14-1 or 23-passenger vehicle, picks her up, and perhaps several others on a route outlined by the central dispatcher. Whether the bus is full or not, the driver proceeds downtown to a central depot from where Mrs. Doe can easily, and without too much fatigue, do her shopping.

At the same time, the bus fits arrives at her friend's Doe's neighbor, five-year-old Johnny. The lad wants to drop in on his friend's house, two streets over.

Doe and his mother hasn't worried about her son walking on dangerous streets. Hence, the name, door-to-door service.

Granted, the example is over-simplified, but it illustrates the convenience of the service for those now shut indoors. It is not as aggravating as driving for those who do drive and it is not as expensive (perhaps 25-50 cents a trip) as taxi fare.

Besides individual benefits, the quality of town life, to use an overworked phrase, would be improved.

ewer cars would be needed downtown, thereby lessening the danger to pedestrians. Rush-hour frustration would ease — both on the road and in the stores, where clerks now are badgered by a rodden deranding flock of people just ending a working day.

Those benefits, and there are others, should warrant a few Trentonians to put a bum in a councillor's ear.

It takes hours of Bell Canada repairmen's time to locate cable breaks caused by sharpshooters taking potshots at long distance cables. George Thompson, area Bell manager says service has been interrupted 14 times in recent months. Belleville area is on busy Toronto-Montreal link. Repairmen sometimes have to use all-terrain vehicles to reach remote locations.

On the Warpath

Whichever side may be right in the current Tyendinaga Mohawk dispute about a new industry located in the reserve, both factions would do well not to emulate the mood of 200 of their brothers and sisters on Parliament Hill Monday.

Prime Minister Trudeau and Indian Affairs Minister Judd Buchanan said following the near-riot that the incident had hurt the very cause the Indians had trekked to the national capital to support.

To seek more social justice by breaking society's laws is no way to go about seeking solutions.

Monday's Parliament Hill mob lost a lot of public sympathy and support for their grievances — as justified and real as their plight may be.

And, just as Ottawa-bound Indian militants offended the public by making bomb threats, vague Tyendinaga talk about possible violence can only further polarize the parties involved.

Those who dispute the establishment of a "corporate structure" on reserve land are right on insisting that federal authorities immediately concern themselves with the issue.

But any threat — implied or open — can only open wounds that will be a long time in the healing.

Real Headache

People form associations for just about everything these days, but did you know there was even one for headache sufferers?

As prominent a person as Toronto MPP Margaret Campbell is on the board of The Migraine Foundation, a group whose goal is "... coordination and funding of the necessary research projects that should shed some light upon the treatment and the underlying factor that contributes to the condition known as "migraine" — a condition that affects upwards of 20 per cent of Canada's population."

Between now and the time he hands down his first budget of the 30th Parliament, finance minister John Turner would make an excellent honorary president.

Scouts Need Help

It seems that district Boy Scout organizers are having a tougher time these days finding adults willing to do the occasional good deed.

District Scouting executive Bette Fort fears some existing troops may have to fold unless more leaders come forward.

It is ironic that many of the same people who are so fast to criticize are the last to volunteer their services in such activities as minor sports, YMCA programs, and scouting.

Remedial Cocktail

Belleville General Hospital is practising what it preaches — good health.

First there was the discouraging of smoking on the premises and in patients' rooms in particular.

Now hospital director Philip Rickard has announced a program to help employees who may have drinking problems.

The department heads will monitor the usual distress signs of the problem drinker: morale changes, habitual lateness, and other poor work habits.

If a problem is evident, the hospital employee health service will conduct a personal interview with the worker and direct him to the proper treatment.

Staff at BGH have continued to demonstrate vital personal concern on questions of health. There have been seminars on various habit-forming personal problems, and even yoga and keep-fit programs.

Some of this city's most active tennis enthusiasts, to cite one instance, are members of the medical profession.

Director Rickard hopes the hospital example will be followed by other city employers.

With thousands of man-hours lost due to drinking problems, economists agree that those Monday-morning absentees plague productivity, and may be a major contributing factor to the inflation we all complain about.

'HENRY...I'VE JUST SOLVED OUR OIL PROBLEM'

Provincial Governments being Forced Into Greater Control over Private Sector

By DON O'HEARN
Queen's Park Bureau
Thomson News Services

TORONTO — Like it or not Canadian government, it appears, are inexorably being forced into more control of the private sector.

The federal speech from the Throne repeated a former pledge that "the government will deal with unjustified price increases."

In Nova Scotia the government has imposed price control on gasoline and food oil.

And here in Ontario acting minister of housing Donald Irvine has publicly indicated rent controls are being seriously considered if not actually imminent.

The Nova Scotia action was the first occasion in Canada, except in war-time, when government has controlled retail prices in a competitive area.

In Ontario where prices of natural gas, but this is a monopoly situation where one distributor has exclusive rights for an area under a government franchise).

There already is strong pressure from the opposition, particularly the NDP for our province to follow the N.S. lead.

But Energy Minister Darcy McKeough has said only that the Atlantic province's action was "interesting" and is being studied.

But the pressure will be maintained in fact government will be accelerated throughout this winter and one can see the government bowing to it, if only for political considerations.

The price control exercises of life have a trong emotional impact.

The average citizen really can't be expected to personally and knowledgeably weigh the practical and philosophical considerations, such as the need to maintain incentives and the repugnance of authoritarianism.

His immediate and overwhelming consideration are his pocket-book and the apparently large profits of corporations.

On such a foundation a strong public demand can be built up. One so strong that government can't resist it.

And we have indications that this is the situation that is developing here in Ontario and throughout Canada.

The distressing characteristic of this development is that it is a position into which we are drifting rather than one into which we are moving deliberately after broad deliberation and analysis.

It is not as if government decided that a broad policy of price control were essential economically and socially.

Any such set policy would recognize that we were making an emergency, and temporary, departure from our root beliefs through necessity.

But when we drift into a situation of control there is no such acknowledgement. We first drift into one field, and then, having broken with principles in it, tend to move into others.

More and more control becomes a matter of accepted habit. And the obvious outcome is that one day we awaken and find we are living in a controlled society; which we really don't want.

Cosmetics Losing Glamor Of Sixties' Stock Boom

By VINCENT EGAN
Business and Consumer Affairs Analyst
Thomson News Services

One of the most glamorous groups on the stock exchanges during the heady 1960's' stock boom was cosmetics.

Today, most of the sparkle has gone from the group, and the shares are selling at prices fractions of the peaks they reached a few years ago when both the future of the industry was unbounded.

So whatever the stock market may be saying about it, the cosmetic industry remains a unique blend of savvy, sales, marketing and psychology.

The psychological effect—and the packaging—may often be the only significant difference between one cosmetic priced at $25 and another at $5.50.

Still, the natural human desire to resist the aging process is so widespread the consumers go on buying high-priced and philosophical considerations, such as the need to maintain incentives and the re-wrinkling.

Cosmetic marketing tends to depend upon such things as pseudo-medical terms, like "biological oxidation" of the skin.

So-called experts, under a variety of professional capacities, offer "consultations" at substantial fees, for "making" their services, be sure to know in advance how much is the "top" they can add and for the cosmetics you may be expected or required to buy as part of the consultation.

"The skin is nourished by normal food consumption and not by externally applied creams, lotions or other substances," says the federal department of consumer and corporate affairs.

The Food and Drugs Act requires that cosmetics sold in Canada be free of injurious substances, be produced under rational practices, and be packed in safe, non-deceptive containers.

Unfortunately, it does not require cosmetic packages to list the ingredients of the product—a requirement that the cosmetic industry considers would be tantamount to giving away trade secrets.

That rather shaky argument has been accepted by the consumer and corporate affairs department. As a compromise, it has been left to cosmetic manufacturers to list ingredients with the department, which makes the information available to consumers who ask for it.

Naturally, not every allergy victim takes the trouble to write to Ottawa before buying a cosmetic product. As a result, there is produced a number of cases of cosmetic-induced skin eruptions among unwary consumers.

Those who suspect that they may be sensitive to certain ingredients in cosmetics (aluminum compounds, for example) might as a common source of trouble) ought to consult the consumer affairs department's legist to determine the source of allergy.

Then they should press the government (Andre Ouellet is the new minister of consumer and corporate affairs) to make it mandatory for cosmetic manufacturers to list the ingredients on the label.

Windsor Gives Rides To Workers on Welfare

Kitchener - Waterloo Record

In Windsor (population 198,000), city council has taken action to do something about the anomaly of farmers in the area being unable to get help while city residents are living on welfare payments. The city is providing a daily bus to take workers to farms in the area. It has cut off welfare to 160 people who have declined to take work on farms.

City officials say they did not go hastily into this—pruning of welfare rolls. Before being cut off, each of the 160 was personally interviewed and assessed. To find out whether he or she was fit and able to work in the fields.

After this screening of the welfare lists, 93 who rejected farm work were cut off permanently and another 67 temporarily suspended. Any of those cut off has the right to appeal, but so far not one has chosen to do so.

It would be wrong to assume that the 160 are typical of welfare recipients in Ontario cities.

Any experienced and conscientious social worker will tell you that most people who are getting municipal welfare aid genuinely need and deserve it.

Young mothers who are trying to carry on as single parents, or elderly people with inadequate pensions, or working fathers with small incomes and big families, are two main categories.

The freeloader who would rather be idle than dirty his hands with outdoor work is in the minority among welfare recipients, but there is no reason for the taxpayer to be allowed to get away with it. It is ridiculous to have able-bodied lidlers hanging about on street corners, with taxpayers underwriting their meal tickets, while farmers at harvest time are desperate for extra hands

The Windsor plan seems a moderate and reasonable way to proceed in any city that has real farming areas adjacent to it.

Dumping Detectives Get Congratulations

Editor,
The Intelligencer

Congratulations to Messrs Carscallen Hubbs and Kenneth Peoples. Their joint persistence in the matter of illegal dumping of rubbish all over the city has finally paid off.

After telling both men, during visits to council under deputations that "everything possible was being done", Her Worship, Mayor Robin Jeffrey has finally admitted that all along the city had a by-law dealing with this very matter.

We don't need "spies" out either to report offenders. We have a bylaw enforcement officer, and if one is not enough, hire another.

There has been too much of this indifference to the complaints of citizens by this particular council.

As the date for the next municipal election draws nearer we can expect to see a growing interest in the concerns of the citizens. Make the most of it because after the election, the interest will dwindle for another two years.

Voluntary Approach
Ford to Explain Pardon On TV with Subcommittee

By BRUCE LEVETT

WASHINGTON (CP) — The reasoning behind his pardon for former president Richard Nixon is expected to be laid out by President Ford when he appears before a House of Representatives subcommittee Oct. 19 on live television.

And already there is speculation that Ford's action may touch off demands for his direct testimony on a host of other issues.

It is speculation that is being shot down by White House spokesmen, who say that because Ford has volunteered to go before the House Judiciary subcommittee—and is not responding to a request for his presence—no dangerous precedent is being set.

"He's a great believer in the direct approach," press secretary Ron Nessen said.

"He feels he is the one who has the best information surrounding his pardon power. He feels he has nothing to hide and wants to tell the facts."

The subcommittee did not call on the president to appear—but it did ask for detailed information about the pardoning of Nixon, one of the most controversial acts of the Ford administration so far.

Now, some congressmen and even some White House aides are quoted as saying that the Ford action in this case, no matter how understandable and forthcoming, might lead to direct requests for his presence on other issues. At the very least, they say, it might make a refusal to appear in the future somewhat embarrassing.

They point out that Nessen's description of Ford as the person having the best information" in the pardon case, also fits many other situations.

However, Ford is expected to claim—in the event that such issues requests do arise—that his executive powers have not been eroded by this voluntary offer to appear.

In the meantime, the president's move has sent the constitutional scholars to their reference works.

History records only two presidents ever testifying before a congressional committee while in office.

George Washington appeared before the Senate early in his administration to seek advice concerning a treaty with British. In that case, his appearance was not exactly hailed by a senate jealous of its treaty-making powers.

Abraham Lincoln was the only other serving president to appear and he testified before the House judiciary committee several times, generally with regard to presential assumption of widened war powers.

The story that Lincoln appeared to deny that his wife was a Southern sympathizer or spy generally is attributed to legend.

Since Lincoln, a succession of presidents have done their best to avoid appearing before congressional committees, citing such doctrine as executive privileges and separation of powers.

Empire's Legacy Of Immigrants May Hurt Britain

By JOHN D. HARBRON
Foreign Affairs Analyst
Thomson News Services

LONDON — The last legacy of the British Empire can turn out to be a very nasty one, the future of the many African, Asian and Caribbean immigrants to Britain from former colonial places who are not fitting well into British society.

London as well as most major British industrial and administrative centres have always been polyglot racially speaking, but in a very different day of organic growth of industry, the professions and business.

Great British politicians like Disraeli, or the arms and shipping magnate of the Edwardian years to cite two types only, were a Jewish Lithuanian Corporate and East European extractions.

The British Jewish community from the imperialist prime minister Benjamin Disraeli who made Mr. British queen an Indian empress, to socialist cabinet ministers of our own who would and did help to unwind the Disraeli-Victorian British Empire, were only two of Britain's many prominent Jews.

That curious breed of mystical painters and authors called the "Pre-Raphaelites" best remembered for the portrayal by one of them, Holman Hunt, as a shepherd with a lamp knocking at the door (soul) of mankind's earthly home, reminds us of an Italianate influence in Britain.

At present, they largely fill the ranks of the law or barristers by the lowest of then-born low English-speaking Jews started, and the windy station platforms around Britain's big cities are filled with porters born in homes when corporate pay packets permit and where their family incomes now taxed out of existence, once did so.

They have held along with their diverse and difficult languages and cultures, their United Kingdom citizenship and in many of the British, absolutely British jobs.

When Asians move into a community once populated entirely by British people, the real estate values tumble in reverse ratio to the increase in widely-different ways of living and the appearance of very strange people to the odors of curry-cooked food.

Enoch Powell, the learned and racist right-wing Tory has moved into the shouting-ring of the British public as a member of Parliament in a part of the United Kingdom where people hate each other enough to kill, bomb and murder, but may yet come in British proper.

He probably would have won overwhelmingly by continuing where he was, warning about the rise of a racial tide which will not be absorbed and which he charges should be contained or even reduced.

The blunt fact is that thousands of Englishmen, angry at the arrival of Commonwealth citizens from former colonial regions, will not be assuaged, as the gulf between the two of them stays as wide as ever.

Nor are they content to see them fill the most menial or lowest paying jobs in Britain, given a growing fear that there are enough of them to take matters in their own hands some day if the poet's otherwise "green and pleasant land."

'Racial strife, even civil war in Britain, is a sure time bomb of the future ticking away inevitably. It threatens to blow up with it the historic tolerance of the British which their presence is now whittling away.

Leaders of Two Great Churches Differ in Outlook on Future

By GRAHAM HEATHCOTE

LONDON (AP) — The spiritual leaders of two great Christian churches differ sharply on their outlook over the future of their faith and their institutions.

Pope Paul expressed anxiety at difficulties facing the Roman Catholic Church.

The Archbishop of Canterbury, Most Rev. Dr. Michael Ramsey, spiritual leader of the Church of England, said there is a spiritual hunger in the Western world, and he urged Christians to feed it.

The Pope canvassed his views in an hour-long weekly audience of pilgrims who gathered last Wednesday at his summer palace in Castel Gandolfo on a hill.

Dr. Ramsey's view came to a book published last Thursday to mark the approaching end of his 12-year primacy. He retires in November.

Pope Paul will be 77 this month and has been pontiff for 11 years. Dr. Ramsey will be 71 in November.

Pope Paul, often has shown concern at declining church attendance, the decreasing number of priests, and issues of sexual morality more controversial to interest around the world.

Pope Paul said: "We see who looks at things superficially, it seems the Church is failed to die, to be replaced by a more experimental, rational and scientific conception of the world without dogmas, without hierarchies, without God, to the possible enjoyment of life.

"Everything is in upheaval, the pontiff added. Everything is in a phase of mutation. For this reason the Church is in a phase of crisis.

"I dare say it is not and clear. Faith is the prime necessity for overcoming today's difficulties."

Dr. Ramsey was much more optimistic. He is the 11th archbishop of Canterbury. While Rome commands the spiritual allegiance of 600 million people around the world, Canterbury estimates its world - wide strength at 40 million.

Dr. Ramsey's book, Canterbury Pilgrim, is a personal view what he considers the most important speeches and articles of his primacy. In a preface, and in an introduction, he acknowledges the problems reflected to by Pope Paul.

"There has been the increase of violence, the polarizing of racial conflict, the confusion of morals, and the sharpened awareness of the contrast between the affluent and the hungry peoples," Dr. Ramsey writes.

"In Christendom there has been the theological malaise associated with the phrase 'Death of God', the decline of church allegiance, the revivals of a charismatic kind, the involvement with the problems of revolution, and the growing feeling in the West for prayer and contemplation as essential to the life of man."

It seems that Archbishop is returning to the centre of the scene of theological interest and Pope Paul's Church is also stirring many people beyond as well as within the churches."

Dr. Ramsey says his main impressions of the 1960s and early 1970s — "a crisis of faith, a renewal of religion, and a big shift in the map of Christendom in the world.

"The spotlight about God and Christianity remains, morals are even more chaotic, and the world is even more cruel. Nor is the dislike of 'institutions' any less. But among the faithful there is a lively faith, worship has a greater 'richness of style' and the loss of nerve seems to belong to yesterday.

"The kind of allegiance which a few years ago might have existed me to address them about race or social action nowadays often ask to be allowed about prayer . . . and I have noticed that the stream of desire for 'contemplation' and the stream of concern for social justice flow together.

"The revival of religion in the West is a wide and very varied phenomenon. Amid the pressures and strains of life there is the longing of the self to realize itself in freedom from the dominance of time and circumstance."

Dr. Ramsey suggests that the "old cults and some drugs" which offer a promise of this freedom are a short cuts. In fact freedom "the self finds the vigorous peace of moral energy".

Our Destiny Depends Upon Fate of Farmers

By Dr. Gordon C. Smyth

"Solomon in all his glory", as Jesus later spoke of him, brought Hebrew power to its all-time high. He ascended the throne in 976 BC. He ruled 40 years.

The realm that he inherited was poor and backward. His people, scarcely out of the desert days, lacked the skills and industries that flourished beyond the borders. He was to catch up with others, and to bring needed peace and prosperity.

Solomon performed a diplomatic miracle when his mas sa ged a non-aggression treaty with Egypt. He mastered his eyes north, where Phoenicia's City of Tyre ruled one of the world's most advanced nations.

Hiram and David had been friends. Failing back on this tie with the latter, Solomon approached Hiram with the idea of a unique and massive trade pact. In exchange for wheat and olive oil, Phoenicia poured into Israel its more important technical know-how into Israel.

Thus Solomon was encouraged to pursue a great defence and construction program. Archaeologists have brought to light impressive evidence of his progress. No wonder the Queen of Sheba was amazed by what she saw on a state visit!

As she reads his story, however, in the First Book of the Kings, one cannot avoid the word 1 i 1 0 n that Solomon's magnificence and expenditure rested on an unsound basis. The disregard of clan traditions, the heavy taxation for governmental buildings projects, and the indifference to the fate of agriculture — these are the kind of things that have always brought misery wherever they have been put into practice. Solomon took the steps that meant disaster for his son and kingdom.

What did Jesus say? "Consider the lilies of the field, how they grow; they neither toil nor spin; yet I tell you, even Solomon in all his glory was not arrayed like one of these" (Matthew 6:28-29). The soil is sacred. The fate of the land, source of beauty and energy, of the very means of life itself, determines the destiny of a people.

The consumer pays more for food, but the farmer gets less. You are aware of the farmer, but what of the land? There are no easy solutions. However, solutions will develop, if you start asking basic, hard questions.

Since federal and provincial governments have repeatedly urged farmers to stay on the land in all crucial areas, now with you. Indeed, I now ask the Member of Parliament and Member of the Legislative Assembly wherever this column appears, to respond by letter to the press. I ask him (or her) with due respect to my views as to the plight of the consumer, and to the farmer's despairing despair in Central as well as Eastern Ontario?

Driftwood Is Carved By Priest

EDMONTON (CP) — Rev. Eugene Dupuis's hobby of driftwood finishing what nature began.

The Ukrainian Catholic priest has been sculpting in driftwood for about two years, using material he found on river banks between Banff, Alta., and Radium, B.C., and lakeshores and along Pacific Ocean beaches.

The 64-year-old priest became involved in driftwood sculpture after reading an article about a 78-year-old man who made objects from the roots of trees.

Father Eugene selects his driftwood according to the potential he sees in each piece.

He first washes, dries and trims the wood, already having in mind the shape it will take. Then he does the carving, rubs the wood with an oil and varnishes it for shine and preservation.

Most of the work is done in his garage.

The finished pieces may be graceful female forms in abstract style, a bird in flight, an old woman and child standing on a cliff, an animal or heaven's head glancing near their nest in the saddle of a tree.

It is not an expensive hobby. Tools include an awl and an electric drill with various attachments for carving, drilling and polishing. The basic cost would be about $50.

A sculptor may try using only manual tools rather than electric ones, but Father Eugene said driftwood is often hard and difficult to carve by hand.

Appeal Ruling

TORONTO (CP) — The Metropolitan Toronto Police Commission decided Thursday to appeal a divisional court ruling that two policemen must be in each cruiser from 8 p.m. to 8 a.m.

Metro Chairman Paul Godfrey, a member of the commission, said the appeal is being made to the Ontario Court of Appeal because Harold Lawson, Metro police chief, says double staffing will be too costly.

Mr. Godfrey said the chief told the commission he would have to take cruisers off the road for enough staff to meet the requirement.

Color Tour:

Discover Autumn on The Country Roads

By ISABEL BUGGAN

Fall fronts have nipped the forests of Hastings county into a glory of red and gold. This weekend the maples are at the peak of their beauty, and deserve to be seen.

Here's a 65-mile trip you can take north of Belleville, that takes you through varied scenery. One note of caution — many of the most delightful back roads are extremely narrow and gravel-covered, and can only be travelled slowly. But poking along at 20 or 30 miles an hour, having time to spot a bluejay or point out a cricket's hermit, is what this tour is all about.

Start off from Belleville by taking Highway 62 north out of the city, and continue to travel north past Foxboro, where the bright colors begin to show. Drive as far as Ivanhoe (17 miles from Belleville) going as you go how the leaf is rising, hillside after hillside covered by a rash of autumn crowned with bronze maples and dark green pines.

At Ivanhoe, make a stop at the cheese factory for cheddar, curds and other dairy products. The shop is open all week, including Sunday.

Across the road George and Dorothy Reeves run a gas station and general store where you can treat the family to hand-dipped ice cream cones.

Make a right turn off the highway at the Reeves' store, onto Hungerford Concession VII, a slightly bumpy gravel road.

Exactly two miles from the corner where you turned, there's a narrow dirt road going off to the left, edged by stone fences. It's an extraordinarily pretty passage through a wealth of golden trees forming a canopy overhead.

A little less than two miles long, it brings you out to the paved Crookston road. Turn right, and follow this route to Tweed, a little over seven miles away.

If there are any rock hounds in the car, they may want to stop at a rock shop at the edge of the village on the left side of the road.

This "side entrance" to Tweed takes you across the railroad tracks to Highway 37, at which point you can decide whether to spend some time in the village or turn right and drive south towards home.

About four and a half miles south of Tweed, turn right on Hungerford Concession VII (there's a little red brick building at the corner). Drive exactly one mile along this gravel road to the first intersection you come to, and turn left.

Taking to look for along this gravel road are the Moira River Conservation Authority pinery, and a barren field covered with rocks and boulders an indication of what the land was like before pioneers cleared the fields and made the stone walls that as charm us today.

This lovely road takes you right into Thomasburg. Stop here to stretch your legs, and have a sip of the pure, cold spring water that flows, years in and year out, from a spout marked by a sign on the right hand side of the street.

Drive through the village and turn east onto Highway 37 again, and drive one miles to the sign for Hastings Road VIII which takes you to the hamlet of Moira, about three miles away.

Stay on this road. A mile past Moira, take the gravel road that turns off to the left. Drive for nearly two miles till you come to a T-junction where you should turn right.

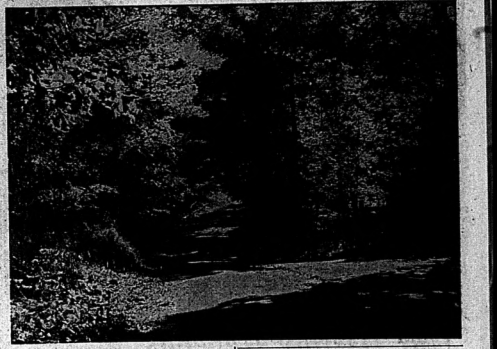
Exactly one mile later, there's a treat in store, a narrow dirt road that goes off to the left. As soon as you turn, you'll come upon a remarkable view over the valley.

This little road is also lined with maple branches that arch above you. On one side you'll see an old abandoned farm, with an orchard long neglected but still bearing apples.

It's just a mile long, and a mile back. Since it doesn't lead to a good road for travelling you must return the way you came, and travel along till you arrive at an intersection where you turn left again, and drive for three miles to the next T-junction.

Turn right at this point onto Tharrow Township Road 8. After one mile you arrive at your last T-junction where you turn left and travel into Foxboro, from where you can make your way home through the village or by Highway 62 again.

Driving slowly and making occasional stops to take pictures or gather leaves, the trip will take two hours or more.



Autumn Beauty

This shade-dappled back road through a maple woods is just one of the beautiful autumn scenes you'll see when you follow the tour directions here

Quiet Woman

Wilma Summers, Recreation Director

It's one of those ironies of life that Wilma Summers is largely has time for the well-loved craft work that brought her to her job as assistant director of the city's recreation department.

Mrs. Summers has held her position since 1966 when she joined the recreation department after long association as a night school teacher.

"I'd always enjoyed working with my hands," she says. "And while I was raising my family I taught night school classes in things like copper enameling, jewelry making, mosaic tile and millinery."

Mrs. Summers adds that she was teaching so much, she was "always around the department. First they asked me to help out a little, then work part time. Before I knew it I was working full time."

Although she drifted into her job, she didn't take it casually once appointed.

For seven years - up until last year - she attended classes at Centennial College in Scarborough every week until she graduated from its recreation leadership course.

Now she "looks after" Pinnacle Playhouse, the Recreation Centre, the Quinte Skating and Tennis Club and Ben Bleeker Auditorium. Programs, bookings and the buildings themselves are her responsibility.

While she admits to "loving all of it", Mrs. Summers' "pet" project is the senior citizens' group. Through the years, she's channelled them from simply card-playing to oil painting classes and yoga and square dancing and carpet bowling.

Her love of organization and administration - she was recently the first woman president of the Recreation Director's Association of Eastern Ontario - helps when she becomes involved in planning activities for municipal conferences held in the city like the recent police chiefs' conference held here.

After putting together a clockwork timetable of activities for the wives of the chiefs, she shepherded them through several days of sightseeing and shoal-touring and shopping.

"I love taking all the loose ends and putting them together and making things work," Mrs. Summers says.

Puppet Time

Yesterday was a busy day at the Corby Children's Library, when 34 mothers brought their children to register for the first morning of the Pre-School Club that held every Friday for the next eight weeks. While Jean Williams (above) entertains the little children with puppets and stories, the women meet in the gallery for coffee and a series of films, book talks and discussions.

MARMORA CHURCH SUPPER

An old-fashioned Shanty supper was held at St. Andrew's United Church, Marmora on Saturday evening as part of the church's centennial celebration.

A menu of roast pork, beef stew, baked beans, topped off with ginger bread, johnny cake or applesauce was prepared by the ladies of the UCW.

Guests were entertained by a musical group composed of Dorothy Glover, John Petters, Jack Grants, Jack Golden and Manley Lavender. The group played while a square of dancers promenaded and dipped and dived to the direction of caller Carl McMillen.

The tables were decorated with candles, coal oil lamps and stone jugs filled with dried wild flowers and autumn leaves. The decoration complemented the centennial costumes worn by the ladies.

In another corner Theresa Belyea demonstrated how to prepare apples for drying. Also on display was an exhibit of articles that would have been found around any lumbering shanty 100 years ago.

REBEKAHS

Isobel Martin of Rfd. Tweed, a member with 40 years of service in Crescent Rebekah Lodge, Thomasburg, was conferred with the Degree of Chivalry, on September 26, at New Toronto Secondary School, Toronto.

Approximately 20 members of Crescent Lodge attended.

Cameras buffs know those new slim finish photographs can't be finished in a hurry. If you haven't already been warned, your photographic shop, bowed why: the non-glossy finish is slightly "sticky" until dried, and can easily stick to the glass with time. To protect your photographs, all you need to do is buy a sheet of acetate for a few cents from a photo shop. An 8x10 sheet is 35 cents for example.

Not too long ago we learned that Miracle Food Mart ordered their own Spy-Brand supply of canning. Sets in actuality, it's the home food processing kit of the new magazine, Bob McGall was quick to point out in conversation. As it turned out, he was more than right. Spy-brand canning kits went under the hammer in the early store from Toronto to Montreal which still had canning jars late in the season. One cashier told me that frustrating businessmen frequently stopped in to pick up jars to take to their home city where supplies did long ago run out.

If you're thinking about buying a new home, it might pay to wait a few months: the Consumers' Association of Canada has been in negotiation with with federal government and representatives of the building industry for several months and says that a warranty protecting all purchasers of new homes should be a reality by January, 1975.

A federal home warranty scheme would, the association says, require all builders in Canada and would allow arbitration procedures which would allow quick inspection and action for consumers without time-consuming and expensive court actions.

Dollars and Sense, a 32-page booklet, has been published by Mira Publishing, Belleville, under the auspices of the Quinte District Labour Council.

The booklet, which sells for $1.50 explains economics clearly, everything from credit and contracts to automobile insurance and OHIP. Originally compiled under a Local Initiatives grant in conjunction with the Citizens Bureau, Dollars and Sense has been expanded and updated.

Experienced insurance buyers, home owners, car-owner renters and grocery shoppers may be aware of most of the information the book contains. On the other hand, it may enlighten even the most experienced consumer.

It's the kind of book that would be especially useful to the novice: a student with his first job will learn his rights; a newly married couple about to rent an apartment or buy a home will find good advice; a girl buying her first car will learn about insurance and liability.

Michelle Dionne

Bubbling with Enthusiasm

CORNWALL, Ont. (CP) — It's in words of cliché: bloom is bubbling with enthusiasm about going to university in Belgium—the training might help her become Canada's first female brewmaster.

The 21-year-old is enrolled in the brewing course at the University of Louvain and is the first Canadian woman to be accepted for the course.

A laboratory science graduate from the local campus of St. Lawrence College, Miss Dionne expects to graduate from the brewing course next May.

The Louvain course, as well as covering brewing, fermenting and malting, delves into such things as microbiology, field mechanics, economics and electricity.

Miss Dionne said she is not too concerned about the difficulty of the course, except perhaps the electricity section, because some of the subjects were covered at St. Lawrence College.

Fluently bilingual, she said she expects to have no language problem at the French-speaking university.

The Louvain campus, 25 miles from Brussels, is a small town in itself, complete with railway stations and restaurants and has about 5,000 students and staff.

Miss Dionne said she will look for a job in the brewing industry—probably in Montreal—when she returns.

She aimed wray from the term "brewmistress" as being facetious, for the time being anyway.

"I suppose it is a difficult career for any student to consider," she said with a grin.

Jack Butt of St. Lawrence's Brockville campus, saw Miss Dionne's admission to Louvain as significant.

"Normally, to qualify for this advanced brewing course, a student should have completed a degree program in chemistry or agricultural science at a university," he said.

"However, the Louvain university senate reviewed the curriculum and objectives of the St. Lawrence College three-year lab science program and judged that it provided sufficient prerequisites to permit entrance."

Dief Keeps Secretary 'Very Busy'

VICTORIA (CP) — Working for former prime minister John Diefenbaker, at 79 Canada's grand old man of politics, is like "going to a different movie every day."

And trying to follow The Chief in an election campaign as his personal secretary is like trying to follow "an India rubber ball."

That descriptive assessment of life with Mr. Diefenbaker was made by Betty Eligh, his secretary since 1958. She is on a rare, brief present vacation here, seeing her publisher-brother Gray Campbell.

But the job is also exhausting because she works at fever pitch, especially during an election campaign and the staff has to keep up as best they can.

"During the election he went seven days a week. He goes to bed late at night absolutely exhausted, but then he gets up the next day and he is bounced right back. He's like an India rubber ball."

Mrs. Eligh, a lithe fair-haired woman who's "over 30 and feels like 35" said she's thought of retiring and moving here to be with her mother. "But I can't give this up and I don't want to leave Mr. Diefenbaker."

"It's exciting and great fun to work with someone like him. He has a tremendous sense of fun and a twinkle all the time. Mr. Diefenbaker, God love him, is not the easiest person to be with."

A widow whose last boss was federal Senator Eugene Forsey, Mrs. Eligh philosophical about the rigors of working for politicians.

If you work or live with a quiet person you have to have a quiet life and it doesn't take anything out of you. But if you do the opposite with someone who's exciting and always doing something best. And don't leave unattended for long periods of time.

To add a delicious flavor, sprinkle generously with praise and appreciation.

The poorest specimen may be improved if you follow these instructions and will keep for an unlimited number of years in any climate.—Tested by Yours Truly

Dear Truly: I'd like to add one small suggestion: Frequent exposure to cold temperatures has been known to damage this dish permanently. Keep it small, steady flame going at all times.

Dear Ann Landers: The other day I was in my parents' bedroom and noticed a column of yours, under the glass top of my mother's nightstand. It was about a father who was trying to be a pal to his son. The kid was using drugs and the father didn't know what to do about it. You advised him to tell the kid to "shape up or ship out." That's exactly what my parents told my brother to do.

Well, he shipped out, said he wanted to make it like my father did, so his ex-wife is renting an apartment with a friend and working to put through college. My parents are very proud of him.

I learned a valuable lesson from watching my brother. I want nothing to do with drugs. It makes me sick to see some of my friends going down the drain because they got hooked.

So I'm glad my folks wrote to you and took your advice. I thought it was about time I said thankful 17

Dear 17: It was good of you to let me know how well things turned out at your house. Now I'll say thanks.

Dear Ann Landers: I want to thank the woman who advised suicidal people to give some thought to how they love. Her letter killed an idea that has been in my mind for quite a while.

The overwhelming desire to escape the pain of living can be most appealing to one who suffers a lot. I know, because I've considered suicide many times. But I was always stopped by a feeling that I owed it to shouldn't—no real reason, but something told me, "Don't do it." That woman's letter gave me the reason.

Guilt Won't Stop Suicide

Dear Ann Landers: I just received a cookbook from our Temple Sisterhood. It had many recipes from the best cooks in town. My favorite recipe is enclosed and I hope you will print it. It is called How to Preserve a Husband.

First, use care in selection.

Get one that is not too young but tender and healthy. If you choose one recklessly, it may not keep.

Don't put in hot water. This makes them turn sour.

Sweeten with smiles and spice with patience. All varieties will respond.

To insure a wonderful consistency, stir gently—never beat.

Do not try to keep it in a pickle jar. Let it live in your home.

Serve it with peace and contentment and you will find it delicious.

Dear Ann Landers: I am a college student (girl, age 19). For the past 10 months I've been in a deep depression. I'm climbing out of it now and feel confident I'll make it. There'll be times I'll get nervous when I'll slip, but now I know what I must never let go.

Thank you Ann, for printing that letter. It was a lifesaver—Rescue

Dear Friend: You don't say you've been getting professional help. If you haven't, please consider it. Periodic bouts with deep depression is tough to handle alone. Good luck, honey.

Successful Living

Mental Shake Up Time

Barber shops have been known for a long time as places for sociability I have not been hearing about one barber who himself radiates a personality which draws customers and keep them coming. He is also a philosopher.

The surprising thing about it is, this man, a Frenchman, is deaf. Yet he communicates, serves, writes and thinks in both French and English.

Ron Armstrong, Director of the Canadian hearing Society, has sent me this extract from one of his letters.

"What we need is a Survival Quotient (S.Q.) and not a Intelligence Quotient (I.Q.). One who is highly literate is not necessarily a wise person or possessed for great intellect. There are lots of people who have the top degree of education but have a closed mind; their creed is Greed.

"He who conquers himself is greater than he who conquers a city. Experience is the sauce we give our mistakes. Wisdom is knowing that you're not always wise. We can all be free if we understand the principle of our inner selves.

"So what a man has learned he has to put in action and to condition himself as a positive thinking man. Besides making you healthier it will make you more understanding of yourself and the needs of others. Man is his own worst enemy. People defeat themselves by unknowingly misdirecting their energies."

Did you notice what stood out for me— "Wisdom is knowing that you are not always wise"?

We might put it in another way and say that until we have humility recognizing our whole lifetime as a quest for some oldest, deep thinking.

There's a bonus, too. He not with his barbering; he also passes out "thought-provoking paragraphs like this one:

"The body of any organization has four kinds of brains. There are the wishbones who spend all their time wishing someone else would do all the work. There are jawbones who do all the talking but nothing else. There are the knuckleboxes who destroy everything that everybody else tries to do.

Finally there are the backbones who get under the load and do all the work."

He lives in St. Charles, Ontario. Anybody want a haircut with some philosophy and some humor thrown in?

Doris can help you with that parting decision. Write to her in care of this newspaper enclosing a stamped, self-addressed envelope for private reply!

Dear Doris: May I compliment you on your concise, helpful and exceptionally tolerant opinions. I always read your column because I enjoy your point of view. It appears to me that the few people who have taken exception to a statement have not been able to see beyond their particular bias or prejudice.

Trying to live with four generations is not easy — but I'm still trying to be flexible.

Eighty-Old.

Dear Eighty Odd: Wise indeed is the person who can distinguish between a tolerant point of view and a particular prejudice. To be at the top and of four generations in one home, and to do it successfully, is not easy. Takes plenty of thinking, broadmindedness and selfconfidence — all of which call for the flexibility which you recognize as essential.

Complain To Hydro

TORONTO (CP) — An association of large Ontario Hydro industrial customers has complained to Energy Minister Darcy McKeough about the 15.5-per-cent average rate increase due next month.

The Association of Direct Customers of Ontario Hydro (ADCOH) said it was "appalled that Hydro should publicly announce its decision" on the power rates "without your prior approval and in the absence of your public comment."

TORONTO (CP) — The Canadian Dental Association (CDA) has recommended the federal and provincial governments extend medical-care benefits to include dental treatment of the "physically handicapped in stressed families."

Bill Back

OTTAWA (CP) — A bill to increase interest-free loans for farmers using undelivered grain as collateral was reintroduced in the Commons Friday.

The loan ceiling would be raised to $15,000 from $6,000 by the bill, an amendment to the Prairie Grain Advance Payments Act.

Teachers Out

CORNWALL (CP) — Separate school teachers in Stormont, Glengarry and Dundas counties have rejected the latest contract offer by the separate school board in the three counties, the teachers' chief negotiator said Friday.

Marc Cazabon said "a majority of teachers" at a general meeting Thursday turned down a proposal for salary increases ranging from 1.5per cent to 18 per cent over a 16-month period, despite a recommendation by its negotiating committee that it be accepted.

About 200 teachers have been working under the terms of a contract that expired Aug. 31.

Minimum salaries for teachers and a cost-of-living clause are the major stumbling blocks to settlement, Mr. Cazabon said.

Citing a 35-per-cent settlement recently awarded to Cornwall nurses, Mr. Cazabon said a $6,100 starting salary is not good enough for teachers.

Both sides agreed to resume bargaining next week.

Federal Watchdogs Make Sure You Get What You Pay For

By CASH MAHAFFY
Staff Reporter

There is one great big hands in Belleville that doesn't assume that every time you buy a load of gas, you get so-curate measure, or every bloh-priced steak is properly weighed and priced.

Marcel Chartrand, District inspector for the federal department of consumer and corporate affairs, and his staff of five inspectors spend their days making sure that all devices that measure quantity to determine price are fair to both the buyer and the seller. In other words, they must be accurate to within a closely defined tolerance.

Weights and measures are the business of Mr. Chartrand and his staff. Everything from scales that weigh loaded tractor cars to delicate pharmacists' balances, to gas pumps and fuel oil pumpers are under their scrutiny at regular intervals.

From their office in the Federal Building on Station St. the inspectors cover 11 counties in central Ontario, from Oshawa in the west to Brockville in the east. There are three suboffices in Peterborough, Kingston and Brockville.

"There are about 30,000 devices in the district that we have to take a look at," Mr. Chartrand said.

"We check them all regularly. Although they're checked and inspected by our people when they're manufactured, we maintain a regular inspection routine that covers them all."

The inspection team is also ready to pounce on people selling prepacked products that are shortweight. "This is done at the retail level. We look for a pattern of intent to sell short. If we can find it, we recommend prosecution," Mr. Chartrand said.

His office also handles complaints that are related to weights and measures.

With gas and beef prices at their current levels, Mr. Chartrand said that service station pumps are checked every two years and livestock scales every year. Spot checks also are carried out on products packed in individual cores, such as meats, to make sure the weight recorded and charged for — is accurate.

"We might make district-wide spot checks at a peak period, say around Thanksgiving, when we know a lot of turkey is going to be weighed and prepacked.

A notation of an ounce on a scale that is used for weighing is for merchandise can mount up to thousands of dollars profit per year in a short period," Mr. Chartrand said.

The department's regular inspections are paid for by the owners of the measuring devices tested.

"It pays for us to keep everyone in business," Mr. Chartrand laughed.

Old Becomes New

These old 1ère measures were the property of the federal department of inland revenue at about the time of Confederation. With the metric system of weights and measures being adopted in Canada, the handmade, solid brass measures may get a new life. Marcel Chartrand, district inspector for the federal department of consumer and corporate affairs, eyes them speculatively.

School to Remain Open

Loyalist Teachers Set For Day 'Study Session'

Loyalist College's teachers have obtained Halloway Street United Church Hall for a study session Tuesday in protest against the breakdown in their contract negotiations.

Faculty members will also picket the college for 2½ hours Tuesday morning, for information purposes only.

The Loyalist teachers, along with those at the other 21 community colleges in Ontario, are forbidden to strike. They called the study sessions as each college in-stead.

Paul Wall, president of the Loyalist branch of the Civil Service Association of Ontario, said the executive of the branch met with President Robert Young and Paul King, dean of faculty, Friday to discuss various aspects of the study session".

"He (President Young) has endorsed the Loyalist CSAO branch executive's request to place picket lines at the various entrances to the college buildings for a 2½ hour period next Tuesday morning, in recognition of the union's specific policy that the pickets serve for information purposes only," said Mr. Wall.

Mr. Wall said that President Young "also announced at the meeting that faculty members who attend the Oct. 8 study session or who are otherwise absent from the college for unauthorized reasons Oct. 8 will lose their pay for that day."

Negotiations between management (the council of Regents and the Ontario government) and the teachers have been underway for 10 months. They broke off last Sunday over the issue of working conditions.

Classroom teaching loads now range from about 900 hours a year, to more than 1,100 hours. Management insisted that the maximum teaching load be 800 hours a year.

"But," says a release from CSAO, "in order to reduce the teaching load to 800 hours for those above that limit, and at the same time maintain the number of hours worked, each college would have to increase the classroom load of those teachers who work fewer hours."

Management offered an eight-per-cent salary increase retroactive to Sept. 1, 1973 and a 13-per-cent increase retroactive to Sept. 1, 1974. The union is asking for a 19.35 per - cent increase retroactive to Sept. 1, 1973 and a 16-per-cent increase retroactive to Sept. 1, 1974. Average college teacher's salary is $15,000.

Purpose of Tuesday's study sessions is to give union members a chance to analyze the positions of both sides in the dispute and to ask questions of branch officers, says a release from the provincial executive of the union.

A press release from Loyalist says that Paul King, dean of faculty, notified students Friday that the facilities of the college will be at their disposal Oct. 8. Classes will be held "where possible", the release says.

Students in Manpower retraining courses are expected to attend all classes and classes in the night extension division will be held as usual.

County Schools Gearing For Metric Conversion

Hastings County schools are on the way toward total conversion to the metric system.

By June, 1975, all primary classes will be "immersed in metric" and subsequent grades will convert gradually since last year.

The introduction of metric measure to Canada is an example of future shock, said Mr. Sneddon.

"We will have to train our minds to think metric," he said.

The metric system became the official standard in France in 1840 and today 94 per cent of the world is on the metric system. The last big holdout is the United States. All weather reports on Canadian radio will be given in metric measure by next April.

Hillcrest teacher Leone Graig, responsible for the primary grade's conversion to metric, said the system can be integrated into the lowest grades at a minimal cost. Metric measures can be made from old hockey sticks and discarded broomhold product packages.

Mr. Bastog said science texts are already geared to the metric system. Publishing companies will have to step up their production of math texts.

Many manufacturers are unintentionally giving students an assist by marking their packages with the metric capacity. For instance, a 10 ounce can of pop contains 284 millilitres. Highway signs in the metric system now are going up. Kingston, which used to be 50 miles from Belleville, now is 72 kilometres away.

11-year-old Burned As Gas Can Ignites

An 11-year-old Belleville boy is recovering today in Belleville General Hospital from burns to his lower legs received about 7 p.m. Friday when a can of gas caught fire.

Police said David Ashton and two companions were playing with gasoline on Quinte Secondary School grounds when a 15-year-old came along and began throwing lighted matches on the ground. A lighted match ignited the can of gasoline, which in turn ignited nearby grass.

The three go-cart drivers attempted to stamp out the flames and the Ashton boy's pants caught fire. City police credit the quick thinking of Michael Skelly, 15, for preventing more serious injury. He pushed the Ashton lad to the ground and beat out the flames with his jacket.

Police said the hospital described the burns as "not too serious".

No charges have been laid.

Think Metric

George Patton, principal of Stirling Elementary School got into the swing of metric conversion Wednesday at a workshop for primary school teachers at Prince Charles School. One of the activities recommended by metric workshop leader Leone Grunig for children from kindergarten to grade 4 is measuring parts of the body in centemetres. She gave Mr. Patton an assist on figuring out the length of his foot.

Sophiasburgh Cemetery Gets Major Facelift

SOPHIASBURGH — Sophiasburgh Cemetery, a non-denominational burial ground cleared by township residents, will be dedicated this Sunday at a service beginning at 2 p.m.

Located a short distance east of Sophiasburgh Central School, the cemetery, until recently, was one of eight in Sophiasburgh overgrown with weeds and brush.

"There was no cemetery in Sophiasburgh for burial of dead burials," says cemetery board chairman Mrs. Wayne Lindsay.

Residents supporting a local council approached township council earlier this year and received a $3,000 grant toward restoration of a cemetery fund.

The site selected was the old Rodster cemetery, a section of land between the hamlets of Demorestville and Northport. Virtually the land had been donated by the late Grif. Rodster himself and the late Wellington Rodster as a Presbyterian, burying ground.

Restoration work began in the site and through the years a number of weeds and underbrush.

On the township grant and an additional $1,500 raised through a community walk-a-thon, Sophiasburgh Cemetery began to restore the Rodster cemetery.

An additional three acres of property was purchased to provide for future expansion. A new, semi-circular drive also was constructed at the cemetery.

Cost of a single grave is $75. Of this sum, $45 is set aside for the grave and $30 for perpetual care. Although there will not be a full-time caretaker, the grounds will be maintained by summer help.

Coal No Longer Ready Heat Source

Quinte area residents seeking a way around the high cost of heating oil and heating oil by converting to coal are out of luck.

There isn't a lumb of coal available in Belleville and there hasn't been for more than two years.

Metro-Leander Fuels, owner and operator of the coal dock here, closed the dock and sold the property in 1972.

"There hasn't been a coal boat in here since 1970," said Metro-Leander manager, Jim Deleeuw. "I kept coal on hand for a year longer than we should have, bringing it in by truck to accommodate the few customers who hadn't converted to oil."

Mr. Driscoll said no industry or home in Belleville burns coal, and "there's no requirement for it".

His firm refers callers who want coal to the two nearest points, S. Anglin Co. in Kingston and A. C. Connor and Sons Ltd. in Campbellford. The queries come from Belleville owners who can't get kennel coal. They have to go to Kingston or Campbellford themselves and bring it back.

"Industries operating here couldn't meet the pollution control requirements so they all converted to natural gas," said Mr. Driscoll. "We sniffed our household customers a year ahead of time that we were getting out of coal, to give them lots of time to convert their furnaces."

Other city suppliers did the same.

Coal piles were a feature of the Belleville waterfront for generations located on the east side of the harbor. The property on which they stood was sold to a group of local businessmen who intended to build a highrise apartment building on the site. However, rising construction costs forced them to abandon the plan, and the property now is up for sale.

Local Banker Named To Top European Post

By CHRISTOPHER ALMEY
Staff Correspondent

Yes, you can still become a somebody in this day and age without a high formal education despite a society and business world that normally demands university qualifications for certain positions.

An engineer? You require a degree.

A doctor? Years of intensive training to earn a degree that seems at hard to obtain that it is for man to fly by flapping his arms.

An international banker? A degree in economics . . . perhaps, a degree in business administration . . . at least a B.A. . . . one would think.

Michael Joseph Regan, born near Wooler, armed with a Grade 12 diploma, entered the world at high finance at the Royal Bank in Belleville, in 1948, age 18.

A quarter of a century later, he has been appointed general manager, United Kingdom and Scandinavian countries by the Royal Bank. He will supervise the activities of the bank in these countries, and a spokesman at head office in Montreal describes it as "a very important posting".

His mother, Mary, now of Frankford, widow of John Joseph Regan, recalled that even at five years of age he helped with the family farm chores on the 8th concession, Sidney, assistant manager, spending almost four years on the Caribbean island. Next came New York and San Francisco. He's now on the move both to and forth from coast to coast and was eventually installed a few years ago as senior agent in the western city.

He and his wife had made plans to attend a Hawaiian spring convention, when much to his surprise he was suddenly elevated to his new position.

The Regans leave this week-end for the United Kingdom.

Up in Smoke

There are just no words to describe the day you've made all your mortgage payments and you can finally burn it to ashes. It was the Lions Club turn this week with club president Art Chartrand, deputy district governor Dave Hanson and building committee chairman Alvin Parkhurst doing the honors. The $35,000, five-year mortgage was on the ARC Industries workshop on Station Street. The club now is making plans to build a second floor and offer space to other community groups.

NDP Candidate Fired From Job

Bob Sanders, NDP candidate in Hastings riding in the July 8 federal election, said he has been fired from his job as a medical social worker for political activity.

Mr. Sanders, who came third in a four-way race won by Jack Ellis, said he believes the firing came from a committee of the board of governors of the hospital.

However, Philip Rickard, executive director of the hospital said today "there was nothing political about it".

The board of governors doesn't deal with hiring and firing," said Mr. Rickard. "This was an administrative decision."

Mr. Sanders said he was told the reason for his firing was "restructuring of the organization and other reasons".

The other reasons were never explained to him, he said.

He said his superior, Dr. Reginald Anderson, medical director at the hospital was "shocked" at the firing and said he (Dr. Anderson) had "no idea," why the action had been taken.

Mr. Sanders' had been a social worker at the hospital for six years and earned $10,000 a year. He was given three months severance pay.

He said he doesn't know yet whether or not he will appeal his dismissal.

"I will sit down with Morty Shulman, (NDP member of the provincial legislature) and if he thinks it's right, he'll refer me to a good lawyer who is not afraid of the Belleville establishment," said Mr. Sanders.

It's an Unhappy Visit to Moscow

MOSCOW (CP) — Things are back to normal: The Canadians are unhappy.

Several Team Canada members polled informally Friday said they wouldn't, if given a choice, return to Moscow, even for a holiday.

They're angry over the decision, frustrated by bureaucracy and fed up with what they consider inferior officiating.

"Who needs this?" said Paul Henderson, hero of Canada's come-from-behind victory over the Soviet Union in a similar international hockey series two years ago.

"What are we proving with this exercise? It's a joke, just a joke."

Team Canada '74, represented by players from the World Hockey Association and a few NHL veterans, and two ties against the Russians. In 1972, Team Canada was represented by the National Hockey League, and emerged with a 4-3-1 record.

Before the series started, coach Billy Harris of Ottawa said things have changed—conditions would be much better than for the previous Canada-Russia series.

He said it would be a friendly series.

That ended when Bruce MacGregor of Canada and Valery Vasiliev fought in the second period of the sixth game. Canada's Rick Ley pounded forward Valery Vasiliev's head with the end of the game.

Ley and Khachaturov shook hands after practice Friday morning.

One member of the official Team Canada delegation, reporting to Murray Watt, MP for WHA, said he was so unhappy he would try to get out before the seventh game Sunday.

Murphy was one of those who barricaded the dressing room as Russian victory Thursday night. In a protest over the way the referees and officials have been treated.

Canadian general manager Bill Hunter said the highest priority before attempting to set up another international series is to make sure qualified officials are available.

MacGregor was still upset hours after his fight.

"It all depends if you want the game called by the rules," he said the forward. "To me Vasiliev deserved an automatic 10-minute penalty.

"We don't have to go into how the game was handled. Everybody saw that."

Defenceman Gary Bergman, Vasiliev dumped MacGregor on a Canadian rush. MacGregor said he believed Vasiliev deserved a penalty for tripping before the major altercation started.

The referee was right there. If the rules aren't going to be called the way they should be called, there's no point in carrying on. It turns into a farce and that's what we had."

BRUCE MacGREGOR

MacGregor, unable to play the remainder of the series because of injuries, blamed Russians in his knee, drew a five-minute penalty along with Vasiliev for the fight. The Canadian forward was given nine times by the big Russian defenceman, did not drop his glove or his stick.

If Vasiliev had been assessed 10 minutes for being the aggressor under international rules, the Russians would have had to play shorthanded.

The Canadians received 33 minutes in penalties Thursday compared with the Russians' 22.

The Soviet press criticized the team for "brutality" and "lack of self-control."

Canadian fans are the recognized masters of the power play," says Soviet Sport. But when individual hockey players replace this headlong attack with brutality, they undermine the high standards of Canadian hockey."

Amazed at Dombrowsky's Showing

McLean Calls Refereeing "The Worst I've Ever Seen"

MOSCOW (AP) — The chief referee of the Canadian Amateur Hockey Association said Friday the work by referee Viktor Dombrowsky Thursday in Russia's 5-3 victory over Team Canada was "the worst I've ever seen."

Hugh McLean of Hamilton, who has officiated for many years in amateur hockey, said Olympic competition, said as an interview he was amazed at Dombrowsky's showing.

The Russian referee called 35 minutes in penalties against Canada and only nine minutes against Russia. Two misconducts helped put Canada's total. Each team also drew one five-minute major penalty although the Canadian player, Bruce MacGregor, did not drop his gloves or his stick in an altercation with Valery Vasiliev, who threw at least three punches after dropping his gloves.

"We learned in the school for officials in Canada that Dombrowsky knows the rules," said McLean. "The only assumption left is that he decided before the game where his sympathies would lie."

McLean said initially that Canada would solve no problems by pulling out of the series, or by deciding to avoid such a series in the future, but later changed his viewpoint.

"I've been saying this is a game and that the game should be developed. This is true if it's treated like a game.

"If it's a game it should be treated as such and if it isn't a game what are we doing here?"

McLean said Canadian referee Tom Brown will work the seventh game of the series tonight and Joseph Kompalla of West Germany will work the final game Sunday.

McLean said the level of officiating in Canada was better than in the first two games here. He suggested Reginald Sacrapak, the Polish referee who worked Russia's 5-3 triumph in the first game, might have lost control at can-ity "end as drastically" as Dombrowsky did.

Sizzling Atlanta Club Too Hot for Flyers

BY THE CANADIAN PRESS

Atlanta Flames are getting carried away with the exhibition schedule.

The Flames, who finished fourth last season in the Smythe Division of the National Hockey League, added their fifth consecutive streak to nine Friday night with a 4-1 triumph over Philadelphia Flyers, defending Stanley Cup champions.

In other games, California tied Los Angeles Kings 1-1 and Toronto whipped St. Louis Blues 6-2.

Edmonton Oilers edged Winnipeg Jets 4-3 and Vancouver Canucks beat Phoenix Roadrunners 5-1 in WHA games.

In WHL matches, Cleveland Crusaders of the WHA defeated Pittsburgh Penguins 5-3 and Indianapolis Racers of the WHA tied Detroit Red Wings 3-3.

The Flames scored three goals in the second period to defeat the Flyers in Atlanta. One of them was a penalty shot, taken by Ron Leiter who was tripped on a breakaway by defenceman Jim Watson.

Tom Lysiak had two assists for the Flames.

Rookie Wayne King scored on a second-period rebound to give the Seals their tie in Oakland. Mike Murphy got the Los Angeles goal.

In a penalty-filled game before 1,000 fans at Red Deer, the Oilers received goals from Rusty Patenaude, Barry Long, Ken Baird, Ross Perkins and Bob Sheehan.

The Oilers, who had period leads of 2-1 and 4-2, took 16 of 34 penalties, including 11 minors, three misconducts and three majors. Winnipeg was assessed four minors, three majors and a misconduct.

Officials Win Point

One Situation Improves

MOSCOW (CP) — Members of the official Team Canada delegation won a minor victory today when they learned the hick-ets with which they were unhappy have been improved for the seventh and eighth games of the Canada-Russia hockey series.

Cats Wrap It Up With 4-Goal Third

By MARK BERTT
Sports Staff

Admittedly that 6:1 took two periods for his team to get going Belleville Bobcat coach Tim Williams said after the game. But when the squad put it all together in the second period, Friday, to finish with a flurry while turning back Oshawa Legionaires, 10-5.

It was the first Metro Junior B Hockey League home game for Bobcats this season and with Danny Lupenette's four goals showing the way, the Belleville skaters were not about to disappoint their fans.

Lupenette, a local product who was with Cornwall Royals of the Quebec Major Junior Hockey League last season, didn't waste long showing he has the ability to be a Bobcat leader.

Danny tallied in a pair in the final 30 minutes when the home side wrapped it up while scoring four without a reply by the visitors.

Cats' initial getter last season, Jim Richardson, is off to another great start. He fired two goals, opening and closing the scoring in the game.

The other Belleville goals went to team captain Robbie Foster, defenceman Harry MacDonald, Rob Thompson and Mike Watt.

Dave Shymko was a three-goal shooter for Oshawa Ron Laurin and Ed Kibed had the others.

Referee Joe St. Amands for Richardson to find the mark when he finished off a three-way move with Grant Goegan and Wayne Clapp. But the visitors bounced right back to equalize just 71 seconds later.

After MacDonald clicked to make it 2-1, Bobcats, the Belleville squad appeared to stop skating and fell behind 5-2 by the first intermission.

Early in the middle 20 minutes, Legionaires' power attack lead to 6-2 when Laurin was allowed to park unmolested on Bruce Clark's doorstep.

Then Lupenelle, Thompson and Wayne Clapp, but Legionaires closed the gap to one and Lupenelle ripped home a pair of Calberry was in on two of the three scoring plays.

After Kibed put Oshawa on even terms with what turned out to be his club's final goal of the night, Lupenelle supplied the winning goal for Cats.

Watt clicked with an accurate wrist shot to finish off a threat with Foster and Lupenelle.

The third period belonged to Bobcats' cats but it wasn't until halfway through the final frame that Lupenelle knifed the four-goal rally. After Danny connected, Foster made it 8-5. Then it was Lupenelle again. And Richardson topped it off.

The teams concentrated on the hockey for most of the 60 minutes. Only 24 minutes in penalties were assessed with the visitors taking 16 of the total.

Other bright spots for the Cats were provided by Watt. He rejoined the League nine days ago, and Goegan and Allan Calberry who have been strong in the checking department.

Cats now have a tie and a win in show in two Metro League starts. They travel to Brighton, Thursday, to last the Voyageurs.

Friday, the Williams-coached Belleville crew is at home to Peterborough Lions.

Post Time Changed

KINGSTON (Special) — Post time at Frontenac Downs here Sunday has been moved to 3 p.m. in order to prevent a conflict with the Team Canada '76 - Soviet Union hockey telecast from Moscow.

The 13 minute delay in post time should enable harness racing fans to see the hockey game, scheduled for viewing at 11 a.m., in its entirety before taking in the action at Frontenac Downs.

A 10-race card is on the program, featuring five exactors and five quinellas.

Hockey League Organizing

TWEED — The Tweed-Hungerford Hockey League will operate this season.

All players not with clubs at present are invited to take part.

Convener Bob Bancroft at Shoco Lake Hotel (478-9010) has more information on the league.

Nine-team Gas House Is Ready for Openers

All systems are "go" for the Gas House Hockey League.

Nine teams will be in the post this season with action to start Monday at Memorial Arena when three games are on tap. Two games will be played Wednesday night.

In the opening tripleheader Constellation Carpet meets Belleville Generals at 8:0, Yardmen take on with Art's Enos at 9:0, and at 10:30, it's Independents and Rollins Lumber.

Wednesday, Chuckwagon Foods tangle with Stanley Struthers at 9:30 and at 10:30, Canadian Durable and Constellation are scheduled.

League secretary Vern Tweedie reports the executive has been rounded out with former Intermediate A player and coach John Trondell accepting the position of president, Hyalle Bryant serving as vice-president and Bill Carson, treasurer.

It is expected the loop would go with 10 teams this time around but an entry from Trenton will not be in the fold after all, says Whalen.

Andy and Ray Join Borden

Andy McWilliams and Ray Hore, two solid performers with Canadian Forces Base, Trenton's entry in the Bay of Quinte Soccer Association, have been added to CFB Borden's team for the Canada Armed Forces October 7-13 in Victoria, B.C.

Borden won the right to represent Ontario at a recent playoff competition.

McWilliams will line up at the centre half position with Borden while Hore will look after goalkeeping duties.

WILLIE DAVIS

Expos May Lose Davis

MONTREAL (CP) — Centre fielder Willie Davis said Friday he will not return to Montreal Expos to fulfil the second year of a two-year contract next season if the National League baseball club has failed to guarantee he will not be traded.

Davis, who said he will not play baseball next year, said he had been promised he would be here for two years, although he admitted this was not part of the contract.

"As things stand right now, I won't be playing centre field for the Expos next year," said Davis.

He did not blame general manager Jim Fanning for the situation and said he could understand why Fanning could not hold it against Fanning if he received and accepted a trade offer involving him.

Davis was speaking to an interviewer after reading CFCF-12 Davis, obtained by the Expos last December from Los Angeles Dodgers in exchange for ace pitcher Mike Marshall, could not be reached for comment by The Canadian Press.

Fanning refused to comment on Davis' statement, saying he would like to see what the Expos plan to trade him for before he begins his second season of his two-year contract with the club.

Prior to his departure for Pittsburgh Friday, Fanning said he would be discussing with Davis, but failed to resolve the issue.

Davis was named the Expos' Player of the year by a panel from the Montreal chapter of the Baseball Writers' of America Thursday night.

Walt Alston — He's Indignant

Queries Annoy Dodger Manager

PITTSBURGH (AP) — Los Angeles Dodgers, conceded an edge in pitching, surprisingly also had power advantage over Pittsburgh Pirates as the two teams opened the best-of-five game series for baseball's National League pennant Friday.

The Dodgers traditionally have been thought of as a team which leaned heavily on pitching and relied on pitching to win. The Pirates, on the other hand, are recognized as a hitting club, one whose power statistics do not [illegible] Walter Alston, Los Angeles manager, said when he thought the two teams were about even, considering the [illegible] "Of course we're not even-Al.

"We have to hit more than the Dodgers scored last year, when they [illegible] runs. We have to score more than we did in the [illegible] Alston said. "We've got to [illegible] pitching [illegible] we've got to [illegible] our players," said the [illegible] manager of Alston.

"Why don't you ask me how the Pirates will do in Los Angeles," he asked. The Dodgers beat Pittsburgh in four of six in Dodger Stadium.

"Check the statistics," he said. "Who hit more home runs, scored more runs?"

The Dodgers actually rely on more than just 20-game winner Andy Messersmith, 19-game winner Don Sutton and reliever Mike Marshall, a 13-game winner with 21 saves.

The Dodgers hit 139 homers in 1975 and the Pirates scored 708 runs to 751, batted in 704 runs to 686, and had .272 as a team, just two points less than Pittsburgh's .274.

Thus the Western champion Dodgers, who won 102 games and finished four games of runs-cap Cincinnati reds, are the choice to beat the Pirates and reach the World Series.

Pittsburgh won the East by 1½ games in a daylight with St. Louis Cardinals that wasn't decided until the final day of the 162-game season.

Right-hander Sutton, who won 21 of his last 14 starts, was Alston's choice to open the series winner, Jerry Reuss Sutton had a 1-2 record against the Pirates during the regular season, and Reuss a 3-1 mark with the Dodgers.

Pittsburgh manager Danny Murtaugh wasn't taking any comfort in his team's 8-4 edge against Los Angeles during the season.

"I'd say in a short series past performance means nothing," Murtaugh said. "Both teams won a lot of important games during the season. Both teams are on an equal footing."

Earl Weaver Wary of A's in "Money Month"

OAKLAND (AP) — Oakland A's, after a meteoric September, are back in baseball's money month—October.

"It'll be just like Monday things they haven't done in 19 or 20 days," said Baltimore manager Earl Weaver before sending his Orioles into today's American League playoff opener against the A's.

The A's sent Jim Hunter 25-12, Mike Cuellar, 20-10, in the opening game of the best-of-five series. The teams next five games to settle last year's playoff, with Hunter, 20-18, throwing a shutout in the final.

"A good club like the A's feels it can turn it on when it has to," said third baseman Brooks Robinson of the Orioles. "A lot of ball players think that way, but sometimes you can and sometimes you can't."

The A's, scoring a third straight World Series title, defeated nicely feel they can win again despite a 14-18 record in their final 30 regular-season games.

"Put $25,000 out there and we'll play the game over and see what happens," Reggie Jackson said recently of the Series winners' share.

Baltimore won 26 of its final 34 regular-season games and needed every victory in the drive which carried the Orioles past New York in the Eastern division race.

"We were eight games behind with 30 to play and it was at another time to start thinking about next year," said Robinson, who had a .308 batting average.

Weaver said the A's, with a comfort lead, were able to play it safe and look ahead to September and he expects them to open up, especially with their base running.

"They didn't run much in September. Jackson and (Bert) Campaneris missed some games with injuries. You couldn't expect much from them with those two out.

"The way for us to win is to keep their long-ball hitters in the park and their base stealers off the bases."

Oakland manager Alvin Dark said: "I think Campy is 100 per cent and Reggie seems to be all right. We should be 100 per cent healthy."

Dark admitted that Weaver surprised him by naming Cuellar, Dave McNally and Jim Palmer as his starting pitchers for the first three games. Ross Grimsley, 3-0 against the A's this season, will be in the bullpen.

Weaver said: "If Grimsley duplicates his regular-season record against the A's, we'll win the playoffs. If I started him, I could only use him twice."

The 26-year-old left-hander beat the A's twice in relief for Cincinnati Reds in the 1972 World Series.

"I asked to go to the bullpen," said Grimsley, who picked up a save in his only relief appearance this season.

Musso Rejoins Lions' Attack

By THE CANADIAN PRESS

The Calgary Stampeders' defence will be watching for something entire Sunday as they clash with the last running attack in Canada in a Western Football Conference game against British Columbia Lions.

Not only will the Stampeders have to lay oh Leo Harris and Monroe Graves who have accumulated most of the Lions' 1,901 yards rushing this season, but they will also have to face fullback Johnny Musso, returning to the lineup after missing a game Sunday because of a knee injury.

In the weekend's other WFC play, Saskatchewan Roughriders play Winnipeg Blue Bombers Sunday in a game to be broadcast on the CTV weekend network at 3:30 p.m. EDT.

Both clubs acknowledge that the game in Winnipeg can make or break their playoff hopes.

"It's a key game," said Saskatchewan general manager Ken Preston. "It's what you call a four-pointer."

If Saskatchewan wins, they will move four points ahead of Winnipeg in the battle for the third and final playoff spot. If Winnipeg wins, the two clubs will be tied, but the Bombers will have the advantage because they have played one less game.

For Winnipeg corner back Paul Williams, however, the game has a more personal

George Campbell Is Top Cat

By THE CANADIAN PRESS

Defensive back George Campbell, who played with the Hamilton Tiger-Cats in 1973, is one of the top rookies this season and a threat to the Football Conference team.

Campbell, 24, has held down a cornerback spot generally the entire season. In fact, he's the only American rookie to stick with the team since the first day of training camp.

"Campbell is a real find," said Hamilton coach Jerry Williams. "He gives good pass coverage, is a sound defender and a good tackler."

And he also returns kickoffs and punts. So both the defensive and offensive units of the Ottawa Rough Riders will have to keep a sharp watch on him Sunday when they meet the Ticats at Hamilton. The game will be televised on the CTV eastern network, starting at 3 p.m. EDT.

In a Canadian Football League doubleheader, the game this afternoon at Toronto, Edmonton Eskimos meet the Argonauts. The game starts a 3 p.m. and will be shown on be CBC-television network.

Montreal Alouettes lead the FPC with 14 points, two more than Hamilton, and four ahead of Ottawa - Toronto is with eight points.

The Eskimos, starting a two-game series here, share first place with British Columbia Lions in the Western Football Conference.

Campbell, a 1973 seventh-round draft choice of Atlanta Falcons of the National Football League, played college football for Iowa State Cyclones but was cut by the club without seeing action in exhibition games.

"I'd watched some Canadian football on television and the numbered Hamilton had willing to offer to try me out for a year at Iowa," he said Friday. "I had my agent at the time contact the Tiger-Cats . . . they invited me up for a five-day trial but I didn't catch on.

"However, they said I would have a good chance in 1974 so I signed a contract."

Campbell has returned 13 kickoffs this season, most in the club in carry. His fourth best on 18 yards, gained, 17 behind leader Dave Ramsey of Toronto Argonauts. He has returned punts for 76 yards.

"I like defence. I like the one-on-one challenge with an offensive receiver," he particularly around the goal line. The wider field in Canada puts a lot of pressure on a defensive back, but I enjoy pressure."

The Rough Rider hit with injuries, will be without Wayne Giardino, Terry Wellesley and Hugh Mills, two defensive end knee problem is expected to go on the 21-day injured reserve list.

For John Eskimos, defensive back John Williams, acquired this week from the Ticats, will go on defence after he injured his quiet.

The Argonauts give Rick Arrington a chance at quarterback if Mike Rae has his problem.

Arrington, formerly with the NFL Philadelphia Eagles, replaced Jim Lindsey.

Problems Plague World Football

By THE CANADIAN PRESS

The World Football League continues to have problems in its second season.

The league said Friday it has taken over control of Florida Blazers, brushing aside a last-minute bid by managing general partner Rommie Loudd to keep the franchise.

"The Blazers have forfeited the right to operate the club because they have been unable to meet their financial obligations," said Dan Anderson, WFL vice-president for public relations, from league headquarters in Newport Beach, Calif.

The team will stand in Orlando until new investors can be found or the franchise is moved to another city.

In Detroit, the league has promised to continue paying the salaries and expenses of the Wheels.

League spokesman Chuck Rohe said Thursday that the other owners have "to pull $20,000 to $50,000 out of their pocket every week, five days a week" to keep the operation ill Jacksonville and Detroit.

The Southern report an average attendance of more than 12,000 for seven home games. However, 15,016 showed up for a Wednesday night game by which the Southern beat Jacksonville 47-6.

THE UNEXPLAINED

by Allen Spraggett

View of the Past

By ALLEN SPRAGGETT

Mrs. Coleen Buterbaugh is one of those people who have stopped through the invisible doorway that leads to the past.

On the morning of Oct. 22, 1963, Mrs. Buterbaugh was walking briskly across the campus of Nebraska Wesleyan College where she served as secretary to the dean, Dr. Samuel Dahl. She was on her way to start work for the day.

It was. Mrs. Buterbaugh recalled later, exactly 8:50 a.m. when she walked into the steps of the C. T. White Building which housed her office and also served as campus music centre. As she strode down the hallway she passed several young students shuffling to early classes. Some were still rubbing the sleep from the cups of morning coffee.

Mrs. Buterbaugh's first destination during this particular days was the office of Dr. Tom McCord, a visiting lecturer from Scotland. It was an office she knew well.

As she stepped through the door she knew immediately that something was wrong. Uncanny.

She was almost suffocated by an overwhelming odor of stale, musty air, as though someone had opened an old trunk full of smouldering junk. Then Mrs. Buterbaugh was taken aback to see a woman in the office standing with her back to her and bending low to reach into a filing cabinet drawer.

The woman, whoever she was, struck Mrs. Buterbaugh as being very old. She was tall, slender and dark-haired but dressed in the style of another era — a long dress, white shirtwaist and an ankle-length brown skirt.

What in the world's going on here, thought Mrs. Buterbaugh? Who is this woman? And why does the office look so utterly strange?

Nothing about the place was normal. The desk was filling cabinets, the curtains, they all looked incredibly old.

It was when she glanced at the curtains that Mrs. Buterbaugh noted, with alarm, that even the scene outside the window was different. This was crazy! Why, there were no streets out there. And Willard Seminary House, one of the familiar campus buildings, wasn't anywhere to be seen.

Badly frightened, Mrs. Buterbaugh wheeled and rushed out of the office. She headed straight to the office of Dahl, and blurted out her bizarre story.

He listened attentively, then asked her to accompany him to the office of Dr. Glenn Callan, head of the college's social science department, who had been on the faculty since 1926.

The elderly professor heard Mrs. Buterbaugh's account, cross-examining her from the details. Then he said that she had described the old office and campus as they had been in the 1920s. The woman fitted the description of Miss Ada Mills, whose office it once was. She died in the late 1930s.

When Mrs. Buterbaugh later returned to the office, everything was back to normal.

Parapsychologists (scientists who study psychic phenomena) call her experience retrocognition — the projection of the mind backward through time.

"How on earth did it happen? This is part of the unexplained.

Robert Alda Proud Of Son 'Hawkeye'

LOS ANGELES (AP) — Actor Robert Alda has a standard reply when asked the age of his son: "Alan is six feet two inches."

This is an actor's whimsical way for avoiding reference to his 5'7" own record books show that Alan Alda is 38 and his father is 41, but except for some gray at the temples Robert Alda looks little changed from when he played George Gershwin in the 1945 Warner Brothers biography, Rhapsody in Blue.

Bob Alda was back in Hollywood for a guest appearance on Rhoda, CBS' new situation comedy starring Valerie Harper. Between rehearsals he joked about being known as "Alan Alda's father" since his son's success as the MASH television series.

Alan Alda is a younger, handsomer version of his father, the resemblance especially noticeable in their smiles.

"When I'm not in, I sometimes introduce myself as Hawkeye's father," said Bob with pride as he prouder. My boy's a wonderful actor, but I think I have this a long time ago.

"During the war I used to take leaves in Hollywood Canteen when he was also there. I'd say, 'Hi, Bob. Who's on First?' and lots of other Abbott and Costello routines.

"When he graduated from high school, he thought he would go into the business. He and a couple of friends had put on a show that raised funds for the school and he thought show business was easy.

"I told him it didn't always work out that way and it would be better if he prepared himself by going to college. By the time he graduated from Fordham, he was ready."

Born Alphonso D'Abruzzo in New York City, Robert Alda was known for years as the actor who played George Gershwin, then after originated the role on Broadway in Guys and Dolls, he was hailed by Sky Masterson.

Alda studied to be an architect at New York University before school in the middle of the Depression.

"I got started in show business by winning a singing contest," he recalled. "The prize was $25, and my friends were making $84.75 a week. I figured I had really found something."

He worked in radio, vaudeville, burlesque and theatre before signing with Warner Brothers in 1945. Rhapsody in Blue made him a star, then he found himself cast in something called Cinderella Jones.

"I was billed as a comedy," I told the bosses, "I've worked in comedy for 12 years, and I don't see anything funny in that script. After Rhapsody in Blue, do you want to put me in Tiffany's window or do you want to put me in Woolworth's?"

The public agreed with Alda that Cinderella Jones was no comedy. The studio considered him something of a troublemaker and after a few more films he left Warner Brothers.

Robert Alda made a few films elsewhere, then returned to New York for an active career in the theatre and television.

Alda has made his home in Reno for the last four years, making Italian films and commuting to the United States for TV and stage work.

He said he has another one coming along: "His name is Antony, as in Mark Antony. He's it and a fabulous musician as well as an actor. He may have the most talent of us all."

Opening lead—KV

By Oswald and James Jacoby

Tyler, Tex., ACBL experts who analyzed the Olympiad game hands believe in the "Trent" theory, and tell them to "bid big" school of bidding. They suggest that South open one notrump and North raise to 3 N.T. Then they go on: "A club lead by West will allow South to make 13 tricks by leading towards dummy's club honors a second time. The heart king lead will hold South to 11 if by some chance North becomes declarer, a heart lead will hold North to 10 tricks and a very bad score."

We agree with the unattached observers, and watch one South player make 13 tricks after a king of hearts opening.

He ducked that first lead. This left West with a tough problem: about what to do at trick two. His finally led a low club. Dummy's queen held the trick and South was ready to go after the rest.

He started by cashing two high diamonds to make sure that suit would break. Then he led out the ace and king of spades and the jack dropped. After this pleasant development, there was an automatic squeeze against West. South cashed the two high spades and discarded his last club. Dummy's ten of the rest of the diamonds. On the last diamond lead West had to unguard his queen of hearts or lead to the ace of clubs. So the king of hearts was discarded and the last two tricks scored with hearts.

Heart Murmurs May Mean Nothing

By G.E. THORTERON, MD

Dear Dr. Thosteron: Please explain the significance of a heart murmur along with high blood pressure and overweight. My husband is a fat man about 30 pounds overweight. When he was discharged from the service the doctors told him he had a heart murmur.

Although he has high blood pressure he insists on eating his pork chops. Also, I frequently hear palpitations and occasionally pains in his chest. I am worried because he refuses to see a doctor — V.

A "murmur" by itself may not mean anything. A murmur is only an odd sound heard through a stethoscope. In a healthy individual, the best thing to do is forget about a murmur. Murmurs are, after all, not the least bit uncommon, and often are not even noticed.

But — and this is an important but — when there are signs of illness, then a murmur begins to be significant.

Doctors frequently hear murmurs and don't even mention them to the patient. Only if the person has the nervous concern told your husband about his murmur has it become one that could lead him to become a hypochondriac and be constantly concerned about his health.

After all, he has at least two, and perhaps more, indications of future trouble unless he does something about them. He is overweight. He has high blood pressure. Each of these are things that can and should be corrected early. In forestall serious troubles later on.

At 39 he's young enough to start doing something about them.

Those headaches may (or may not) be related to his high blood pressure. The chest pains may (or may not) be indication of coronary disease developing in his heart trouble.

I would say it is virtually certain that if he starts now, he can do a great deal to preserve his health. I can say almost as certainly that if he doesn't, he's on the road to the kind of trouble that can't be solved very easily — if at 35-40, 50 or 55 he wants more years.

People keep asking, "Why don't you write to...more preventive medicine?"

Your husband is one of the reasons why. He's having some warnings, early in life, but he refuses to see a doctor. Even though he is human (although he evidently doesn't recognize it as a blessing) with some early warning signs.

Dear Dr. Thosteron: If a person with a bad case of constipation, taking laxatives every day, goes into a diabetic coma, will the laxatives also die right with it? Or get no help? Or would he stay in a coma for a while? — T.W.

He would not die suddenly. What treatment he would get in a coma for three or four days before his acidosis and related consequences proved fatal.

Pollution Requirements Not Met

Joint Commission Threatens 'Noises'

OTTAWA (CP) — The International Joint Commission warned Friday it may soon have to start making "loud public noises" if the Canadian and United States governments don't start replying to recommendations.

A statement from the commission following a five-day session expressed concern over failure of the governments to respond to recommendations on water quality, vessel wastes regulations and air pollution.

The Detroit-Windsor area.

Part of the commission's work was advising the two governments, said Canadian Chairman Maxwell Cohen, and if governments are slow reacting it had a duty to let the public know.

"We are particularly interested in the reaction to our recommendations for early action relating to pollution from land activities," U.S. Chairman Christian Herter said.

In a 1972 report on Great Lakes water quality, the commission recommended the two governments accelerate programs to control solid and liquid wastes, introduce sediment control legislation and establish an inventory on use of pest control products in the area.

It also suggested substantial reductions in use of rock salt for de-icing roads and urged the governments to foster increased land use planning and management programs.

Mr. Cohen said the commission will actively pursue responses from the governments.

"Both governments have not responded with the speed we would like to see," he told a news conference.

The commission also said it deplored the failure of the governments to reach agreement on compatible waste regulations for vessels on the Great Lakes.

"It is disappointing that we still don't have compatible regulations even though the recommendations were made two years ago," said Keith Henry, of Vancouver, one of the Canadian commissioners.

Governments had also failed to respond to recommendations contained in a 1972 report on air pollution problems in the cross-border cities of Detroit and Windsor.

Indian Groups Ask for Inquiry

OTTAWA (CP) — Two native people's organizations called Friday for a full inquiry into violence at a demonstration by Indians on Parliament Hill Monday.

The Inuit Tapirisat of Canada, representing 18,000 Eskimos, and the Native Council of Canada, representing 200,000 Metis and non-status Indians, said in a news release:

"We need to be certain that there is no significance to be attached to the fact that the first people to be controlled by the riot police were native people."

The two native organizations stressed that the Indians in the demonstration did not represent the native people as do their associations and the National Indian Brotherhood.

But the RCMP riot police had been used in the demonstration for the first time since their formation in 1967, the statement said. There had been more violent disturbances in the last seven years.

Church Opposed to Violent Redress

TORONTO (CP) — Archbishop E. W. Scott, primate of the Anglican Church of Canada, said in a letter to Indian leaders Friday that the church is opposed to the use of violence in seeking redress of grievances.

Referring to a skirmish between Indians and the RCMP on Parliament Hill last Monday, Archbishop Scott said the church does not believe "that violence is an appropriate, acceptable or effective means of moving toward solutions to the issues that must be resolved."

He also said the church is prepared "to do everything within its power to help the native peoples of Canada present their concerns and grievances to the Canadian government and to develop greater public concern in support of Indian people."

The letter was mailed to 14 Indian leaders, Prime Minister Pierre Trudeau and Indian Affairs Minister Judd Buchanan.

Court Favors Six Nations Council

TORONTO (CP) — The Ontario Court of Appeal ruled Friday that an elected council is entitled to govern the Six Nations Indian reserve near Brantford.

The court allowed an appeal by Richard Isaac and 15 other plaintiffs and lasted a permanent injunction restraining Ackland Davey and nine other defendants from watching and besetting at or near the council house in the Brant County village of Ohsweken.

In the appeal judgment, Mr. Justice John Arnup said the plaintiffs are or were members of the elected council and supported that form of government.

The defendants support the traditional form of government by hereditary chiefs and claim that the chiefs are still the lawful government of the Six Nations Confederacy, which they say owns the lands its members occupy. Mr. Justice Arnup noted.

Shocking Experiment

Tests involving electric shocks to the brains of intoxicated rats have led John Ploog, a University of California psychology professor, to believe drinking alcohol produces changes in brain activity, indicating increased susceptability to convulsions. (CP Photo)

Senate Wants Nixon's Tapes

WASHINGTON (AP) — The United States Senate voted Friday to cancel an arrangement that gave former president Richard Nixon custody of his White House tapes and papers.

The bill, which now goes to the House of Representatives, is designed to prohibit destruction of the documents and to assure they are made available to the courts and public in the interest of learning the full story of Watergate.

Meanwhile, the Senate appropriations committee voted to allow Nixon only $300,000 of the $850,000 President Ford had requested to help Nixon make the transition to private life.

Alderman Makes Alabama Trip

TORONTO (CP) — John Kuka, an alderman from the Toronto borough of North York, went to Alabama to study roads this week on his own money, one month after a county court jury found him not guilty of fraud and breach of trust over borough funds he received to study roads.

He told the jury last month he had not used $478 in borough funds to visit Alabama when he originally intended in December, 1972, because personal and political considerations prevented the trip. He and his wife went to the Bahamas instead with another North York alderman and his wife.

Bill Davis, clean up your Act.

As premier, you presided over a pretty oppressive piece of legislation.

An Act called CECBA (Crown Employees Collective Bargaining Act).

Remember it?

It concerns our rights, as your government employees, to bargain for better working conditions and benefits.

In fact, it denies us rights.

It means, for instance, that our disputes are settled by an arbitration board that's stacked in your favour.

You get to appoint two out of three members. Including the chairman.

Even though you're the people we're supposed to be bargaining with.

That's what we call oppressive legislation.

We want you to make that Act a fair one.

We only want bargaining rights equal to those of other Ontario workers. Including other public employees.

One word sums it up. Justice.

Be fair, Bill Davis. Change CECBA.

It's a very tough Act to swallow.

Free the servants!

Bomb Kills 5
IRA Blasts Campaign

GUILDFORD, England (AP) — British military units were ordered today to tighten security following a bomb blast in two taverns that left five persons dead and 65 injured. An army spokesman said the blast may signal a new wave of violence in Britain by the Irish Republican Army.

Two young women are being sought in connection with the bombings, police sources said.

"We have little doubt that this was the work of the Irish Republic Army," one detective said. "Our first priority is to find two girls seen behaving suspiciously before the explosions."

Four of the dead were teenage members of the armed forces—two of them young women—and about 40 of the injured were also off-duty military personnel on their Saturday night out from nearby camps.

There were fears of a fresh wave of bombings by the IRA aimed at disrupting the campaign for Thursday's general election.

The attacks on the crowded Horse and Groom and the nearby Seven Sisters bar were the latest in a string of explosions in Britain in the last two years that have left a total of 15 dead, and about 400 injured.

Saturday night's dead included two female soldiers and two Scots Guards, all aged 17 or 18.

Home Secretary Roy Jenkins broke off his election campaigning Sunday to visit the scene of the bloody which he later described as "senseless, criminal ... a perversion of human reason."

Ho-hum, Another Parade

With a resigned yawn, Sparky, the CFB Trenton firehall mascot took part in his eighth annual Fire Prevention Week opening day parade from Middleton Park, Sunday. The 10-year-old Dalmation has his helmet adjusted by Cpl. Tim Olohan before the driver followed trucks from the Sidney and Trenton fire departments along the parade route. More than 200 participated in the event.

British Leaders Chase Many Undecided Voters

LONDON (CP) — With less than three days to go before Thursday's election, Britain's three major parties are concentrating on the large number of voters reported by some pollsters to be undecided.

The governing Labor party, the Conservatives and Jeremy Thorpe's Liberals all are worried over the impact nationalist movements in Scotland and Wales will have on their respective political future.

The Liberals, fearing they may have become unduly involved in sterile mudslinging they claim is typical of Labor-Conservative duels, are described as wanting to prove that they stand outside this two-way pattern of antagonism and therefore, provide hope for building a new and viaorous party system.

In his key week Liberal leader Thorpe wrote Prime Minister Harold Wilson and Tory chief Edward Heath, asking for a three-way television debate before election day on Britain's current economic crisis.

The reply from both was negative, with Wilson saying that "the issues before the nation are too grave and too complex to be presented to the people in the form of televised argument."

Heath emerged from the weekend with troubles of his own following another attack on his leadership by rebel Tory Enoch Powell, running this time for the United Ulster Unionists in the Northern Ireland riding of South Down.

Powell praised the Labor party for its policy of a possible referendum on continued British membership in the European Common Market and attacked the present Tory leadership's record on inflation.

The leadership had been "the chief author of the present wave of inflation," said Powell in a reference to the 1970-74 Tory government from which he was excluded by Heath.

To Thorpe's idea of a TV debate, Heath replied that he would be ready to accept only "if such a discussion were to be generally acceptable."

Redskins Blame Reds

TORONTO (CP) — The national director of the American Indian Movement (AIM) in Canada has blamed Marxist-Leninists and Maoist Communists for the violent clash on Parliament Hill last Monday.

Edward Burnside said the Indians of the Native People's Caravan trying to present grievances to Parliament were caught between the RCMP riot squad and Maoists who were leading the protest.

He told a news conference that the non-Indian Marxist-Leninists are using Indian causes for their own purposes.

"We don't need them . . . and we don't want them," he said.

New School Ceilings Pose Strike Threat

TORONTO (CP) — Jim Forster, president of the Ontario Secondary School Teachers' Federation, says a teacher strike is a possibility in some areas of the province as a result of the provincial government's decision Friday to raise school board spending ceilings by 13 per cent.

He issued the strike warning Saturday after a meeting with provincial federation presidents and negotiators.

The 13-per-cent increase was announced Friday by Education Minister Thomas Wells.

Mr. Forster said the increase provides teachers with, at most, a chance to catch up with last year's inflation but no assurance that further inflation will not wipe out the increase "before the ink is dried on the new regulations."

"Under these circumstances, teachers are left with no alternative other than to bargain strongly to protect their economic position," he said. "And that could include strike if boards in some areas refuse to pierce ceilings."

The basic ceiling for an elementary pupil will go up by $132 to $2,532 and for secondary students, it will increase by $260 to $1,281.

NEW YORK (AP) — Federal and local law-enforcement officials in the United States announced Sunday the arrest over the weekend of 17 persons and seizure of nearly $26 million worth of narcotics and cash.

In an unusual Sunday news conference, two U.S. attorneys, two district attorneys and four other officials announced the seizures, arrest and the indictment over a period of 18 months of a total 150 persons, most of them Colombian nationals.

Bronx District Attorney Mario Merola said more than 900 pounds of cocaine, 3,300 pounds of marijuana and $500,000 in cash had been seized. He placed the street value of the cocaine at $25 million and that of the marijuana at $18,500.

U.S. Ships Kept Bombs

TAKYO (Reuter) — A political uproar broke today over Israeli charges that Japanese United States admiral that U.S. naval vessels carried nuclear weapons while visiting Japanese ports.

Government sources gave the testimony may sour the forthcoming visit to Japan of President Ford and lead to anti-American demonstrations.

Premier Takuei Tanaka summoned his aides today and session of foreign ministry officials met to discuss possible demonstrations by political opposition and left-wing organizations.

Retired admiral Gene Lacroque, former commander of the U.S. 7th Fleet's flagship, told a congressional subcommittee in Washington last month that U.S. ships did not unload their nuclear weapons before visiting Japanese ports.

Under the security treaty, the U.S. must hold consultations with the Japanese government before bringing nuclear weapons into the country.

Kissinger Recipient Of $50,000 'Gift'

WASHINGTON (AP) — No impropriety was involved in cash gifts given by Vice President designate Nelson Rockefeller to former associates, made as aide in the former New York governor.

The aide, Hugh Morrow, confirmed Rockefeller gave $50,000 to State Secretary Henry Kissinger, cancelled as $86,000 loan to former New York Republican chairman Judson Morhouse and one of an unspecified amount to William Rosas, a former Rockefeller aide.

Reports of the gifts were included in federal gift tax returns made available to the Senate rules committee and to the House of Representatives Judiciary committee, which is about to hold hearings on the Rockefeller nomination.

Morrow said Rockefeller loaned Morhouse $100,000 in September, 1960, at a time when the New York state Republican party did not pay its chairman a salary.

Morrow said Rockefeller made the $49,000 gift to Kissinger in 1969 when Kissinger resigned as a foreign policy adviser to Rockefeller to join the Nixon administration.

Rockefeller paid gift taxes on the Kissinger gift as did Kissinger, Morrow said. Rockefeller also paid gift taxes on the cancelled loan to Morhouse, he said.

'74 Team 'Inferior'
Eagleson Gets into Hockey Act

MOSCOW (CP) — If Alan Eagleson has his way the next Team Canada - Russia hockey series will be played using the best of North American hockey professionals, not just those from one league.

Eagleson, executive director of the National Hockey League Players Association, made a proposal today to Russian hockey officials for another series with some games played perhaps as early as December.

Eagleson said that the next Team Canada would include players from both the NHL and the World Hockey Association. It was a WHA team that lost the series which ended Sunday with one win, four losses and three ties in eight games.

The Toronto lawyer said the players will decide when and if another series is played.

The NHL players had instructed him to negotiate another series with the Russian national team.

Eagleson said the team that had been defeated by the Russians was an inferior product and it was doubtful whether five of them could make an all-star team chosen from North American pros.

Included in the ground rules for another series were:

—A club from the Soviet first division visits NHL teams in December with return games in Moscow in January.

—An NHL team visits Russia for four games next September.

—The Soviet league champions meet the 1975 Stanley Cup winners with four games in North America next May and four in Russia in September.

—Toronto stages the first world cup of hockey in January, 1976, with Canada, Russia, Czechoslovakia, Sweden, the United States and Finland taking part.

Eagleson also said that games in North America would be governed by NHL rules while games in Europe would be under international rules. Referees clinics would be continued.

CAS Budget Cuts Mean Home's End

Budgets cuts are responsible for the closing of the Children's Aid Society treatment home for children with severe behavioral problems, says CAS Director Bruce Kerr.

Five child care workers who have comprised the staff have been released, leaving the society $21,000 for the last four months of 1974.

The society was told this summer by the provincial ministry of community and social services that it must reduce its spending by $34,000. By negotiation, the society and the ministry came to an agreement to cut the budget by only $21,000.

"For a number of years, we had many disturbed children in our care," Mr. Kerr says. "But recently the number has decreased and we just don't need the kind of specialized care the treatment-oriented residence provided.

"There are various facilities now, both public and private, to which we can refer serious-ly disturbed children, with the provincial government paying the total cost of treatment."

Any organization should provide its services when needed," say Allan Brunson chairman of the CAS board. "But when the needs are be-hind us by other services in the community, the original service should be phased out."

Mr. Kerr credits the public health unit, the mental health clinic at the Belleville General Hospital and better school facilities with providing the care needed by disturbed children.

The treatment home on Highland Ave. now will be used as a group home for children in the care of the society. Named the Della Potter Residence in honor of Miss Potter who worked 39 years for the society, it is run by a married couple who serve as home parents for children ranging in age from eight to fifteen.

"The need for a larger staff at the residence has disappeared," says Mr. Kerr.

"Out of the five child care workers who were employed there, only one, Diane Poirier, is not working now, besides Mizz Potter who was due to retire. The others are employed either here or with the foster service."

In addition to the group home on Highland Ave., the society runs a foster care residence for children on Ann St., also managed by a married couple.

Gas War Possible

Popularity of self-serve gasoline outlets in the city has made a price war a distinct possibility in the near future, according to more than one service station operator.

Recent price cuts have been in increments of a penny-a-gallon from self-serve stations. The Intelligencer was told, but there may be more."

"There is an over-availability of gas," one employee suggested that we drop the price. We didn't have to, but we need the gallonage," one dealer said.

"It's a crazy situation. If the self-serve stations cut their price again — and with their lower overhead, they could — we may have to retaliate to keep going."

Another possibility, said one dealer, is that prices will become level and both within a narrow range as dealers try to maintain their profit margins as well as volume.

Exhibits, Lectures Part Of Fire Prevention Week

Today marks the start of Fire Prevention Week throughout Canada.

The city's fire department will be in evidence this week in public places and in schools trying to make everyone more conscious of fire, the harm it can do and ways of preventing it.

In 1973, the Belleville fire department answered 265 calls with fire loss amounting to a total of $76,000.

Fire Chief Leo Culhane said 85 per cent of all fires are due mainly to carelessness.

"We tell people to check and check to see that all cigarette butts are out. That accounts for a lot of fires."

Chief Culhane said that this year's fire record was a little up over the same period last year due mainly to a few big fires. Including the Electronic Controls Ltd. and at Shane Fashion Boutique downtown.

Starting today and running to the end of the week, the city's fire department will have a booth at the Quinte Mall. On display will be first aid kits, fire extinguishers, fire prevention literature, and Don Foster's model fire engine.

Paul Stephenson, co-ordinator of fire prevention week here, said firefighters will also be selling tickets for a $200 bond with money raised going to help crippled children.

As part of fire prevention week, firefighters will be visiting local schools including kindergarten class at Queen Victoria School.

Fire drills were held in the schools last week and a poster contest is underway with the deadline for entries at the end of the month.

Alarm Box

Belleville firefighters responded to the following call for assistance in the weekend period ending 8 a.m. Monday.

Sunday, Oct. 6, 11:38 a.m., Chesterfield Ave. & St. Paul St. chesterfield lost, smoke damage.

A bright fall day helped swell crowds at the popular annual event.

Old-timer Predicts Short, Mild Winter

By LENNY WILLIAMSON
Staff Reporter

According to the caterpillar, every time a fuzzy, dull red and a long, cold spring, with a short, mild winter in between.

The black and orange woolly caterpillar didn't tell us Hoagan Rush did

Mr Rush, who turns 84 later this month, has been watching the caterpillar most of his life. He doesn't put much faith in the insect, but with the routine of a lifetime, he always makes his observations.

"If most of the black on the caterpillar is toward the head, the heavy part of the winter will come first," he says. "If it's toward the back, the heavy part will be toward spring. This year the caterpillar has quite a stretch of black toward the head and toward the back with a thin stretch of orange in between. That's the forecast, according to the caterpillar."

But Mr. Rush, who farmed in the Tweed area all his life, has his own private, personal weather indicator.

"I depend on the horse, how he thickens his coat," he says. "If he thickens his coat early in October, look out, the winter will be tough."

After almost 84 years of living close to nature, signs and portents don't interest Mr. Rush much.

Told that the Canada geese are flying south two weeks earlier than usual this year, he sniffed.

"I've heard the geese going south, but sometimes that's not a true picture," he said. "They've had a cold streak where they summered, and just moved out for a while.

"Wild ducks fly south for the last day of September until November. They just don't agree. They have problems. Like the crows I watched one Thanksgiving. The crows held a pow-wow, hundreds of them, and finally split into two groups. After a lot of bickering, one group left. But in a few days, as the bluffers they are, they came back by nightfall. Late in October they held another convention in the same place and took off together.

Mr. Rush says he puts his faith in weather forecasts prepared by meteorologists.

"Of course the forecasts are more accurate," he says. "We

SWORD Students Leave Valuable Work Behind

By CASH MAHAFFY
Staff Reporter

One hundred and thirty-nine students who helped the Ontario ministry of natural resources in eastern Ontario through its busiest season of summer have gone back to school with money for books, tuition or room and board.

Behind them they left thousands of dollars worth of new data on fish populations, lakes, streams, forest projects, wildlife management; much-needed maps, diagrams and artwork for master plans, brochures and publications, new nature trails, displays for schoolchildren and adults, literature and research into local geology, history, geography, plant and animal life and one hundred square miles of improved beaches, forest plantations, park and recreation areas, roadsides, lakes and streams.

The young workers were employed under SWORD (Students Working on Resource Development), a provincial summer work program now in its fourth year.

One of the most interesting SWORD projects centred around the Glenora Fisheries Station in Prince Edward County. Those working on the International Field Year for the Great Lakes had the slow, painstaking job of identifying and counting specimens in samples taken from the thousands of thousands of fish of various species caught in Lake Ontario. The skills learned and applied in the job involved microscopy, plankton sub-sampling and counting, identification of a broad range of aquatic creatures and fish.

The Project Quinte study of the effects of installing tertiary treatment facilities in sewage plants around the Bay of Quinte involved four SWORD students. The young people worked aboard the Glenora station's research boat Namegosh collecting and analyzing water samples and collecting fish with trawls and experimental gill nets.

Laboratory work included counting, measuring and dissecting specimens to determine sex and feeding habits, plus study of fish stomach contents.

Students in the Tweed district, which takes in large parts of Hastings, Frontenac and Lennox and Addington counties, collected garbage, maintained campsites, picnic sites and ministry boat launching areas. They also conducted a beach cleaning and poison ivy control program.

One worker, at Bon Echo provincial park collected data for a day-use survey of park visitors manned the entrance gate and assisted naturalists on the park, canoe routes and hiking trails. She also helped the park naturalist with interpretive programs to help visitor understand and appreciate the area, with its rough, Laurentian shield landscape, steep cliffs and Indian pictographs painted on rocks near the water's edge.

Fish and wildlife student workers gathered information from anglers on two lakes near Perma to determine fish populations, conducted trap and angling pressure on the rare-fied Eel Lake population. Other students worked at the White Lake fish culture station, manned typewriters at the district office and worked with members in the area on forest and timber stands.

One of the largest groups of SWORD students in Eastern Ontario worked on the forestry's Napanee District office. Nine students cleaned up litter and shred from the beaches at Outlet and Prinyer's Cove conservation areas, pruned and thinned trees and managed hand-planting crews. Al Frasquilo, two students mapped water and fish resources and other a history student, assembled data on the Bay of Quinte.

The city's fire department will be in evidence this week in public places and in schools trying to make everyone more conscious of fire, the harm it can do and ways of preventing it.

In 1973, the Belleville fire department answered 265 calls with fire loss amounting to a total of $76,000.

Fire Chief Leo Culhane said 85 per cent of all fires are due mainly to carelessness.

"We tell people to check and check to see that all cigarette butts are out. That accounts for a lot of fires."

Chief Culhane said that this year's fire record was a little up over the same period last year due mainly to a few big fires. Including the Electronic Controls Ltd. and at Shane Fashion Boutique downtown.

Starting today and running to the end of the week, the city's fire department will have a booth at the Quinte Mall. On display will be first aid kits, fire extinguishers,

Stake In Housing

Big business has a vested interest in the price of housing in Canada.

That was the gist of a private conversation with Canadian Procter and Gamble president George Williams, in town for a reception to celebrate the location in Belleville of the firm's fifth Canadian plant.

As Mr. Williams sees it, the calibre of executives companies can attract is directly related to the housing situation.

"We hire the brain all our own managerial personnel. But take a young fellow who gets out of university with his B.A. and comes to work with us," Mr. Williams explained. "At current mortgage rates, he'd be paying about one-third of his net salary for a new home.

"This country has to be one of the few in the civilized world where mortgage payments are not tax deductible. They are in Great Britain and they are in the United States.

"We breathe a sigh of relief when we see a young man sign a mortgage. It's a sure sign he's going to stay with us. But it's getting harder for young men to do that these days."

Another sign of changing times was revealed in Mr. Williams' luncheon address.

Pampers disposable diapers, the product to be manufactured at the new Belleville plant, was one example of Procter and Gamble's rapid diversification.

One-third of Procter and Gamble's $160 million in sales last year was in products not even developed by the firm by 1960, Mr. Williams noted.

It is indeed a good omen for city development that the newest addition to our industrial community has such dynamic direction.

Winter On Way

If there was any doubt in eastern Ontario that those predictions of a long, cold winter were wrong, they were dispelled this week.

Kingston residents found themselves slogging through two and a half inches of snow on October's second day, a week after most western Ontario produce growers saw frost feel their crops a crippling blow.

CFB Trenton monitored a record Oct. 2 low of 28 degrees Wednesday, but many Quinte vegetable and fruit crops had been harvested in anticipation of a shortened growing season.

If this winter lives up to its early promise, some city hockey leagues may consider scheduling some games for the harbor.

Door-to-door

This year's United Way campaign is concentrating on the door-to-door canvass approach.

It is a community like Belleville, where the United Community Services organization has more than its share of critics, the accent on door-knocking is probably a wise approach.

People are always looking for reasons not to give their money away, and its hardier to think of them when the request is made in person.

Silent Majority

Would you believe that this is a civic election year?

Nobody's saying their hat is on their head, let alone in the election ring, with official declaration of candidacy a month away.

Not only have there been no new faces on the municipal political horizon — the old ones are pretty quiet about the whole affair. Maybe they're hoping if nobody mentions an election, Dec. 2 will just slip past and they'll all be acclaimed before the public knows what happened.

Members of the present council were polled to give their city priorities for the next few years.

Only one — Alderman Joe Cox — put anything down on paper.

We've heard about the silent majority, but never in government!

Timing Poses Problem

Tories as Worried about Leadership as Opposition Role

By RICHARD JACKSON

OTTAWA — Parliament's barely back in business and it becomes immediately apparent the Conservatives are as much concerned with their leadership problem as with the responsibilities of Opposition.

The job off scrutinizing the policies and performance of the majority Trudeau government is there and now.

It is a job, if well done, that could push the Conservatives in selling themselves in the next election, not just as a credible, but the preferable alternative to the Liberals.

The job of selecting the new leader lies sometime in the indefinite two-year-future, with Robert Stanfield having said only that he will retire before the fall of 1976.

And there is just where the Conservatives get themselves into their bind.

On the timing.

Talk to the Tories, and you at once find them split 1 into three groups.

There are the Westerners-lit-a-bit-Easterners, mostly from Ontario — and they, too, have some support in the Maritimes, if none in the West — who want to wait.

They contend that a hurry-up action would be a mistake as there yet is no inevitable Stanfield successor and no undeniable claim on the leadership in sight.

They insist that the party's "Man Who Can," when he emerges in the next two years, must command himself as the obvious leader, not only of the party, but the public.

The Westerners-lit-a-bury are accusing these go-slow Easterners of trying to stall the new leader's emergence, hoping to give themselves time for grooming and maneuvering into preferred position at the convention the choice of the Toronto Tory backrooomers and Conservative headquarters.

It is, as always, the parliamentary caucus against the organizations.

And what bothers the Westerners is that always except the one time with John Diefenbaker — the Eastern smoothies of the organization have outslickered them.

In the middle, as ever, is Robert Stanfield.

The choice of timing is his — unless he is pushed, hurried and pressured out before he decides it is time to go.

His friends say he has not stuck it out these last not-always-pleasant eight years only reputable, but self-made.

Unfortunately for a per cent who don't, do up to 30 per cent of the business. There's never a little bankruptcy.

Mr. Dres has been working all summer with the industry on proposed legislation to govern it. He wants three things incorporated in it:

—An association uniting travel agents, tour operators and airlines. Members will pay into a fund, in proportion to their share of the travel market. The money will go to cover losses when a member company or agent fails;

—A system of registering all agents and tour operators in the Province;

—The requirement that a client's cheque for his flight is kept in a trust fund until the flight successfully takes place. An agent would only be able to use that part of the money which is his commission.

The legislative package has the blessing of both Dres Dan't far off the mark when he says: "It's the toughest legislation in any province." There is not only type that will get the travel industry out of the dilemma in which it now finds itself.

The situation, when it now exists, is like a time bomb ticking away. Unscrupulous agents and operators are not a large, but really large group, as Mr. Dres says, yet they manage to be the dustry's image greater by dwarfing the public out of hundreds of thousands of dollars annually.

Mr. Dres thinks he has found a solution to the legal problem of what to do about tour operators, who work out of other provinces and the United States, selling to the public. Incorporated by Ontario law, the Ontario courts have power to which they can be controlled. Mr. Dres hopes to pass the same legislation responsible if the tour fails to take place. The Government's share of the money is only $1 million. It will be up for first call by the Province.

The Government has told the Provincial travel world to get its house in order — without delay. The latter is trying to bring its various factions together to make sure tourists don't lose their money when travel firms go broke. The industry is now looking for an association uniting all travel agents, tour operators and airlines. It isn't yet up to the time of the bill's first reading, but the industry will be on hand to take a look at the legislation - then it can incorporate the Government's ideas into association bylaws.

Tour operators reportedly oppose the trust fund idea. The Government says it is necessary to booking planes, hotel and other facilities. Many travel agents want access to the funds to pay for day to day operations. Most travel agents would agree the planning fares received in trust funds. Nevertheless, the "total feeling" of the American Society of Travel Agents (ASTA) - according to Robert Auld, its executive director - reflects the wishes of the tour operators and the business they do with agents.

Hens Come Home to Roost As House Investigates Eggs

By VINCENT EGAN
Business and Consumer Affairs Analyst
Thomson News Service

A Commons committee to investigate egg marketing that could be the undoing NHL President Clarence Campbell to see whether eggs will be more or less expensive.

It was the federal government that engineered the creation of the egg monopoly marketing system in 1972.

In doing so, it blithely ignored that part of the British North America Act that is supposed to guarantee free interprovincial trade.

It also ignored an old court ruling disallowing the 1934 legislation to establish a Dominion Marketing Board—which would have resembled today's Canadian Egg Marketing Agency.

Ottawa's decision to act unconstitutionally seems to have been based on familiar political grounds. The Liberal party is strong in Quebec. That province wanted to create its own egg industry, and it therefore needed help in keeping out Ontario and Manitoba eggs (cheaper because of more efficient production).

Today, Quebec has its egg industry, Quebec consumers—as well as shoppers in all other provinces—are paying higher prices and eating fewer eggs than before, and the egg monopoly agency has an unwanted supply of eggs. Boy, does it have eggs!

This is by no means the first time that politicians and producers have come together to sanction monopolies and administer prices, all in the name of "orderly marketing."

That sacred phrase seems to mean, in this case, that egg prices can be kept high when producer costs are low, and higher when producer costs rise.

But never has the anti-consumer combination been so spectacularly insensitive in its timing and so clumsy in carrying out its schemes.

Even with repeated telling, Mr. Campbell, 53, will believe—a 54-per-cent increase in egg prices since last June in the agency's first year of operation, a 10-per-cent decline in per-capita consumption, eggs being shipped — from Newfoundland to British Columbia, such sloppy storage that at least 28 million eggs rot while an Austrian order to buy 30 million is spurned.

He will not at a time when food is in short supply throughout the world, that government economists say that food production will never again be adequate for the growing world population.

In setting up a parliamentary committee to inquire into egg marketing, the government is using a tactic beloved means of defusing an explosive situation.

Finally, Ottawa is buying too high a price to maintain inefficient egg producers, to the local level and at inefficient bureaucracy at the provincial and federal levels.

But the voice of millions of consumers who have failed to be heard over the powerful voices of the egg industry and its "popular" spokesmen.

Provincial Role Unclear In National Development

TORONTO — Treasurer John

Dial-a-bus Gaining Popularity

Kitchener-Waterloo Record

A dial-a bus operation has now been in service in Stratford for two years. It has had a longer time of lasing than the Cambridge dial-a-bus service which is the former began in May. Hespeler section and to the former Preston section in June.

The Cambridge and Stratford operations are not exactly comparable, because of differences in timing.

In Stratford patrons can telephone for a bus pick-up from 8 a.m. to midnight. The intent of the service is to provide public transit during the evening hours when there is less demand for big buses and to get people to work or to school.

In Cambridge there is service during daytime hours. One reason is that there is need for some kind of public transit for high-school students who live in the Hespeler section and attend schools in the more central parts of Cambridge. In either Stratford or Cambridge the principle is the same: Minibuses run on routes tailored to the needs of the customers who telephone for a pick-up.

The amount of business done by the dial-a-bus system was disappointingly small when it was first started in Stratford in 1972. After a second year, the picture is brighter.General Manager D.M.Seath of the Public Utility Commission, which runs the service, says business is up 40 per-cent from last year, with about 200 people using the service each evening.

The increase may simply be because the public is getting more familiar with what is available. It may be at least partly because it is getting more expensive to drive a private automobile on in-city trips.

White had a tough assignment on the other day.

The treasurer had to speak to a Rotary club in St. John's, Nfld., and either chose, or was given, the subject: "The provincial role in national economic development."

For the sake of our continuing faith in Mr. White let it be hoped that the subject was given—or he would seem certain that those who heard him are still wondering just what "the provincial role in national economic development" may be.

For the treasurer quite definitely failed to say just what that role was or might be.

He rang the tocsin once again for a conference and "a national strategy based partly on federal-provincial consultation and accord."

But once again, as so many other of our Ontario government spokesmen have in the past, he gave no detail at just what this "accord" should be over.

And failing this the impression had to be left, as it has been left before, that the main reason the provinces want consultation on finances is to puff up their dignity a bit.

With the provincial role in the national picture aside, Mr. White then turned to what the provinces could do for each other, and particularly what Ontario might do.

First of all he volunteered, it might be able to peddle Newfoundland a piece of Ontario's Urban Development Transportation Corporation, which Alberta had just invested in.

He also offered (to an audience in this very proud island) that the province would be glad to lend it some advice in such fields as regional development and land-use planning.

And finally, he said that Ontario "strongly supported" the expansion of Canada's Indus trial base "into the provinces both eastward through to Newfoundland, and to the west as the case may be."

He added that this want entirely altruistic as "we're going to cope with more growth in central Ontario than we can easily absorb."

And he made this pressing statement just minutes after saying he hoped the recent provincial conference had destroyed "the familiar old Canadian myth: the image of Ontario as a fat cat, purring smugly and contentedly over her own growth and prosperity while less fortunate provinces fend for themselves."

Whatever the conference may have done to destroy the myth, one would say Mr. White was doing a fair job of building it back.

Housing Problem For Students

Montreal Gazette

Student housing is a problem at most universities, a serious problem at many and little short of a crisis at universities with downtown campuses in big metropolitan areas, such as McGill,UQAM and Concordia in Montreal. Efforts are now exploded in the manner of migrant workers as the development suggested would mean that a proportion of the lodging formerly available to them by the university area with office buildings, hotels and luxury housing beyond their financial reach.

In Montreal the speed of the building boom after several years of inactivity seems to have caught everyone off guard — students as gentlemen, the university, administrative and governmental departments that should be consulted. Only a few years ago universities, including McGill, were encouraging students to build new residences because of lack of demand. Students preferred the downtown sector, even with inferior lodging, because of the ease of access to accommodation too bleak, superannuated institutional and expensive.

The facts of the current crisis brought out in a report by Luana Parker indicate that there can be no simple solution of intervention by the universities, in conjunction with local and higher levels of government.A comprehensive program of housing to accommodate younger and older students, and probably junior teaching staff as well, the married and the single, those with children and those without, is required.

The housing shortage and exorbitant rents will serve to make universities the preserve of the children of the wealthy, if students are forced to live far from access to university facilities, the quality of their education and of university life will deteriorate.

Universities are by their nature places where people should come together from many different regions to take advantage of the central pool of excellence in teaching, library, research and laboratory facilities, the quality of their facilities that universities provide. Those who come from beyond easy commuting distance are victimized, and the universities themselves disabled, by the shockingly inadequate attention which has been given to student housing.

Furniture Dealer Quits Due to Changing Times

FRANKFORD — After almost 30 years in the furniture business here Raymond Rowe is "so frustrated" he is throwing in the towel.

He says he can "no longer fight poor workmanship" and "impossible deliveries" of up to a year.

Recently, Mr. Rowe said he unpacked "four bottles to find one that was without warped doors or other defects". He paid 98 freight to have a chair which was cracked in four places shipped to him. He had to pay to ship it back, and will have to pay when it or its replacement arrives. Then he said he has "to try to remember to go through all his bills and charge them back to the furniture manufacturers."

A former vice-chairman of the Hastings Board of Education, Mr. Rowe says as a member he is paid $2,400 a year, and that "when you are in a certain income tax bracket it is not worth it."

He says he sits on three or four committee meetings a month, attends two regular board meetings a month, spends one day a month visiting schools, is involved in school night programs and is the building committee chairman which entails studying developmental sites.

At 56 years of age, Mr. Rowe says he might wind up working for someone else. He cannot afford to retire so young, and if he is not self-employed, the time which must be devoted for the board of education simply will not be available. His business and public life are up in the air at this time.

"Frustrations of a small businessman are many," Mr. Rowe says. "There is no quality control, and poor workmanship from many companies. You almost require a large enough business to have a repair and refinishing person on staff."

Mr. Rowe says that his business was built on special orders, but these now take from six months to a year for delivery and customers will not wait that long so they go to dealers who can afford large inventories and the 15 per cent interest rates to carry furniture for a long time until it is sold.

He said that freight rates are out of sight, and that to try to remain competitive, absorbed some of the costs. Larger stores use their own trucks to make dropoffs to chain outlets, keeping costs down, he pointed out.

Mr. Rowe says "customer loyalty is a thing of the past. I can see the handwriting on the wall ... places such as Frankford and Stirling are going to become the bedrooms for Belleville and Trenton, considering the vast numbers of village residents observed shopping in the larger communities."

Mr. Rowe says he has been watching Frankford's business community slowly fade away. The first Eaks shoe store in Canada once shared the other half of his furniture store, now the company has no outlet there. A hardware store and a men's wear store have disappeared and even the local pool room is an on again, off again affair.

As to the future of his business premises, there are alternatives. If no one buys it when he closed on or about Nov. 1, he may turn it into apartments. He says there is a great demand for accommodations in the area.

42 Rifles Taken In Weekend Theft

TRENTON — Thieves broke into the Viking Sports Centre just west of here on Highway 2 and made off with 42 rifles and shotguns valued at an estimated $7,000 early Sunday morning.

Brighton provincial police said the break-in was discovered by store owner Doreen Savery Sunday.

Thieves broke into the store by removing the outside outlet of a compressor unit on the north side of the building, facing away from the highway.

The store owner said today the thieves cleaned out her entire stock of guns except for six .22 calibre rifles. She estimated the loss at $7,000.

Police said they are continuing their investigation today, following the completion of work at the store Sunday by the OPP identification unit from Peterborough.

PICTON — A 1966 Pontiac convertable, owned by James Garfield Allen, 30 of RR 9 Picton was extensively damaged by fire early Saturday morning about two miles east of Picton on County Rd. 8.

Picton OPP said that cause of the fire was due to an overheated engine.

Scouts Pick Apples

AMELIASBURGH — Land O'Lakes First, Second Troop Saturday exercised the scout motto of doing a good deed every day.

Nine scouts and cubs and their scoutmaster helped out with the apple harvest in the orchard of Haviland Hubbs, RR 1, Carrying Place.

Arnold Fibeir of Cheyne, troop scoutmaster, has usually bought about 100 bushels of apples to sell in this Cheyne region. The troop sells them at a profit of about $1 a bushel and usually realizes $100 a year from the project.

But the price of apples by the bushel was so high this year that the troop decided to pick its own. The scouts got their apples at a price they could afford, and Mr. Hubbs got help getting his crop in.

Apples are currently selling at $6 to $6.75 a bushel according to Toronto market quotations. The pick your own variety in Prince Edward County costs about $4 a bushel. Most growers are charging about 10 cents a pound, and a bushel of McIntosh weighs about 42 pounds.

BIG ISLAND (Staff) — Laying of the culvert at the Big Island causeway is scheduled for early Tuesday morning, says Prince Edward County Engineer, Donald Clark.

The work will begin at 7 a.m. at which time the causeway will be closed to all traffic until completion. The huge culvert, weighing 10 tons, measures 15 feet wide by 70 feet long and is nine feet in height.

Good Deed Times Nine

Nine Scouts—and Cubs from the Land o' Lakes Troop, Cheyne, pitched in to help out Ameliasburgh apple grower Haviland Hubbs with his apple harvest, Saturday. Retired Teacher Honored For World War Effort

TRENTON — Trenton Legion Branch 119 will be holding a dinner Saturday, Nov. 2 to honor one of Trenton High School's most popular teachers, Hazel Farley, now 84.

Miss Farley is the first woman to become an honorary member of a Canadian Legion branch.

The life membership came in recognition of her work for Canadian soldiers fighting in Europe during the Second World War.

During a career at Trenton's high school that spanned an estimated 37 years, Miss Farley, who retired in 1967 wrote letters and sent parcels to all European theatre soldiers from Trenton.

John Garrett former principal said Sunday, she knitted "innumerable pairs of socks and sent them every week through the Second World War to every soldier from Trenton."

The 250 seats available for the Nov. 2 dinner are expected to be filled shortly after Oct. 15 when the $5-a-plate tickets will become available to the general public. Over 85 invitations have gone out to her family; heads of town service clubs, and town officials.

Trenton High School teachers who taught during the years Miss Farley was head of the French department and co-ordinator of drama productions, have also been invited.

Tickets are available from the Branch 119 manager.

During the dinner, a former student of Miss Farley's and now Quinte Emergency Measures Organization (2MO) co-ordinator Angus Duffy will act as the main speaker.

If you're a homeowner, the recent dramatic increases in housing values have probably been one of your few consolations in these times of spiraling inflation.
But this gain could go up in smoke if your home were destroyed by a fire.
Sure, you have insurance. But does your insurance reflect the tremendous rise in home construction cost?
That's what you'd be faced with if you had to rebuild your home. You might be in for a shock. Home construction costs -- labour and materials combined -- have risen 40.0 per cent in Ontario since early 1971.
The best way to protect the investment your home represents is to get together with your insurance agent or broker and discuss your insurance. You owe it to your peace of mind.
The Insurance Bureau of Canada also has two pamphlets which can help you protect the investment in your home. "Has Your Home Outgrown Your Home Insurance" outlines some of the things you should think about when you are reviewing your home insurance to meet current values.
"Sixty Ways to Prevent Fire in your Home" details some of the common fire hazards around the home. You can use it as a checklist to make sure that your home is as safe as possible from fire.

Apartments-$4,000

TOKYO (CP) — Can you believe paying $4,000 a month for an apartment, or $46 a pound for steak?

Eye-popping prices like these bring home with a bang what it means to live in the most expensive city in the world.

North Americans, who thought they were caught in the price squeeze at home, get a shocking new perspective in Tokyo.

The $4,000 rent was paid by a Canadian businessman when he moved here recently with his family. It gave him a well-equipped, centrally-located three-bedroom apartment, but the price was 18 times more than in most Canadian cities.

Other rents are lower, but two-and three-bedroom apartments commonly cost $1,500 to $2,000. (Almost nothing, so unless how meagre, rents for less than $800.)

Then there is the super-market. The $46-a-pound steak was spotted by a Canadian embassy employee.

Cheaper beef cuts sell for far less but Japanese regularly pay $6 to $18 a pound for rump or stewing beef. A half-pound tin of coffee costs about $10 and oranges sell for $2.50 to $3 a pound.

A bottle of good-quality imported scotch whisky can cost $40 or more and domestic sells for about $1.25 a gallon.

Japanese cars, traditionally among the cheapest in the world, are beyond the reach of many Japanese workers and an imported Ford Mustang can cost up to $10,000.

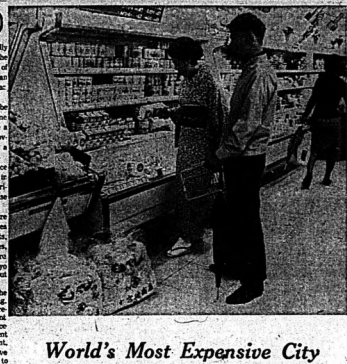
For visitors, prices can be deliciously surprising. One businessman paid $180 to take a client to dinner. The bill covered two steak dinners and a bottle of wine.

The Japanese consumer-price index jumped 23 per cent in 1973, the highest in the industrial world, and the increase may be higher this year.

But some prices do compare with North America. Taxi fares start at 170 yen, about 60 cents, and public transportation fees, despite major increases, are lower than in Canada. A Tokyo subway ride costs 50 yen, about 17 cents.

Another consolation is the Japanese resistance to tipping by waiters and attendants of any type. But many restaurant bills include 10-per-cent service charge and a further 10-per-cent tax imposed by the government.

In most Tokyo bars attractive Japanese "hostesses" flutter to the customer's side when he orders a drink and the bill might run to $20. Stay for entertainment and it can be the best expensive accounts.



World's Most Expensive City

A Japanese couple checks the prices on goods in a supermarket in Tokyo, the most expensive city in the world. The Japanese consumer price index jumped 23 per cent in 1973. This caused such eye-poping prices as $10 for a half-pound tin of coffee, up to $3 a pound for oranges and, as one Canadian embassy employee reported seeing, steak at $46 a pound. (CP Photo)

Father Ko the Matchmaker Aids Lonely Korean Immigrants

TORONTO (CP) — Rev. Matthew Ko, minister at a church in the Korean Roman Catholic community here, has married 170 of about 230 couples he personally introduced since his arrival in Canada in 1970.

"I guess I'm the happy matchmaker," said Father Ko, a Korean who was told to arrange a date write to him. He matches letters and sets up a meeting.

His church and the Korean Community and Social Centre provide meeting places for newcomers.

Father Ko, who estimates there are 8,000 Koreans in Toronto, said "they feel frustrated and very lonesome in their first two years in Canada."

"Life in a new country is very busy. It's very hard to meet each other."

Each year he arranges four dances, two picnics, a fishing contest and other social events.

Father Ko, 45 has been soldier, social worker, and author as well as priest and matchmaker since his escape from his North Korean home in 1945.

He was ordained in Paris in 1963.

McGibbon Criticizes Industry: Board Room Still Male Preserve

OTTAWA (CP) — Lt.-Gov. Pauline McGibbon of Ontario told a packed Women's Canadian Club luncheon Tuesday that she deplores the failure of most companies to appoint women to their boards.

She said that of 139 Canadian manufacturing firms surveyed recently, only 79 bothered to reply; and of 947 directors, only three were women.

Dr. McGibbon said this deplorable situation likely reflects the picture in senior management of Canadian industry.

"The board room remains largely an exclusive men's preserve in Canada."

She said she did not want women to be appointed to token directorships, but many Canadian women are fully qualified to become corporate directors.

However, despite this particular lack of progress, she felt that "a generation of women imbued with a new confidence is coming of age" and that the picture should improve.

Dr. McGibbon suggested that the militant factions of the women's liberation movement is fading because it has succeeded in doing what it set out to do—"draw attention to a multitude of inequities." It now was time for the moderate activists such as herself to continue striving for equality for women.

Although she did not criticize governments directly for lack of action in this field, she observed that they "take time to move" and that changes "are not occurring as fast as you or I would like."

Turning to women who prefer to "carve out a domestic career," she urged professional women not to sneer at housewives.

"They should not be damned for doing it," she said, because their contribution is as vital in many ways as the professionals' contribution to society and the economy.

Dr. McGibbon, 61, appointed lieutenant-governor last April, is the first woman to hold the provincial vice-regal post, in Canada.

She also was the first woman to be elected chancellor of the University of Toronto and is a past director of IBM Canada Ltd. and Imasco Ltd.

Ann Landers

Guilt Won't Stop It

Dear Ann Landers: Several times I've been inclined to rebut someone who had expressed an opinion in your column. I was never moved to write until now.

The writer addressed her remarks to those who have attempted suicide, or are now considering it." She begged them to think of their loved ones and the guilt they would carry in their graves because of something they had done or not done. Rubbish! Appeasement!

Horsefeathers!

The person who is contemplating suicide is full of hate. He really hates himself, but managers to transfer that hate to others. His only goal is to make that person (or persons) suffer. Almost every suicide stems from the thought: "They'll be sorry for the way they treated me!"

My advice to would-be suicides is this: Stop kidding yourself. They will not be sorry. If you commit suicide you'll prove they were right when they said you were too weak to face life.

Their battle cry is: "If you can't stand the heat, get out of the kitchen." So, get out of the kitchen and left it all to them. You also left a sunny day in June, the beautiful girl you might have kissed, the book you might have read, the teen-year daughter will wear at her wedding and your first grandchild's heart-warming smile. Think. Think. Think.—Sees It Happen

Dear Sees: Thanks for an excellent appraisal. The psychiatrists are on your side. Yet—the next letter is very interesting.

Dear Ann Landers: My wife (let's call her Mary) belongs to a number of charitable organizations. She keeps getting correspondence addressed to "Mrs. Mary Smith."

After a year, I remarked quite casually that we aren't divorced, I'm not dead yet and I'd prefer that she listed herself as Mrs. John Smith. She hit the roof.

I can see a woman using her first name or maiden name for professional purposes, but my wife is not employed and I believe she is clearly out of line. Do you agree?—Jake Smith

Dear Jake: The fact that you ask her should be enough. As a matter of social etiquette she is Mrs. John Smith. I'm with you.

Successful Living

Mental Shake-Up Time

BY DORIS CLARK

Mental Shake-up — You've thought about this every fall — now do it. September and October are the months to enroll for evening classes at your local university.

Anthropology, mental health, economics, politics and many other subjects will stimulate your search you, taking up a few hours, one night a week.

If there's a technical or vocational school nearby a six hour course in creative cookery — painting millinery, leathercraft or dressmaking.

Dear Doris: Three years ago my husband started hiding his liquor around the house, making numerous trips to these hiding places until the bottles were empty.

When he is drinking he calls the all kinds of names and criticizes my family, but covers up for his own. If some other family breaks up or even if the man dies prematurely he declares "that if she cares a good wife none of this would happen.

Dear Sad: People he laughs and talks and has a real good time.

Our sex life is no hell but where there is liquor who needs it? The help I try to give him is called nagging and is "cheap talk" from me to the grave."

Nagging or Nagged At?

Dear Nagged: To put it mildly, your husband has an alcohol problem. He is obviously sensitive about it that family of his.

Your long letter tells me things have gone far too far for you to solve this problem on your own. But you can get the help of Alcoholic Anonymous, and of the Al-Anon group in your town. You can be helped to understand alcoholism for what it is — a disease, as well as a curse. And you can be helped to keep your own sanity while coping with it.

Prescription for Spring: Plant Bulbs Right Now

Last week's hard frost in Ontario country put a final end to the largest majority of vegetables in the garden. Flowers are not left gardeners are beginning to become depressed about a long life with winter.

You can prolong your gardening enjoyment if you use pleasure October days to their full advantage and plant bulbs for spring now.

Most April you will need every dab of color available to get you through the rain and mud of spring. Plant crocus, daffodils, hyacinths and tulips in October — the bulb month.

"Bulbs are a bargain," says J.H. Hughes, Ontario Ministry of Agriculture and Food horticulturist. "They flower for many years and during cool springs their blossoms last several weeks. Most reproduce small bulbs at their base which can be moved to other areas of your garden in the fall."

All types of bulbs do best in properly drained, rich loam. An area that receives a minimum of five to six hours of direct sunlight daily is ideal," says Mr. Hughes. Dig two-spoon well in advance of planting time. The planting time work organic matter into it. Place the bulbs two-and-a-half to three times as deep as their height. Their root systems will start this fall and the earliest of the bulbs will produce new shoots and flowers next spring.

When the ground is partially frozen, cover exposed areas with a mulch to reduce the soil temperature fluctuations harmful to bulbs. A two-to four-inch cover of straw, hay, pine bark, or evergreen branches makes an excellent mulch. Leaf mulches should be avoided, as leaves compost easily and smother new growth.

As you begin to plant spring-flowering Dutch bulbs this fall, you might give some thought to the fact that tulips and crocus, among others, were once considered good medicine.

Centuries ago, a King's Herbalist in England actually prescribed tulips for "a cricke in the necke, if drunke in wine." In fact, the ancient Minoan civilization crocus bulbs were esteemed as a remedy for assorted ills, not the least of which were splitting headaches and aging skin.

This should come as no surprise in the light of widespread medical folklore. Fairy settlers report on dandelion root, field thistle, and countless herbal concoctions to "purify bad blood" and treat whatever else ailed them.

Nowadays, of course, no one seriously values the bulb or crocus for their alleged medicinal virtues. Physicians, however, would question the power of these and other spring flowers to remedy writer blues. In fact, gardening is recommended by doctor as supplemental therapy — a kind of "medicine" to improve physical and mental well-being. As a famous physician once observed: "Gardening brings you close to the soil — close to the beauty and mystery of the growth of living plant."

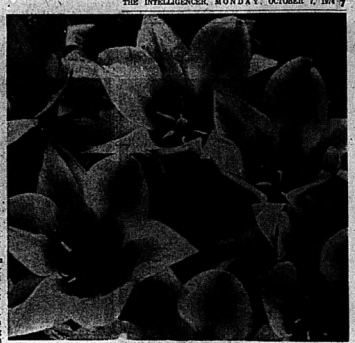
In addition to the many varieties of prcoc tulips, which bloom throughout the growing season, you'll find pleasure in clusters of golden yellow daffodils. Popular, too, are the delicately-clazed hyacinths, exuding a fragrant perfume.

The yellow or purple crocus is one of the "minor" bulbs, are scilla (Bluebells), Glory of the Snow, and Muscari. Some bloom as early as February, giving your garden an early start toward spring.

All spring-flowering bulbs should be planted during the fall. Select now according to your taste at garden centers and other retail outlets supermarkets. For a most effective spring garden, pick bulbs that open in sequence. Begin, for instance, with the snowdrop or crocus, and include Kaufmanniana, Fosteriana and Darwin tulips. Large and medium-cupped daffodils, and even late-blooming hyacinths.

Plant tulips, hyacinth and daffodil bulbs six-eight inches deep, and the same distance apart. Crocus, on the other hand, three inches deep and three inches apart, poleted ends up. Cover with soil and give the entire area a good watering. Water again only during a prolonged dry spell.

While lovely blossoms, medically speaking, can be your Rx for spring fever.



Heart's Delight

Nowaday, of course, no one seriously values the tulip or crocus for their alleged medicinal virtues. Except for the fact that many of the bulbs flowers do grow have happy or "feeling-good" names: such as this very early flowering Kaufmanniana tulip, "Heart's Delight". Prescription for spring: Plant bulbs now.

A Gardener's Work Is Never Done

There are still many gardening chores to do, says R. F. Gomme, horticulturist with the Ontario Ministry of Agriculture and Food.

"Mid-October until freezup is an ideal time to plant trees and shrubs," he advises. To prevent feeder roots from being damaged during stormy winter weather, support new trees by attaching them to stakes driven into the ground.

Dry your tuberous begonias and place them on trays or in plastic bags for storage. Dahlias and cannas should be air-dried before they are stored in boxes or bags. A cover of dried peat moss will help retain the right amount of moisture.

If your geraniums and coleus are still green, take cuttings now. Root them in sand or vermiculite and keep them moist in a bright but shaded location. Within a month, they should be rooted well enough to be transplanted into small individual pots. Use well-drained potting soil and make sure the new plants have lots of light, moderate temperatures and adequate moisture.

"A light sprinkling of mothball crystals in a shallow trench around peach trees will discourage borers," says Mr. Gomme, "but it may burn the foliage on junipers, so be careful when sprinkling it near them."

When light frosts have taken the bloom off most flowers, the chrysanthemums will still be brilliant until winter freezeup. However, they will need your help to live through it.

"In warm areas, chrysanthemums can be overwintered with proper mulching," says D. M. Simpkin, Ontario Ministry of Agriculture and Food horticulturist. A loose straw mulch or a covering of evergreen branches should provide sufficient protection most years. If only a few plants are to be protected, invert buhel hampers over them.

In low temperature areas, dig the plants after their leaves and flowers have been killed by frost. Leave loose balls of soil around the roots and place the chrysanthemums in a shallow box or flat in a cool basement or garacs at 40 degrees F. or less. Water occasionally to keep them in good condition. In the spring, simply divide the plants and replant.

Use Existing Tracks

TORONTO (CP) — The Ontario government has given a consulting firm a contract to study the feasibility of using existing railway tracks in Canadian cities, it was announced Sunday.

The consultation is in response to a competition being held by the Urban Transportation Development Corp. was to submit plans today to the federal ministry of transport for a new urban transit system capable of transporting 10,000 persons an hour.

The Ontario corporation's new railway system is not named, nor is it the final blueprint stage. Its current project, the GO urban transit system, does not qualify for the competition.

In the past, the federal agency has financed experimental projects designed to improve Canadian urban transportation systems, including new forms of transit or special bus lanes.

The competition specifies that the new system must use steel wheels suitable to use existing railway tracks.

Sheik Denies Oil to Blame

TORONTO (CP) — The price of oil is not the cause of inflation and a drop in oil prices will not cure the problem, says Sheik Ahmed Zaki Yamani, Saudi Arabia's oil minister.

Mr. Yamani said in an interview that Saudi Arabia does not want the price of oil to go any higher because stable oil prices would be in the better interests of his country.

Interviewed on the CTV program W-5, taped in Washington and to be broadcast Sunday, Thursday, Mr. Yamani said oil price increases aggravated inflation but didn't cause it.

"In case we lower the price of oil, let it be known again that this will not control inflation," Mr. Yamani said.

"There should be some additional severe measures to be taken by the industrialized world to control inflation."

Mr. Yamani, who was attending a world economy conference in Washington, said inflation was well under way before oil prices were increased.

Parents Oppose Bill 22

TORONTO (CP) — Presidents of the nine provincial home and school federations across the country reaffirmed Saturday their parent group's opposition to Quebec's controversial Bill 22, making French education compulsory in its schools.

All the provinces except Newfoundland have home and school associations.

The presidents declare that Bill 22, as adopted, is totally unacceptable and incompatible with the Canadian concept of democracy.

SACO Peewees Knock Off Grantham to Get to Final

PORT PERRY (Special) — At a time of the year when many ball players have other sports on their minds, Coach Herb Coltman-Ken Brooks combined Belleville SACO Peewees proved here Saturday, they've got the makings of a hockey team.

It was evident from the very beginning of their opening game in the Ontario Amateur Softball Association Peewee A semi-final with Grantham that SACO had come to earn a berth in the provincial final.

And the Belleville squad started it convincing. When the dust had settled here, Saturday, SACO was on the long end of an 18-6 score. Now it's on to Sault Ste. Marie on Thanksgiving weekend, for the Ontario final.

A Bobby Hodge three-run homer in the top of the first inning got SACO off on the right foot. Terry Hodge then scored from Bagley who had opened with a single and Clarence Brookman, Bagley-Alward with a double.

Grantham battled back with a pair in the bottom of the second but Darrell Coltman relieth the two-run thoughts Belleville with a two-run circuit blast in the fourth.

In the sixth, SACO really turned it on.

Before the third out was recorded, the Belleville side had rattled out a total of eight runs while putting on a show that 11 runs on the scoreboard. And it didn't stop there. The SACO wins was serving up the pitches for Grantham. Starter Don Mackie gave way to Peter Rupcic but the rallist man had no more success than the hurler he was attempting to ball out.

Grantham refused to knuckle under, however. The second staged a rally of its own in the bottom of the sixth, coming six shy since the damage was already done.

Hodge had a double and a pair of singles to go with his homer. The first baseman drove in five runs.

Brookman also supplied four safeties, three of them doubles, to be over a walk on his other plate appearance for a perfect day.

Darrel Coltman and Allan Brooks each clouted in with three base hits while Ken Bagley, Andy Bagley and Tim Soule collected the others.

Bart Konms hammered a homer and a single for Grantham. John Lorlio contributed two doubles and a single.

Winning pitcher Tim Soule, lauded for nine safeties, got excellent support from Dan Brooks who struck out three and walked none.

Coach Herb Ken, Nichols and Rupcic set five batters down on strikes while walking three.

Coltman praised his charges for coming through

Trenton Midget Team Captures OASA Title

TRENTON — Bill Dickson runs a sports and ball shop in Trenton.

He also is secretary and coaches a championship softball team.

Bill and team manager B. A. Doc Bilbeck are a winning combination.

At Ray Shore Park here, Sunday, Dickson's scrad tripped Elliott Lake Cairns IGA 5-1 to take the Ontario Amateur Softball Association Midget B honors.

Trenton took the title in two straight games, rallying late in Saturday's opener to turn back the visitors 5-3 and then wrapping it up in Game 2, Sunday.

Right-hander Rob Oliver went the distance in both games to record the twin wins.

Sunday, he was extremely sharp. Oliver limited the Elliott Lake team to four hits, three singles and a triple, while striking out 11 and walking only one.

He hit his bid for a shutout in the fourth inning when left fielder Tim Neron appeared to lose Keith Hebert's hobit in the sun. Hebert scampered all the way to third and scored when Mario Robitaille reached first on an error.

The visitors had only one base runner prior to that frame and managed only three after. Oliver, with plenty of fielding support, wasn't about to give up a thing.

Trenton's jumped into an early 3-0 lead. Putting together walks to Doug Sheridan and Greg Kendrick along with base hits by Vic Polonilsek and Dave Lewis, the home side got the job done in a hurry.

Glen Leclair's double, a pair of fast ball singles by Kendrick and Neron's double gave Dickson's two more in the fifth.

Losing pitcher Guy Sanderson was nicked for 12 hits. He fanned five and walked three.

Top hitter for the winners was Bob Thompson with a three-for-four day. Oliver and Kendrick each had a pair with one apiece for Golding, Leclair, Lewis, Podnilsek and Neron.

Hebert was the only Elliott Lake player to gather more than one safety. He had a pair. Mike Barski and Rob Grant each managed a single.

It was the second Ontario Midget crown for a Dickson team. Trenton took the title in 1969.

Elliot Lake had to be content with the role of runnerup for the second straight year.

Saturday, Dickson's said it with a five-run eighth inning.

Trailing 2-1 after seven and one-half innings, the Trenton players found their batting eyes in the bottom of the eighth.

Oliver's two-run homer into the trees in left field, and a two-run double by Lewis were the big blasts in the rally.

Oliver rammed the first pitch by relief man Sanderson, for the Elliot Lake pitcher settled away to get the next two men on infield grounders to put the fire out.

Tim Neron's solo circuit was in the fifth had provided Trenton with the only run of the game until the seventh when the visitors rapidged on base hits by Sanderson and Barski.

Then, in the top of the eighth, Elliot Lake took a 2-1 lead.

With one out, Hebert doubled and then came home on a triple by Wayne Minenor.

Dickson's said Minenor down at the plate on a well executed relay from right fielder Glen Leclair across the diamond to Sheridan to catcher Kendrick.

Leclair also engineered the final out of the ball game.

Two were out when George Monkhouse cracked a double to right-centre. Leclair caught up with the ball and fired for Sheridan who put the tag on Monkhouse after the runner had tripped rounding second.

Oliver scattered nine hits on the way to the win. He fanned nine and showed perfect control, walking none. Touched for six hits, Gerry Sanscartier and Sanderson combined for one strikeouts. Sanscartier walked three.

Emeryville Kids Just Won't Quit

WATERDOWN (Special) — Trenton Legion was so close to the Ontario Baseball Association Peewee C title here, Saturday that it was about to be written into the records.

But a last gasp effort by Emeryville turned impending defeat into an almost unbelievable victory. And the Western Ontario community snatched the honors out of the hands of be Eastern Ontario Baseball Association representative.

Holding a 4-0 lead in the top of the seventh and final inning, Trenton appeared home-free. And when it came down to two out, an Emeryville runner on first, and two strikes on the batter, Trenton was one pitch away from the championship.

Trenton pitcher Paul Dicrescenzo delivered, and Emeryville's Ken Kenny poked a single. That started the ball rolling and it wasn't over until the five runs had crossed the plate.

Winning pitcher Richard St. Pierre allowed only a bruised thigh hit single to Bob Alexander in the bottom of the seventh. He struck out three Trenton batters when it conducted mop, preserving a 6-4 margin of victory.

Greg Thibeault's lased loaded home run was the big belt for the winners in that dramatic rally.

Kevin Patrick's solo home run accounted for the only scoring in the game over the first five and one-half innings. The Trenton first baseman connected in the fourth.

In the sixth, Trenton counted three times on hits by Dicrescenzo, Greg Howard, Curtis Smith and Dave Williamson. That made it so but it didn't matter much after Emeryville's seventh inning heroics.

"You had to be there to believe it," observed Trenton team manager Ray Dicrescenzo. Ray was there, and it appeared he was having trouble believing it himself.

Trenton coaches were Jim Whyte, Doug Alexander and Ivan Mason. Dicrescenzo and the players may find some consolation in the fact that team went a long way in the playoffs and looked very good doing it.

Saints Record Twin Victories

Quinte Secondary School Football teams continued their winnings ways Friday taking a pair of games from Bayside.

In the senior game played at Quinte, the Saints romped to an easy 31-4 victory over their opponents.

Quinte coach Rick Lecke gave much of the credit to Saints' standout of the offensive line.

Mike MacDonald, Pat Gilmore and Larry Cross continually opened holes in the Bayside defensive wall.

Mike Taylor picked up the first two majors for the Saints on short yardage plunges and Steve Rutherford added the extra points. Rutherford was also all but not unerversed attempt.

Steve McCracken, on a 45-yard punt return, scored the third Quinte touchdown. Bayside gave up a pair of safeties. The first half ended with Quinte in front by a score of 22-0.

Scott Bowes, on another short yardage situation, opened the scoring in the second half for the Saints.

Bayside's touchdown came late in the third quarter. Stirling Wilson and Doug Meagher counted the other Quinte majors.

In the junior game, Quinte squeezed by the junior Bayside team by a 8-7 score.

According to Quinte Coach Barry Turpin "It was a defensive battle all the way."

Mr. Turpin felt that Bayside was "up for this game and we weren't."

Quinte had two good scoring chances in the first half and they proved useful within the 10 yard line but due to the superb effort of the Bayside defence Saints were held off the score sheet.

A 15 yard field goal by Mike Burke in the second quarter opened the scoring for the Quinte team. Burke added another point in the third quarter before Bayside came up with a single.

Golden Mile In Cup Final

Golden Mile Olympics advanced to the final of the Bay of Quinte Soccer Association Trenton Challenge Cup with a 7-3 drubbing of Trenton Spartacus on Sunday.

Both clubs came out hustling trying to jump into the lead. Charlie Nestorouk finally broke the ice, putting the Olympics ahead on a well placed penalty shot.

Brian Stevenson put the Golden Mile club ahead 2-0, but Andy Viners brought Spartacus to within 2 goal margin with a penalty kick.

Kolan Chastar evened things at 2 early in the second half with a low shot that eluded Olympics' goalie, Tony Genovese.

Trenton then went ahead 3-2 on Andy Viners second score of the game, but it proved to be Spartacus' last.

Petros Vitaliotis got the Olympic lead back on the track with a goal that made the score 5-3. He then set up Nestorouk's shot to put Golden Mile on top 6-3. Vitaliotis then ordered the Spartacus defenders to score his second goal of the game and the fifth for the Olympics.

The Olympics got two more goals, one from Nestorouk and one from Chris Johnson to round out their seven goal surge.

Forget the Sour Grapes, We Gave it A Good Shot

By MAURICE SWITZER
Managing Editor

It's all over but the griping.

Those nasty men from Moscow have taken our pride of yesteryear Canadian hockey players, bugged their hotel rooms with real bugs, and even cheated them out of a game by playing Beat the Clock.

At least, that's what you believe today if you pay attention to people like Johnny Sexsaw, or Howie Squeaker.

If you listen to people like Gordie Howe, they bear him telling reporters after Sunday's finale of the eight-game series — "Team Soviet — They just played too damned good."

And while members of the 200-strong media official Team Canada hangers-on were harping about everything from poor stadium seats to grumpy caviar, more reliable sources — like Point Anne's own Robert Hull — were saying: "Maybe we should take a good look at our hockey. The Russians have only been playing since 1946 and they've done a hell of a job of catching us. We could take some lessons from them and profit by it."

The way the sillbs are flying around, you'd think Team WHA had something to be ashamed of. Alan Eagleson's bill crew, who many thought would take eight straight just as they thought the Russians would be blanked in 1972, came up with a surprisingly sound performance.

Granted, they only recorded one win in eight outings, but two of their three ties had been victories until the dying seconds, and two of the Soviet wins were by a one-goal spread.

Not bad for a bunch of has-beens led by a 46-year-old from Floral.

As was the case in 1972, most of the grumblin' about this hockey summit took place off the ice.

The Canadian public is left with the impression that somehow the Russians OUDER when the series will be played, which referees will be used, that visitors all be given the smallest possible accommodations and worst possible seats.

Part of the matter is, all of those matters are supposed to be negotiated by that vast, and vaguely bunch of professional freeloaders called Hockey Canada-Sport Canada.

Why doesn't our hockey brass insist on professional-caliber officiating? That person who cost the Russians a goal in Game Two in Toronto, and possibly Team Canada a goal in Game Seven, was never competent as a Senior A referee in these parts a couple of years ago.

Why were the last four games of the series played in Russia? That was the set-up in '72.

And why does Team Canada play before, instead of after their North American season, when they would be at a playing peak?

These are all questions that only the stickmen wonders called "Canada's best" answer.

They're the ones always blaming the Russians for sins that, in many instances, they at least share.

or whatever, with the assistance of the Canadian Embassy — and we mean AMATEUR! Hockey Association.

Why, one asks, don't we play the Russians on OUR terms if their terms aren't to our liking?

Just a jib 1972, the men who bargained with the Soviets for the series gave everything and took nothing — except free tickets.

Why doesn't our hockey brass insist on professional-caliber officiating? That person who cost the Russians a goal in Game Two in Toronto, and possibly Team Canada a goal in Game Seven, was never competent as a Senior A referee in these parts a couple of years ago.

Napanee Peewee Champ

In Pee Wee C Ontario Amateur Softball Association Championship playoffs on the Bayview Park diamond, Ryan's color and Sound took the measure of Napanee, Ryan's against the Minesing team.

On Saturday Minesing bowed to the obviously stronger Napanee team by a score of 11-4.

In action on Sunday the Napanee team wrapped up the title with a decisive 16-3 victory.

Huskies Shaded In League Opener

BOWMANVILLE (Special) — Frankford Junior C Huskies opened their regular season Sunday night on another disouraging note. They lost to Bowmanville 7-6.

"We just ran out of legs," said Frankford general manager, Steve Bedard.

Frankford held their own through the first two periods but were outscored 4-3 in the final frame. The first 30 minutes ended in a 1-1 tie and the second period finished 3-3.

Al MacIntosh and Pete Crawford each fired two for the Huskies and Rob Arbeckle and Mike Cornish added one apiece.

Roy Gibbs was top gun for the winners with two goals and five assists. Boyd Knox and Dave Lake also scored twice each, and Doug Wood potted one.

Bowmanville outshot Frankford 42-38 and had 11 minor penalties.

The Huskies got nine minors.

Frankford goes at it again on Thursday night in Cobourg.

"Walk for Hockey" in Tweed

TWEED — The annual "Walk for Hockey", organized by the Tweed Minor Hockey Association is planned for October 20.

The event has proven very successful in past years and officials are looking forward to continued support from Tweed and the surrounding area this year.

Walkathon forms may be picked up at the minor hockey booth during the Tweed Fall Fair.

Left on his own through much of the late going in Sunday's Bay of Quinte Soccer Association Cup game at Trenton's Centennial Park, Spartacus goalkeeper Carl Ehrenreich had little chance as Belleville Golden Mile Olympics scored 7-3 win. Under pressure from attacking Golden Mile forwards, Spartacus defenders got their signals crossed several times, adding to goalie's problems.

Olympics Top Tony's

In Exhibition Soccer Action on Sunday the Belleville Olympics took a 5-3 win over Tony's of Cobourg.

Kevin Kirby led the Olympics with a hat trick and Fundic Zdravko picked up the other for the win.

For the Cobourg team, Eric Cobb and Peter Reinhart had the scoring.

The visitors gave the Belleville side a real run for the money and only a slight lapse by the Cobourg defence gave the game to Belleville.

At the end of the first half, the score was 2-0 for the Olympics.

Cobourg came roaring back in the second half but were not able to get the tying goal.

Kirby's winning goal came late in the 3rd period when the come back hopes of the visitors.

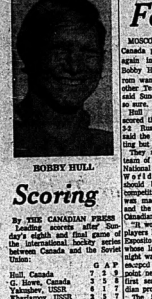
Hull, Backstrom Willing to Try Again

Four Wins for Soviet Union



BOBBY HULL

MOSCOW (CP) — If Team Canada plays the Soviet Union again in international hockey, Bobby Hull and Bill Hackstrom want to be part of it. But other Team Canada '74 players said Sunday night they are not so sure.

Hull and Backstrom, who scored the Canadian goals in a 5-3 Russian victory in the eight-game series was frustrating but valuable.

They said 4 fourth American team of the best players in the National Hockey League and World Hockey Association should be selected for future competition. Team Canada '72 was made up of NHL players and the latest edition drew on Canadians in the WHA.

"It would be easier if we had players like Bobby Orr and Phil Esposito to help us," said Hull, who had second goal Saturday night was not allowed as Russia escaped with a 4-4 tie and the point needed to give Russia its first series victory over Canadian professionals.

The Soviet Union had four victories in five for Canada in the eight-game series. Three games were tied, leaving Russia with 11 points. The Canadians had one win for a total of seven points.

"Two years ago, with Esposito and Orr and Cashman and Ratelle and three games in a row in Montreal, we'd have had inaugural series 4-3 with one tie.

Team Canada '74 earned a 3-3 tie with Russia in Quebec City and followed with a 4-1 victory three days later in Toronto.

Then coach Billy Harris used several new players at Winnipeg and the Russians downed Canada 5-3 to pull even in points after three games.

The Soviets staged a three-goal rally in the fourth game at Vancouver 5-3. The game featured Canada's best period of the series, a five-goal outburst in which Hull scored three goals and Ilcers and Frank Mahovlich one each.

Canada lost 3-2 and 5-3 in the first two games here and tied rather than won the third when the timekeeper and referee Josef Kompalla of Toronto ruled that Hull's shot between Vladislav Tretiak's legs in the final second of Saturday night's game was a fraction too late.

Brown called only three penalties, two to the Soviets, as Backstrom scored twice and Yvan Cournoyer and Mark Howe once each to offset Soviet tallies by Vyacheslav Anisin, Yuri Blinin, Alexander Gusev and Boris Mikhailov.

Before the final second, with 32 remaining in the third period, goaltender Gerry Cheevers noted that four seconds had run off during a stoppage in play.

Cheevers charged toward the timer, flailing his hugs stick, and the time later was adjusted by two seconds.

"It couldn't have taken two seconds for my shot to go 15 or 16 feet into the back of the net," said Hull.

Canada's official protest got nowhere.

Another incident developed Sunday when the Soviet sports ministry announced before the game that Hull would be halted if Canada continued its rough play.

Team manager Bill Hunter of Edmonton said the move left the Canadians "off-balance."

"We were tired mentally," said centre Andre Lacroix of the final Canadian effort.

"When you're supposed to be thinking about the game, you find you may be thinking about the fact the wives are unhappy at the treatment we get here.

"You find out it's hard to get your mind off the political things that are always going on.

The Canadians unanimously praised the Soviet players.

The Russians are "strong, well-conditioned athletes," Hull said.

Paul Henderson, who scored the winning goal in the final game here in 1972, said that because of the poor officiating, he would want no part of another such series.

Viktor Shalimov scored two goals and brilliant Alexander Yakushev ran for the Soviets Sunday. Yakushev missed part of the series in Canada because of a knee injury.

Alexander Sidelnikov was in the Soviet goal, replacing Tretiak.

Almost every player had praise for Cheevers, who remained with the team although his other goaltender, Ken Dryden, was in Toronto.

The goalminder received permission to fly directly to Canada today from Prague, where Team Canada plays Tuesday night in the last exhibition game of the 11-game tour that opened Sept. 17 in Quebec.

The rest of the team leaves Wednesday.

Canada's Hunter Upset

MOSCOW (CP) — Bill Hunter, general manager of Team Canada '74, said Sunday night he will insist on different conditions for the World Hockey Association becomes involved in another series with Russia.

He said preliminary negotiations have been held about future meetings—involving a combined team of National Hockey League and WHA pros, but such a breakthrough "is down the road a ways . . . maybe not that far away."

He was commenting following Team Canada's 5-2 loss to the Russian national team in the eighth and final game of their series. The Soviets won six and four victories, one loss and tied once.

The Canadian team was made up of WHA professionals while the 1972 Canada was made up of NHL pros. The NHLers won that series.Fetch four victories, two losses and a tie.

Bobby Hull, who scored Canada's first goal Sunday, said if Canada is involved, he'd prefer-able to an all-star team from both leagues.

"I'd have to say it would be better if all the players that Phil Esposito and Bobby Orr on the ice.

However, he said he was satisfied that the WHA, which is only in its third season, had established its credibility in the eyes of North American fans.

Hunter agreed with Hull, but he went on to say that he was distressed by the behavior of Russian hockey officials in the series.

While praising the skills of Russian hockey players, he was particularly disturbed by a statement from the Russian Hockey Federation Saturday which said Canada was made up of NHL pros. The NHLers would not count because professionals were not allowed in friendly games.

Following Sunday's game-Hunter relented in deference to fans—Anatoly Segilin of Russia, a former referee in world championship and Olympic hockey, said Brown was totally to blame for the controversy.

He said Brown could have cut-ruled the timekeeper and declared a goal for Canada.

However, Brown said time had expired and the decision was simple—it was no goal.

Team Canada coach Billy Harris said he knew the goal shouldn't be counted, but he had come to expect strange decisions in international hockey.

While on the street after Saturday's game, Team Russia came to me and shook my hand and signalled with their fingers 5-4, so they knew," he said.

FOREMAN ESCAPES INJURY

KINSHASA, Zaire (AP) — A car carrying world heavyweight boxing champion George Foreman was involved in a multiple crash here Saturday. The champion was not hurt. The six-car convoy of the heavyweight champion was returning from the training site of daily workouts it was forced to reduce speed sharply when it encountered an unforeseen traffic jam.

A's, Orioles All Even

OAKLAND (AP) — It was a familias' script.

Oakland A's Reggie Jackson in the trailing Baltimore Orioles in the American League playoffs until Sal Bando started swinging at Dave McNally's pitches.

There were a few new pitchers thrown in, such as Vida Blue — the usually superb lefthander who was batted around in four unearned runs with three hits and the A's rebounded from Saturday's 5-3 defeat to whip the Orioles 5-0 Sunday behind Ken Holtzman's five-hit pitching.

The A's, two-time defending World Series champions, beat McNally for the second straight game in the best-of-five series 1-1. A year ago in Baltimore, they scored twice against McNally, and had a third homer taken away by a leaping catch.

Bando led off the fourth inning by watching two pitches miss the strike zone and then he popped up. Bobby Grich dropped the high fool.

Then Bando lined a three-but one-strike fast ball over the left-field fence, just eluding the glove of Baltimore's Don Baylor.

"I thought he caught it," Bando said of a ball that would have been a rerun of Al Bumby's leaping grab in the second game of the 1973 playoffs in which Holtzman outpitched McNally, 6-3.

Fosse hit a double in the seventh inning and the three-run homer in the eighth off Grant Jackson. An error by substitute shortstop Frank Baker kept the inning going for Fosse.

The playoffs move to Baltimore Tuesday for the third and fourth games, plus a fifth, if necessary, Thursday.

Oakland sends left-hander Vida Blue, 17-10, against Baltimore's Jim Palmer, 7-13, Tuesday.

Blue is winless in four decisions at a post-season pitcher, and Palmer, last year's AL Cy Young Award winner, started 1974 with a sore arm.

Grich, Robinson and Paul Blair hit home runs Saturday to lead the Orioles to victory against Oakland's Jim Hunter.

Blair homered in the first inning and Robinson hit another leading off the fifth. Grich hit a two-run homer to wrap up the Orioles' four-run fifth.

Grich also doubled with one out in the fourth and scored on a single by designated hitter Tommy Davis.

Left-hander Mike Cuellar allowed seven Oakland hits over the first eight innings before Ross Grimsley came on in relief. Bert Campaneris had three of the hits off Cuellar and drove in all the runs for Oakland.

World Driving Champ

Two Straight For Fittipaldi

WATKINS GLEN, N.Y. (AP) — Carlos Reutemann won the battle and fellow, Latin-American Emerson Fittipaldi won the war during Sunday's 11th running of the United States Grand Prix.

"It is good," both said, following Sunday's race, the series victory and Fittipaldi's fourth-place finish that put him on his second world driving championship in two years.

And both were somewhat subdued in their victory celebrations because of the death during the race of 25-year-old Austrian driver Helmuth Koinigg.

Koinigg, of Salzburg, Austria, was killed instantly when his Surtees-Ford failed to make a hairpin turn on the race course and crashed through a steel barrier.

His was the third death among Grand Prix drivers this year and the second at Watkins Glen in two years. American Peter Revson was killed in South Africa in March and Switzerland's Silvio Moser in Monza, Italy, in April. French ace Francois Cevert died in a crash at Watkins Glen the day before last year's race.

Reutemann, who had qualified his Brabham-Ford team car in the front-row pole position, never trailed as he took the lead at the starter's flag and gradually built up a safe lead over team-mate Carlos Pace of Brazil.

Pace passed Britisher James Hunt with only five laps left in the second place. Hunt was third in a Hesketh-Ford, followed by Fittipaldi in a McLaren team car, and John Watson of Ireland in a third Brabham.

Reutemann, who earlier had won the South African and Austrian Grand Prix races, ran the 59-lap, 192.22-mile race at a speed of 119.13 miles per hour — a new record for the redesigned Glen circuit.

He was paid $50,000 from the $200,000 purse.

Fittipaldi had entered the race deadlocked with Clay Regazzoni, a Ferrari driver from Switzerland, each with 52 championship points. Jody Scheckter of South Africa trailed with 45 points.

But Regazzoni never was a contender and was out of the championship running after having to pit for a tire change 39 laps into the race.

Scheckter, who could have become the youngest world champion ever, ran up front during the early going but was forced out at the 45th lap when his Tyrrell-Ford developed fuel problems.

Fittipaldi thus wound up with 58 points for the season, while Regazzoni remained second with 52 points. Scheckter placed third in the final standings, with Regazzoni's Ferrari teammate Niki Lauda holding fourth with 38.

Pearson Winner Of National 500

CHARLOTTE, N.C. (AP) — David Pearson won the wrecker marred National 500 stock car race Sunday, hitting the finish line about three car lengths ahead of Richard Petty.

The victory was almost an instant replay of last May's World 600 at Charlotte Motor Speedway when Pearson nosed his Mercury under the checkered flag just ahead of Petty's Dodge.

Traveling at a speed of more than 158 miles an hour, Pearson beat Petty by 1.4 seconds for his sixth super speedway triumph in 18 starts this season.

Earl Ross of Adina Craig, Ont., driving a Chevrolet, wound up 20th. He completed 331 laps to earn $1,252.

Pearson moved in front of the field to lead the last 23 laps, or about 80 miles, over the 1.5-mile highbanked speedway. The veteran driver led 90 of the 334 laps.

Petty, whose car was crippled with a crushed hood, was never a serious threat to Pearson until the fifth wreck of the day brought out the ninth caution flag, closing the distance between the two drivers to about 15 car lengths.

Second-year Grand National driver Darrell Waltrip, making one of his best major race showings, finished third just ahead of Donnie Allison. Both Waltrip and Allison drove Chevrolets.

The $161,877 race was marred by a spectacular 16-car crash that put seven vehicles out of the running and injured driver Marty Robbins.

Robbins plowed his Dodge into the wall on the first turn to start the wreck. He suffered head and facial cuts.

Canadians Sidelined

QUEBEC (CP) — Canada has been eliminated from further Davis Cup tennis play by Mexico in a five-match North American zone series.

The Mexicans clinched a berth in the second round of Davis Cup play last night with a victory in the doubles to take a 3-2 lead.

In two meaningless singles games Sunday night, Canada won its only match when Don McCormick of Vancouver topped Jesus Lopez-Mayo 4-6, 6-4, 10-8, 6-3 in 2½ hours. Roberto Chavez defeated Rejean Genois of Quebec 6-4, 6-4, 6-3, 13-11.

Last year the Canadians were beaten by the same margin, 4-1, by the Mexicans in second-round play.

After McCormick and Tony Bartsher, both of Vancouver, dropped their singles matches Friday night, captain Don Fontana designated Genois and Pierre Lamarche of Montreal as the doubles team to oppose Chavez sight's doubles.

Raoul Ramirez and Vincente Zarazua, who are 6-1 in Davis Cup doubles matches they have played together, took the match 6-1, 6-0, 6-3.

Dodgers in Command

PITTSBURGH (AP) — There's nothing like two victories on the road before going home to make a team feel like the National League baseball champions.

"I'm not saying you're going to sweep, but we're the National League champs," added Jim Wynn, the power behind Los Angeles Dodgers' season-long drive that left them with one victory short of the NL title and a World Series berth after Sunday's 5-2 triumph over Pittsburgh Pirates.

The Dodgers opened with a 3-0 win Saturday behind the four-hit pitching of Don Sutton.

Rob Gry hit a homer, two doubles and a single Sunday to tie the playoff record of four hits in one game set by Pittsburgh's Bob Robertson in 1971 and Willie Crawford's pinch-hit single brought Cey home with the winning run against Pittsburgh's relief ace Dave Giusti.

No team has overcome a 2-0 deficit since the best-of-five intra league playoffs began in 1969 and the Pirates task is made more difficult by the series shifting to Los Angeles.

"I'd say we have our backs to the wall," Pittsburgh manager Danny Murtaugh said after the Dodgers scored three runs off Giusti to snap a 2-2 tie.

"But we've been counted out of it nine or 10 times this year. We are playing in the big series," added Murtaugh, whose club was 14 games under .500 early in the season.

The Dodgers led 2-0 into the Pirates' seventh Sunday, and Pittsburgh had scratched for single matched the playoff record they set in two games against Cincinnati in 1970.

The Pirate famine ended in the seventh inning when singles by Paul Popovich, Richie Zisk and Al Oliver helped Pittsburgh cut the 2-0 against Dodger starter Andy Messersmith.

Rookie Rick Rhoden, who to sacrifices starting pitcher Jim Rooker in a pinch-hitter in that inning, and the Dodgers broke the game open in the eighth against Giusti.

Cey, who made two errors in the Dodgers' first-game victory, opened the inning with a double into the left field corner. His best catcher Manny Sanguillen's throw to third on a bunt popped weakly in front of the plate by Bill Russell and scored as Crawford's bloop single in sort.

A single to right by Manny Mota then chased Giusti and scored Russell, before Dave Lopes stroked another single off rookie Larry Demery to score Crawford with the final run.

Dodger relief ace Mike Marshall shut out the Pirates over the final two innings.

The Pirates will pin their hopes on Bruce Kison, 9-8, when the series resumes Tuesday, while the Dodgers will counter with Doug Rau, 15-11.

In Saturday's game, Sutton also helped out in both of the Dodgers' scoring drives. In the second inning, he drew a walk from Jerry Reuss which loaded the bases and Dave Lopes followed with another walk that forced in the first run.

Sutton then singled to start a ninth-inning surge. He was forced at second by Lopes when then scored on Wynn's double. Wynn added another run on a single by Joe Ferguson.

Geiberger Talks Himself to Title

LAS VEGAS, Nev. (AP) — Al Geiberger kept munching on peanut butter crackers and talking to himself.

"If I don't keep talking to myself, all the time, I tend to back off.

"I kept telling myself that second place doesn't do me any good at this stage of my career," the 37-year-old veteran said Sunday after his three stroke victory in the Sahara International golf tournament.

He talked himself into it, shooting a final-round 69, two under par on the 6,800-yard Sahara-Nevada Country Club course, for a 273 total.

Cassata Lifts Rough Riders

By THE CANADIAN PRESS

Ottawa Rough Riders have been criticized by their fans for relying too much on Gerry Organ's field-goal kicking and not perfecting their touchdown scoring.

They solved that problem Saturday by taking quarterback Rick Cassata off the bench to direct the Riders to a 33-0 victory over Hamilton that put Ottawa in a second-on ice with the Tiger-Cats in the Eastern football Conference.

Cassata, who has made only brief appearances behind jerry Keeling, passed for 213 yards and two touchdowns and the defending Grey Cup champions never were behind after taking 7-4 first-quarter lead.

The victory enabled Ottawa to stay two points up on Toronto Argonauts who defeated Edmonton Eskimos 23-20 in a CanAdian Football League match lacking match saturday.

Ottawa and Hamilton both have 11 points, with Ottawa in first place because of more touchdowns. Both are in playoff position, however, as the Argonauts and the Eskimos.

Cassata passed 15 yards to Ken Evenshaw for the first touchdown and five yards to Tom Scott for the second one. Art Green and Kerry Mackay each ran one yard for the other touchdowns, while Organ kicked four converts, two singles and added a field goal.

Organ also appeared as a wide receiver and caught one pass for 13 yards that set up Mackay's touchdown.

Dave Fleming and Gary Kunyk scored the Hamilton touchdowns. Jim Barrett converted both and added two field goals and a single.

One Second Left, Vikings Connect

By THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

Minnesota Vikings, St. Louis Cardinals and New England Patriots remained unbeaten in the National Football League for another week but each club discovered victories in their bags at different times.

The Vikings saw their victory with one second on the clock, the Cardinals realized the money was theirs at half time and the Patriots scored on the third play of the game and then went all the way to an easy victory.

Minnesota was losing its football game at the second-worst possible time—with one second remaining. But after Fred Cox booted a 27-yard field goal, Dallas Cowboys were losing 23-21 to the Vikings at the worst possible time—the final gun.

The Cardinals felt their 34-9 victory over San Francisco 49ers was secure, while they were cooling their heels during intermission.

"They were tired and dragging," said St. Louis quarterback Jim Hart of his team's performance against the three third-period touchdown passes.

Down 3-0 at the half, the Cards took the lead for good on Hart's 37-yard scoring pitch to Mel Gray. It gathered in a 30-yard touchdown strike 10 minutes later. In between, Terry Metcalf, Hart hit Donny Anderson on a four-yard touchdown pass.

Quarterback Patricks took the lead on the third play of the game, a 49-yarder to Randy Vataha. Reggie Rucker, and laughed all the way to the final gun for a 42-3 rout over Kansas City.

Elsewhere, Atlanta defeated New York Giants 24-7, Chicago nail beat Washington 28-17, Buffalo bounced Green Bay 27-6, Oakland beat Cleveland 40-24, Chicago beat New Orleans 26-10, Pittsburgh clipped Houston 13-7, Denver defeated Kansas City 19-14, Los Angeles dropped Detroit 16-13 and Philadelphia downed San Diego 13-7.

New York-Jets are at Miami to meet the Dolphins tonight, rounding out the NFL's fourth week of play.

Quarterback Fran Tarkenton guided the Vikings ar yards in the final two minutes to set up Cox's third-field goal of the game. Calvin Hill's eight-yard touchdown run in the first quarter gave the Broncos their first victory of the season.

Los Angeles Rams' Lawrence McCutcheon gained 134 yards on 21 carries and tonight five passed for 43 more in the win over Detroit.

Pittsburgh's interrupted four San Diego passes, with Randy Logan taking one 46 yards for a touchdown, to beat the Chargers.

Cincinnati defensive back Lemar Parrish returned Washington's first punt 95 yards for the game's first touchdown and later scooped up a Jerry Smith fumble and darted 47 yards for another score.

Blue Bombers Looking Good

Lions All Alone at the Top

By THE CANADIAN PRESS

While British Columbia Lions confidently turned aside Calgary Stampeders Sunday, Saskatchewan Roughriders downed the strain of the scramble for last playoff spot in the Western Football Conference.

The Lions moved into sole possession of first place with a 10-7 win in Calgary over the cellar-dwelling Stampeders. British Columbia now has 14 points and has played one more game than the second-place Edmonton Eskimos, who have 12.

The Lions dominated play as Monroe Eley rushed for 109 yards with 128 yards on 16 carries, scored a touchdown on a 15-yard pass from quarterback Don Moorhead and got another on a 13-yard field-goal after confrontation of power running.

The Winnipeg Blue Bombers held a 21-6 lead at 301 of the second quarter. But the Blue Bombers let the Riders back into the two teams in crucial third place with 12 points each.

Saskatchewan, however, has played two more games than Winnipeg. And in their three meetings this season, the Bombers have a 2-1 edge—a key factor if the teams finish the season with the same point totals.

Veteran George Reed ran for 141 yards and a touchdown in the first half for Saskatchewan. Ron Lancaster passed 10 yards to newcomer Rhett Dawson for the game's first major, ending the 19-yard tip-pass march.

The other Saskatchewan touchdown was scored by defensive tackle Tim Roth, who fell on the ball kicked into his arms when Winnipeg punter Walt McKee bobbled a punt. Roth rambled 13 yards for his second touchdown of the season.

After Brian Berg's third successful convert for Saskatchewan, the Bombers took advantage of a pass interception, a recovered fumble, a blocked punt and a bad snap.

Jim Washington, Bob Larose and Tom Scott all scored touchdowns for the Bombers and McKee kicked a single and an 18-yard field goal in the last minute of the first quarter to forestall the margin of victory.

The other Winnipeg points came on a safety touch that Alan Ford conceded.

Cyril McFall was the whole scoring punch for the Stampeders, kicking two three-point goals. McFall's field goal try in the first quarter was wide but Ford conceded for a single.

For British Columbia, Ivan Mcmillan kicked a seven-yard field goal in the fourth quarter and converted Eley's five-yard downs. Bill Baker of the Lions and quarterback Peter Liske in the end zone late in the second quarter for a safety. Jim Lions fullback Johnny Musso, Just started a long time ago, was injured early in the first quarter when hit by Calgary linebacker Roger Gorce. General manager Jackie Parker said Musso apparently strained the same knee that he injured in a pre-season game.

The Lions dominated play, particularly in the second half. Lou Harris carried the ball 21 times for 113 yards against the Stampeders, giving him a total of 1,021 yards rushing for the season.

Durbano Cutting Up

By THE CANADIAN PRESS

The National Hockey League today faced the problem of figuring out what, beyond punishment, will stop Pittsburgh defenceman Steve Durbano.

The hard-nosed Penguins rearguard, already facing a two-game suspension for an earlier infraction, touched off a brawl Sunday night in a game against the World Hockey Association Cleveland Crusaders who pulled out without finishing the game.

Coach John Heesa pulled his Crusaders off the ice at Pittsburgh with the Penguins leading 5-0 after a bench-clearing brawl at 15:22 of the third period.

The brawl started after Durbano, about to serve a slashing penalty, squared off with the Crusaders' Rickie Leduc. After that bout, Durbano took a swing at Cleveland's Jerry Pinder and both benches emptied.

Referee Wally Kurt Vetter, but returned to pick up a second, game misconduct and a game misconduct.

Cleveland's Ulric Krahe and Colin Campbell of the Penguins also drew game misconducts for their part in the brawl.

Durbano, who earned 324 minutes in penalties last season with St. Louis Blues, has been sentenced to sit out the Penguins' first two regular-season games as a result of a high-sticking incident in a game against Kansas City Scouts two weeks ago.

In other Sunday games, Minnesota North Stars beat the WHA Toronto Toros 5-3, Vancouver Canucks defeated the WHA Edmonton Oilers 4-1, Montreal Canadiens beat New York Rangers 7-4, California Golden Seals beat Los Angeles Kings 5-2, Buffalo Sabres defeated Detroit Red Wings 4-3 and Washington Capitals blanked Kansas City Scouts 3-0.

Saturday, the Rangers beat New York Islanders 4-3, Chicago Black Hawks defeated Boston Bruins 7-3, Buffalo edged St. Louis 5-4, Philadelphia Flyers beat Pittsburgh 5-2, Washington edged Kansas City 3-2, Minnesota North Stars downed Hershey of the American Hockey League 6-4 and Toronto Maple Leafs played to a 4-4 tie with Detroit.

The NHL exhibition schedule winds up tonight with the Rangers visiting the Bruins, and the regular season opens Wednesday with seven games.

It's Been Around

This is part of the interior of the Pacific, Canadian National's roving antiques car. The car, built in 1924, has been on royal tours and was used by former prime ministers including Diefenbaker as combined museum and retail sales outlet. (CP Photo)

Railroad Antiques Meet Brisk Demand

HALIFAX (CP) — Normant Lowe packed several people walking by on their way into Canadian National's roving antiques car, the Pacific.

"That's the way it is. There's always people coming in here and buy."

Mr. Lowe, the railway's historical projects officer, is in his third year of selling the company's memorabilia and antiques.

During an interview on board the Pacific, tucked away in a corner of Halifax station, Mr. Lowe said "My sales have doubled from last year."

Since its inception, the program, devised by Mr. Lowe to sell the antiques which many people in the railway regarded as junk, has been a success.

While there has never been a mass rush for the antiques, sales from his main office in the CN building in Montreal and from the Pacific during its tours of Ontario and Quebec have quickly depleted available stocks.

For example, about—400 steam locomotive number plates, many of them caked in dirt and grime, have been sold for $75 apiece. China, glassware, silverware, bushels of other railroadia from CN's hotels, passenger trains and steam engines are sold well.

Also for sale are pictures of CN's steam engines as well as their successors — diesels.

Originally, the Pacific was to come to the Maritimes behind the star of Mr. Lowe's show—No. 6060, a Mountain class 4-8-2 steam locomotive, restored last year for excursion service.

A lengthy tour of most Maritime province plus excursions in Ontario and Quebec, planned for the summer, were scrubbed however and shortly afterwards the engine suffered a cracked axle while being moved to Toronto from Montreal and is still undergoing repair.

But Mr. Lowe said he hoped to make amends to those disappointed at not seeing the steamer by taking the Pacific around.

The car, built in 1924 as a open-end observation coach, and rebuilt in 1949, has been used on royal trains and was Diefenbaker's campaign car in 1957.

It was retired in 1971 but saved from the scrapper's torch to become the second car for CN's corporate museum, another of Mr. Lowe's projects.

When the railway decided to reactivate No. 6060, it was decided to return the Pacific to service as a combined-museum and retail sales outlet coach.

During refurbishing, the car's sides were painted in traditional CN green with a black roof. Two windows were removed and two others made into a reception room.

Many other special CN passenger coaches are also occupying the scrap heap as Mr. Lowe expands his sales program. He is selling retired business cars for between $15,000 and $25,000 with standard coaches going for less—often to U.S. interests for use as restaurants.

"People want to grab some railroadiana whether its artifacts or rolling stock," he said.

Loyalist Edged 2-1

Loyalist College lost their first game in Ontario College action while playing at home Saturday, dropping a 3-1 decision in the Queensview Cup.

"We just didn't play well," commented Loyalist coach, Rob Stinson, "and they played one goal better."

Loyalist took a 1-0 lead at the end of the first half on a goal from Dave Kingston replied with a pair in the second half, one from Manuel Brandeo and one from Joe Trantanis.

Loyalist will have an opportunity to get even on Wednesday when they travel back to Kingston for another meeting with St. Lawrence.

Grain Strike Draws Criticism

OTTAWA (CP) — The Liberal bill to end the West Coast grain workers' strike.

Leader Robert Stanfield criticizes from the Progressive Conservatives today as the Commons interrupted the throne speech debate to consider the part in the lengthy dispute, which has virtually halted the flow of grain through West Coast ports.

Last summer, the government appeared to take sides in the contract dispute between 800 grain workers and five elevator companies. It said Parliament would legislate a settlement based on the conciliation report prepared by Dr. Neil Perry of Victoria.

The Perry report, released in the spring, was adopted by the Grain Workers' Union, but rejected by the companies, which said it would be "extraordinarily" costly.

While Conservative House Leader Gerald Baldwin has said his party will help speed the bill through the Commons, speakers for his party were expected to hit the government hard during the debate.

Critics of the government say the dispute might have been resolved through negotiation if Mr. Munro, Otto Lang, minister responsible for the wheat board and Prime Minister Trudeau had not stepped forward and said the Perry report would be legislated.

Stanfield say that caused the companies and the union to bargain half heartedly, knowing that Parliament would intervene.

Jim: "Let's write about squeeze plays."

Oswald: "They're like death and taxes. We will always have them."

Jim: "They are happy things for the squeezer, but tend to make the squeezee most unhappy."

Oswald: "The simplest of these plays is the two-suit squeeze against one opponent. Some times you have to prepare this sort of squeeze. On other occasions it is effortless automatically if declarer just runs off high cards in all the suits."

Jim: "South takes a quick look at dummy and counts 12 top tricks. Four spades, four hearts, three diamonds and the club. One opponent must have a diamond stopper since suits never break 5-4-3-1. Both may hold club stoppers, but if the man who holds the long diamonds happens to hold all the high clubs he is going to be squeezed."

Oswald: "The process is a simple one. South wins the club lead and runs off the spades and hearts. West must make three discards. He also can only throw two clubs and must guard the diamonds on the lead of the last major suit card."

Bartholin Cyst Needs Attention

By G. C. THOMPSON, MD

Dear Dr. Thosteson: I became aware of a swelling in the vaginal area about the size of a walnut but when I saw the doctor, within four days, the lump had gone down.

He called it a Bartholin cyst and insinuated, perhaps jokingly, that it resulted from frequent sex. Certainly not in my case. He said such cysts come and go and it should be removed if it becomes infected.

Now, a month later, the cyst is back in the same location and again seems tied in with my menstrual period. I don't like to bother my family doctor but I find this worrisome and a discomfort although not painful.

Should I see a gynecologist, or go back to my G. P., or forget it (or try to)?

Could this cyst be caused by a persistent yeast infection? I have hesitated to get medication for?—M.S.

There is a Bartholin gland on each side of the vaginal opening. Like any gland, if the duct becomes obstructed, it becomes a cyst. In your case the duct evidently cleared itself as the first swelling went down. Then it clogged up again. In all likelihood it will continue this pattern because that's the way cysts often behave.

If the cyst becomes infected as shown forms and can be very painful so you've been fortunate. When such a cyst—which is not uncommon—does cause trouble, or if it becomes infected, the whole gland is removed. Otherwise swelling will keep recurring.

I would suggest seeing a gynecologist concerning it. There are various forms of trouble with a Bartholin gland. (I'm sure your doctor was kidding about the "frequent sex.") Some vaginal infection is a likely cause, however. Or sensitivity to "feminine hygiene" products. Only dyes in clothing or some such factor. Snugly-fitting pants, tight blue jeans, slacks or pajamas can be a factor. And sometimes you can't put your finger on the cause of that or any other gland becoming excyted. Glands do it, that's all.

In your case the itching wouldn't be the cause—but whatever is causing the itching may also have affected the gland, which is why I suggest that you see a gynecologist and see what needs to be done to correct both problems.

Dear Dr. Thosteson: Some years ago I knew three boys who had mumps and were quite sick. They all became sterile. Since there has been so much progress in medicine, is there any way to correct this?—T.W.

No. But now there's mumps vaccine for boys who are getting into their teens or later and have not had the mumps. The disease is relatively harmless for young children, becomes more risky as they approach or reach adulthood. So it's safer to have the vaccine and avoid the disease.

Dear Dr. Thosteson: My mother told me that bovine can cause skin cancer. I have asked several people about this and no one knows for sure. If they do cause skin cancer, how many can endanger a person?

Is a person tending to bruise easily more susceptible to skin cancer?—L.C.

I've never had a very exact definition of a "thicks" but presumably it's safe to say that it can mean an acne eruption or a pimple.

To answer your questions—or try to—I don't know of any indication that bovines, regardless of the number, have any relation to skin cancer. Same goes for easy-bruises.

One thing that is known to be associated with skin cancer is long and excessive exposure to sunlight, plus the word is "excessive." And it takes years to develop.

IN MEMORIAM

ALFORD — In loving memory of a wonderful mother, Mrs. Isabel Alford who went to be with the Lord three years ago today, Oct. 7, 1971.
Sweet memories linger
Of a friend we loved so dear
And those who think of her today,
Are those who loved her most.
Inserted by her daughter Mary and family.

TIL THE called her home to suffer no more,
Lovingly remembered by son Bill.

CARD OF THANKS

We would like to thank our relatives, friends and neighbors for the gifts received during our illness. We received flowers, evening in hospital, cards and gifts while at home. Special thanks to our family and those who so regularly did the nursing duty. All of them that said to wait and every prayer that was said. May God bless you in his own special way.
Inserted and Written Reid

I would like to express my sincere thanks to my relatives, friends and neighbors for cards, flowers and gifts, Rev. Pearson, Dr. Lowe and Dr. Engleur. Also nurses in Intensive Care Unit and Ward 3 Belleville General for the care we received in the hospital and returning home.
Gertrude Cassidy.

REAL ESTATE FOR SALE

to avail yourself of a 10% mortgage. The past two weeks has seen numerous prudent purchasers buying our homes with low interest rate mortgages. We have a long, low line bedroom split level on the west side, a three bedroom split ranch on the east side, a four bedroom two storey on west side and a mansard roofed split level on the east side. Not only do these houses have a low interest rate, but the cost price is far below the reproduction cost.

LAROCHE HOMES
We have a choice of three, four bedroom homes on the west side. Two of them have over 2,500 square feet and one has 2,000 square feet. Each one has a family room, with fireplace. We have two larger bungalows in rural settings. Each of them has a family room and fireplace.

Most of these houses are nearing completion-but there is still time to select paint and flooring colors.

Mustangs Rebound from Deficit To Trounce Waterloo Warriors

By THE CANADIAN PRESS

University of Western Ontario Mustangs rebounded from two touchdown against them in the first six minutes of the game to trounce University of Waterloo Warriors 44-31 in Ontario-Quebec Intercollegiate Football action Saturday.

The game in London was only 43 seconds old when Doug Crossman of the Warriors intercepted a Western pass and raced 15 back 38 yards for a touchdown. The convert was blocked.

Waterloo then recovered a fumbled punt on the Western five-yard line and Steve Ilbert cracked over from a yard out three plays later for the second touchdown. Tim Craine added the extra point and then scored a single.

But the Mustangs came back quickly to score on an 82-yard drive which took just five plays. Quarterback Rick Scarinzi scored the touchdown and Chris Skopelianos added the extra point.

Western's next drive score on a one-yard sneak by quarterback Bill Robinson in the second quarter, plus an extra point by Skopelianos. Just before halftime, Western linebacker Jon Jewell intercepted a Warriors' pitchout and raced 20 yards for a touchdown, also converted by Skopelianos.

Bud Wilson, Curt Rush and Jay Parry also scored a touchdown apiece for Western, Skopelianos had five converts and the field goal.

Doug Crossman scored the Warriors' other touchdown and Craine was credited with two singles as well as the convert.

In other league action Saturday, Queen's University Golden Gaels downed York University Yeomen 30-7 in Kingston; Laurentian University Warriors defeated University of Guelph Gryphons 26-13 in Guelph; Wilfrid Laurier University Golden Hawks trounced University of Windsor Lancers 29-3 in Kitchener; Bishop's University turned back McMaster University 18-10 in Montreal; University of Ottawa Gee-Gees edged Carleton University Ravens 8-7 in Ottawa and University of Toronto Blues dumped McGill University 24-21 in Montreal.

Gaels 30 Yeomen 7

The Gaels had two touchdowns each from Bruce Pollock and Brian Tilley, Wil Kennedy kicked three converts and a single and Tom Taylor had two singles.

Scoring for the Yeomen were Kevin Beagle with a touchdown and Duncan McLeod with a convert.

Warriors 26 Gryphons 13

Halfback Wade Clare ran for 114 yards and scored two touchdowns for Loyola. Defensive halfback Art Holden scored the other touchdown for the Warriors. Mike Lapensee converted two touchdowns and kicked two singles and a nine-yard field goal. A 36-yard single by John Montelpare counted for the other Loyola point.

Bruce Morris scored both Guelph touchdowns, with Phil Lavesque converting the first.

Hawks 29 Lancers 3

Wilfrid Laurier led 5-3 at halftime before getting touchdowns from Mike Weller and Dave Palmer in the third quarter. John Wintermeyer converted both touchdowns and also had three field goals. Hawks other six points came on three safeties.

Windsor got its two points early in the first quarter when quarterback Gord Taylor conceded a safety.

Bishop's 18 McMaster 10

Bishop's scoring opened in the first quarter with a single by Dave McKillan, followed by a second-quarter touchdown by Dave Mullins and a convert by Joe Cammalleri. McMillan scored another single in the third and Bishop's had a touchdown in the fourth and a field goal.

Pat McMaster, Ron Southwick scored a touchdown in the third, which Len Meader converted. Wheeler also scored a field goal in the fourth quarter.

Tweeds 48 McGill 21

Mark Braggagnolo scored three touchdowns as Toronto maintained its undefeated, untied record atop the league standings with a 4-0 mark. Al Brockley, Brent Elsey and Libert Castillo added majors for the Blues, with Don Wright kicked six converts and two field goals.

Kidnapping of President Is Novel by Templeton

By JACK TRACY
The Canadian Press

The president of the United States has been abducted and is held in a booby-trapped armored truck in Times Square. One of his abductors is armed and coolly demands fulfilment of ransom terms while an accomplice raves with crowds of the curious in the square ready to blow up the truck-prison with an electronic detonator.

That is the situation Charles Templeton creates in his just-published novel, The Kidnapping of the President.

This is a novel of suspense, rather than one in which the characters are carefully delineated.

Author Templeton has a obviously done an amount of research worthy of that other novelist, Arthur Hailey. And it's the skilful use of bits of fact—whether it concerns explosives or the workings of the U.S. police and the Secret Service—that keeps the suspense moving.

The president is Adam Northfield Scott, head of an administration some time in the near future—a little after the regimes of Richard Nixon and Gerald Ford. Little of the president's character be comes known and is not necessary because for the most of the novel he is shackled in the the truck a few feet from a bot of explosives wired to a radio antenna and to head cavity vibration sensors.

The hero is of the novel Is Gerry Regan, Canadian-born head of the White House Secret Service detail, who prevents through the president's ordeal as he watches command post in a Times Square Dentistry.

When Sinclair Lewis wrote a novel in the 1930s, It Can't Happen Here, about the coming of a Fascist regime in the U.S., he built his book on known facts—things that had already happened.

Author Templeton uses a similar method.

The vehicle in which the president is incarcerated — though designated as a Brink's armored truck—was originally sold by a Montreal banking firm which had no use for it.

The author has a Brink's spokesman emphasize that his firm junks its old trucks instead of selling them. And it's known that Expo 67 in Montreal, when it could not contract a security firm to haul its cash, used its own trucks. What has happened to them?

The president's abductors are members of a South American guerrilla organ-

Edmonton Sees Plays in Plaza

EDMONTON (CP) — An idea first developed over a drink bloomed into a lunch-hour treat for downtown workers and shoppers last summer.

Brian Dale, director of the city library system, and Irene Watty of the Citadel Theatre, were having a drink one afternoon and started talking about what could be done on the plaza outside the downtown library.

"What finally happened was that she said she'd get together a group of players for the summer if I could come up with the funds," recalled Mr. Dale.

Mr. Dale got a total of $6,000 from the provincial and municipal governments and the Kiwanis Boys Association enough to give six aspiring actors a job for the summer.

The actors between the ages of 18 and 21, earned $100 a week while gaining experience in their chosen profession.

Crowds of more than 100 stopped at the plaza on warm summer days to view the performance. The players stuck to comedy and looked for different material for each daily performance.

"We tried to go for things on the lighter side," said artistic director David servila. "If you start getting into something too heavy, you limit the appeal."

Tories Tie Up Grain Strike Bill

By VIC PARSONS

OTTAWA (CP) — Government plans for quick passage of a bill to end the Vancouver grainhandlers' strike were wrecked Monday and more hours of debate on the proposed back-to-work legislation were expected today.

The government had hoped the bill would receive second reading, approval in principle, by Monday night. It proposed slitting late if necessary, but the parties in the Commons could not agree on extended hours.

As the first day of debate ended, Justice Minister Otto Lang, responsible for the wheat board, asked that the bill be sent to committee. However, Frank Hamilton (PC—Swift Current-Maple Creek), a former head of the board of grain commissioners, signified his intention to speak and there were indications that more Conservatives might follow.

The Conservatives are opposed to the bill while the New Democrats and Social Credit members have said they will support it.

After debate on approval in principle, the bill must be approved by Commons committee, then final approval of the House. It then goes to the Senate.

The bill, introduced Monday, would provide pay raises to the 550 Vancouver grainhandlers of 87 cents an hour retroactive to Nov. 30, 1973. That would bring the basic hourly wage rate to $5.85 from $4.98.

It also would make law the terms of a conciliator's report prepared last spring by Dr. Neil Perry of Victoria, leaving the parties to work out details of a collective agreement. If necessary a referee would be provided to interpret the report.

The Perry report, accepted by the Grain Workers' Union but rejected by the five grain elevator companies involved, suggests another pay increase of 65 cents an hour effective Dec. 1, 1974, to bring the basic wage of $6.65.

Mr. Lang, Mr. Munro and Prime Minister Trudeau all had warned the companies that Parliament would legislate a settlement based on the Perry report if agreement was not reached.

Mr. Lang said Monday that each day the legislation was delayed would create the wheat board planning problems.

The strike, which follows a slowdown by the workers since last May, has virtually halted export grain shipments from Vancouver. The slowdown in exports also has brought complaints from Chinese and Japanese buyers.

Mr. Lang and Mr. Munro both referred to the poor record of industrial relations history in the grainhandling industry with Mr. Lang alleging that the companies had twisted facts to convince the public that the Perry proposals were extremely inflationary.

Jobless Total Jumps

OTTAWA (CP) — The unemployment rate moved upward in September—to 5.8 per cent seasonally adjusted from 5.5—due mainly to increases in unemployment in the under-25 age group, Statistics Canada reported today.

The labor force shrank by more than 200,000 compared with August. This was partly due to students returning to school but women generally were dropping out of the work force in greater proportions.

Among the provinces, New Brunswick was hardest hit by gains in unemployment levels. Newfoundland and Alberta were the only provinces with declines in the seasonally-adjusted rates.

The participation rate—the proportion of the population with jobs or seeking work—dropped by four-tenths of a percentage point in September to 58.3 per cent.

Seasonally-adjusted figures are considered by economists to be better indicators of the performance of the economy and the individual adjustments and discounts most of the large drop in the labor force because there is a drop at this time every year.

However, on a seasonally-adjusted basis there was a decline of 62,000 in the number of persons with jobs. The drop followed three months of increases, for all age groups, there was a slight increase in employment for men and a sharp drop for women.

The number of persons employed full time dropped 67,000 to 8,030,000 while part-time employment declined by 30,000.

Statistics Canada qualified its estimate of the September unemployment rate by saying seasonal weighting factors may be causing part of the large month-to-month increase.

Tax Increases Likely For Many Americans

WASHINGTON (AP) — Many Americans would face a five-per-cent increase in taxes under the new economic program President Ford is ready to unveil.

He also is expected to propose tax relief for low-income families, a public-service employment program and special help for areas hard hit by inflation and high interest rates, especially the housing industry.

Ford was scheduled to outline his new economic program and to address this afternoon to Congress.

Ford's program will be based on the results of the economic summit conference that was held here Sept. 23-24.

Anticipating a possible reaction on Wall Street to the president's announcements, White House press secretary Jim Hagerson said details will be kept "as closely held as possible until the (stock) market closes" at 4 p.m. EDT.

But a number of details were disclosed by various administration sources. Although they lacked official confirmation, they include:

—A five-per-cent surtax on income taxes paid by persons with family incomes of $15,000 and more.

—A five-per-cent surtax on corporate income-tax payments.

—Tax relief for low-income groups, possibly through an increase in the personal tax exemption at those levels, which now is $750.

—A housing subsidy program of $7 billion to $8 billion to lower the cost of home mortgage interest rates for many families.

TORONTO (CP) — The Globe and Mail says automobile insurance premiums may increase by as much as 15 per cent in January pending the results of a study on claims loss trends, expected to be completed this month.

Munro Claims Poison at Work

OTTAWA (CP) — The grainhandling industry has a "poisonous labor relations" history that features frequent rejection by management of third party conciliation efforts, Labor Minister John Munro said Monday.

Mr. Munro told the Commons the government and the country cannot endure the "continuing, disruptive and damaging consequences."

Back-to-work legislation introduced in the Commons Monday was the second since 1973 to deal with work stoppages involving Vancouver grainhandlers. In August, 1972, longshoremen also were covered under a special act of Parliament.

Mr. Munro also cited the dispute a 1953 when a work stoppage closed grain elevators or two months. Former prime minister Louis St. Laurent then hinted strongly that the government would seize the elevators, Mr. Munro said.

"He was, understandably, aroused by the refusal of the company presidents to come to Ottawa, sending instead their lawyers. Twenty-one years and six months later the attitudes and the situation remain much the same."

Mr. Munro said that goodwill and reasonable attitudes cannot be legislated, but added there must be an improvement in the situation.

Mr. Munro said the present dispute "marks yet another low" for relations finace in an industry that for years has been characterized by confrontation and hostility."

The special commission will examine the history of labor relations in the industry, and its impact on efficiency and productivity. Mr. Munro said he hopes it will lead to a reasonable, acceptable industrial relationship.

Heavy Water Leak Began Last July

TORONTO (CP) — Ontario Hydro said today that radioactive heavy water began leaking in July from three fuel channels at the Pickering nuclear power station, but the problem has been corrected.

Robert Swift, a public relations spokesman for Hydro, said the leaks occurred at the core of the nuclear reactor but resulted in "absolutely no danger" to anyone inside or outside of the station.

The first leak was discovered late in July during a routine check that revealed heavy water seeping from a joint in one fuel channel, and that channel had to be replaced, he said.

Two other leaks were later discovered as checks continued on the "hundreds" of fuel channels. The two other defective channels were also replaced.

Hydro engineers suspect the leaks were caused by a defective alloy in the fuel channels, the spokesman said.

College Strike Called Off

TORONTO (CP) — The Civil Service Association of Ontario (CSAO) has called off a work stoppage scheduled for today by 8,500 community college teachers across the province.

However, the cancellation may have come too late to inform all teachers, teaching sources here said.

Peter Churchill, faculty president at Humber College, said Monday that the college will be closed today. Its said most of the province's 25,000 full time community college students may also stay home because they were told the teachers would not be at work.

Mr. Churchill said in an interview that he and other members of the teacher negotiating team are "turning mad" that the CSAO negotiators called off the walkout without the teachers' approval.

Judith Gother, a CSAO staff representative, said a good effort was made to reach teacher leaders after the walkout was called off at 7 p.m.

The move came after Judge J. C. Anderson, chairman of the Ontario Public Service Arbitration Board, agreed to take no further part in the current contract negotiations.

A CSAO spokesman said Monday night an ad-hoc chairman will be appointed to replace Judge Anderson for the duration of the dispute. The appointment will be made jointly by the CSAO and the Ontario Council of Regents, governing body of the province's 22 community colleges.

The CSAO has argued that the arbitration board has been shifted in favor of the government. The board is composed of the government nominee and one union nominee, with the chairman, until now, appointed by the government.

The teachers, forbidden by law to go on strike, have also demanded a 15-per-cent immediate salary increase and a 20-per-cent retroactive increase.

Poor Timing For Easing Of Pot Law

OTTAWA (CP) — Just as the Liberal government proposes new laws to reduce the penalties for marijuana and hashish offences, research in the United States provides new evidence that cannabis is far more hazardous than previously suspected.

The research has found that cannabis, the generic term for both marijuana and hashish, lowers resistance to disease, causes chemical imbalances in the body and is tied to birth defects.

The Liberal government said more than two years ago it would remove cannabis offences from the Narcotics Control Act, thereby removing the jail sentence for simple possession.

Mile Maloney (left) a teacher at Loyalist College, was one of the 14 pickets stationed at college entrances early this morning to hand out informational literature to arriving administrators and office staff. One of those who accepted a handout was D. R. "Nick" Fraser, director of physical facilities and planning at the college. The pickets were called off an hour early because of an agreement reached last night in Toronto to send the teacher dispute to arbitration.

Petition Results In Stop Signs

PICTON — Spurred by a citizens' petition, Picton town council will seek designation of Pitt and York streets as a four-way stop intersection.

Town solicitor Jack Ward Monday night was directed to prepare the necessary letter for the ministry of transport subject to the recommendation by the Picton chief of police.

Council's decision followed presentation of a petition carrying 38 signatures by Pitt St. resident Christine Bovay.

Mrs. Bovay told council there is no slow traffic on these streets and the Picton Police department lacks the manpower required for regular vigilance.

York St. is one of the main roads to the Ontario Health facilities and the Picton Public Works department garage and is also a favorite route for motorists avoiding Main St. congestion.

Kingston Hall, located at the corner of Pitt and York street is a pick-up point for children bused to Queen Elizabeth School.

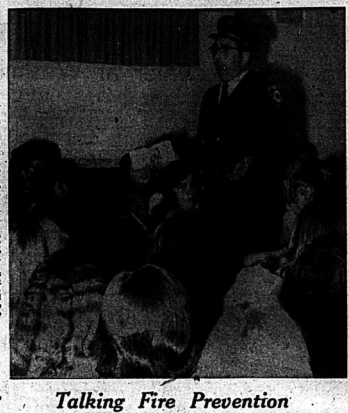
The petition stated that, owing to the hill on York St., near the corner of Hill and York streets, visibility of east-bound traffic is limited.

With the completion of a new housing development underway on Pitt St., traffic will be heavier and there will be more children in the area.

"It is virtually impossible for the police of the town to use the radar unit on this street with only one police vehicle at their disposal," stated the petition.

Council's decision to seek a four way stop was opposed by councillor Jack Evans who disagreed it represents a logical" solution to the problem.

Councillor Evans said it is the obligation of the parent to train his other children to stay off the streets. He noted stop signs "in every yard" are not a practical solution to the potential hazard.



Campers Want Park For Weekend Rally

TRENTON — Council will ask the Parks Board to temporarily amend its bylaw to permit use of Centennial Park as a camp ground for approximately 70 trailers during a four-day May weekend rally next year, it was decided at a committee of the whole session here Monday.

The Parks Board bylaw now forbids use of Centennial as a trailer camp. A request request for park space by the Wally Byam Caravan Club was turned over to council for its consideration Monday.

Club members want to use the Centennial Park parking lot as well as rent a portion of the Trenton Community Gardens as a social centre.

In a letter to council Parks Board secretary Marian Baker states "we leave the problem to your discretion" since the board "cannot authorize the violation of one of its bylaws".

A suggestion from the board that council could over-rule the board's bylaw was met with the statement Monday that the town does not have such power.

Coming out in strong support of the trailer rally May 16-23, Councillor Edward Todd complained that boaters going to Trent and Murray are not charged for the privilege, but trailer owners have to pay for nearly everything when they camp.

Mr. Todd, himself a trailer owner, said he strongly objected to what he felt were discriminatory practices.

Taking another tact, Councillor Robert Wannamaker said out-of-town vacationers have complained Trenton does not have any facilities that trailers can use overnight.

Pointing to the quarry, an alternative proposal was suggested that would allow the club trailers to use land south of Conch Cres. The land, roughly south-east of the Community Gardens, has not been developed by the parks board.

Councillors, however, admitted the land may not be suitable — stating it gets very muddy during rain spells.

Motorist Escapes Injury

PICTON — A Picton area motorist escaped injury early today when he car he was driving left the road and skidded over an embankment on the Cherry Valley Rd. about two miles south of Picton.

John Todd, 37, of RR 2 Picton, was southbound at 3 a.m. when his car left the east side of the road, striking the embankment. Police say the vehicle skidded over the edge, landing on its wheels. Damage to the car was estimated at $1,600. Charges are pending.

Talking Fire Prevention

Trenton fire department Inspector Robert Haker fields questions from St. Peter's School students Monday during one of 10 school visits he will make to encourage observance of fire prevention measures at home. This week is Fire Prevention Week across Canada and the United States. The 580 students at St. Peter's Monday are among those who will see two films outlining fire prevention techniques.

Sidney Approves Wage Increase

Sidney Township roads superintendent Bob Lightfoot told council Monday night, his workers' wages "aren't high enough", and that men are making more money on welfare or unemployment insurance.

Acting on the superintendent's comments, council authorized raising the minimum scale to $3 — an hour — a 30-cent increase.

Mr. Lightfoot said during an interview he is having trouble getting men because wages paid aren't high enough.

"I've had men that have preferred welfare ... I don't sympathize with them," he said.

"They haven't any pride if they prefer welfare to working," he said.

Mr. Lightfoot said his department could have used two extra men all summer in the trucking end of the business.

Council also passed a motion calling for tenders for a truck and driver to supplement the roads department.

Report Urges Sidewalks

TRENTON — It is expected council will establish a policy next week to include the installation of sidewalks on arterial or collector streets as part of any future agreements between Trenton and subdivision developers.

Such a policy, discussed during a committee of the whole session here Monday, would eliminate the re-occurrence of the McGill St. affair in which sidewalks are to be installed on a built up street.

Council's September decision to install a walk on McGill came after petitions and counter-petitions for and against the sidewalk from area residents.

Monday, an administration board report urged council to give "special attention" to sidewalks. If they are required in a subdivision, they should be looked at as a mandatory service in an agreement, the report states.

Councillors generally agreed that details of sidewalk placement would be worked out with the developer.

They rejected the report's suggestion that all sidewalks be placed within two feet of a homeowner's property line. This would have provided for a 15-foot town-owned boulevard.

In other business, council decided it will switch coverage of town employees from a private insurance company to the Workmen's Compensation board (WCB).

With the move, council expects to save 59 per cent on Trenton's present premium payments, a reported appreciate $6,000.

Council was assured by treasurer Brian Fagan the town would not be locked into coverage with the WCB, and could return to private coverage at any time.

REAL ESTATE:

Seven Reasons Why

Ald. McKinney
A. E. McKinney Realty Ltd.

Ownership of income-producing property can be one of the greatest ways you can put your money to work and keep more of what you earn. Here is a list of pleasures:

1. Employ leverage and acquire property with a minimum of cash outlay.
2. Enjoy a higher cash flow than in other investments.
3. Retain profits you earn by paying lower taxes on such income through the use of depreciation allowances.
4. Ability to refinance and take out large sums.
5. On sale date, enjoy lower capital gain rates.
6. Limit your liability in many instances.

There are many opportunities available ranging from residential homes and condominiums to apartments and most importantly, real estate is one of the best hedges against inflation.

Labor Changes Tune

Last spring The Intelligencer asked the Quinte District Labor Council of blackmailing city council by threatening to boycott this year's United Way campaign.

It seems local labor leaders have seen the error of their ways . . . at least temporarily.

Well give them (United Community Services) one more last chance," said vice-president Ian Reilly, the man who put the original boycott proposal on the labor council agenda.

Mr. Reilly hastened to add that another boycott threat would materialize next spring if a new program budgetting system did not work out to the labor councils satisfaction.

There was one dissenting voice. "We back down in a situation like this, it makes the council look ridiculous and labor look ridiculous," fumed a spokesman for UAW Local 1036 as he threatened to talk fellow executives into withdrawing from the labor council over the issue.

On the contrary, the labor council only looked ridiculous when it put itself in the preposterous position of trying to dictate to its members what their charities should be.

UCS welcomes labor back into the fold, and has agreed to increase its representation in their activities.

If organized labor puts half as much energy into this month's United Way campaign, as they did in past criticisms, the $140,000 objective will surely be exceeded.

Round Three

Men who may someday coach your sons have said they don't think fighting in hockey is necessary such a bad thing.

Led by the powerful Junior A delegation, a special Ontario Hockey Association meeting last week overturned the September innovation of a rule that would banish a player from a hockey game for participation in a fight.

That rule came about largely as the result of a one-man report into hockey violence by Toronto lawyer William McMurtry.

The rationale behind opposition to the new rule is absurd. High-sticking will become more prevalent, said the fight-and-you-quit rule detractors.

If that were indeed the case, all that needs to be done is the toughening of penalties imposed for illegal stick usage. Knowledgeable hockey men have been saying for years there is absolutely no reason for any player to be skating around with his stick above his waist.

The puck, after all, is on the ice.

Those who spokesmen who rescinded the new OHA fighting rule may have bought themselves more grief than what they considered was an overly-stringent regulation.

In the next round — and the fight is not over yet — they may not be dealing with your association, they could well find themselves on the opposite side of the faceoff circle from Bill Davis, whose Queen's Park team commissioned Mr. McMurtry's study of hockey rough-stuff.

If sport associations like the OHA indicate they are not responsible enough to adequately control those who play under their auspices, the province may have to do some refereeing.

Nixon's Agony

"There's Nixon," said the young Belleville teen, a hint of pity in her voice, as she stabbed a foot at the front-page newspaper picture on the newsstand. "Oh yeah. . ." her companion responded absently, and went on flipping through the pages of a fashion magazine. The exchange lacked compassion, but may be typical of public reaction to the former president these days. He looked ill and haggard leaving hospital, a shadow of the smiling man who posed for an amateur photographer who came upon him picknicking with daughter Julie on a beach near San Clemente after his resignation. Here is a man with an agonizing past and a future already made more difficult by ill-health.

History and a Brief Encounter at Westminster Abbey

By JOHN D. HARRISON
Foreign Affairs Analyst
Thomson News Service

LONDON — Westminster Abbey is a great depository of the British heritage, the ancestors of the faith which Britons have nourished — and find essential even in the age of the "honest to less church" and Jesus Christ Super Star.

A personal reminder by any visitor is British as the spirit of these islands meant his return visit to this 900 year-old pile.

The soft but deepening grogan in the stones of the floor at the public entrances — and entry caused by the feet of tens of thousands, attest to the flocks of the faithful and curious who come to see the place where the centuries span memorials from Henry VII's chapel, the first Tudor king and scaffler of late medieval England to the poet Ben Jonson, memorial to the dead, young fliers of 1940 who saved Britain from Nazism in the "Cloudless" description of a friend of that immemorable year.

The latest was from the Old Testament, read in impeccable and ecclesiastical tones the expects in the Abbey with some showmanship perhaps, along with reverence.

And the text was "Lord, Open the young man's eyes." And it was a good text because it spoke about the young being made aware of a world of imagination and spirit, the one which had created the likes of the angel in an earlier time, an insensitive creature who helped medieval man to be creative and inspirational in a very hard age.

The canon of Westminster Abbey had said that as a modern world imagination was still important. Jesus Christ as the natural figure was the first Old London plays was a very striking between in them. Christ came, alive through the imaginations of the young playwrights who wrote the York music hits. Traditional yet modern, Westminster is the context of the best Anglican sermons of the Queen's Anglican age.

One always hopes to meet a celebrity when a stranger in a far distant church. The next next to me at the front of the chancel was empty, but not for long. Into it came a blonde charmer. I'm certain a famous British movie actress whose name still escapes me.

As the service progressed, I noticed few lips moving to the traditional hymns and prayers, in spite of the fact the congregation included two bishops and several priests. Perhaps British reserve didn't extend this far?

I concentrated on my blonde opposite number, and suspected her there couldn't be many Anglicans here, no one seemed to know the hymns. At the end and later told me not to forget my sunscreen under the pew as we left.

I drifted out where I was directed to go with the rest of the congregation through the Death Yard into bright, September sun, she briefly into the poets' corner to look at their graves.

I saw her go into the street, hail a cab and disappear from my view. It had occured to me to "desecrate" the program during the service, the one which said it was the Sunday of St. Michael and All Angels, to write on it, "how about coffee after the service?" and pass it over to her.

Why not? But I didn't, the Canadian reticence taking hold and later a feeling that perhaps a real live angel had escaped me in the abbey along with all the incendiary uses of Sunday school and Bible stories which had done so long ago.

TRIANGULAR RING

Some Encouraging Signs

Stock Market Is Not Down and Out

By VINCENT EGAN
Business and Consumer Affairs Writer
Thomson News Service

The stock market, taking its cue from Mark Twain's celebrated quip, seems to be saying that, reports of its death have been greatly exaggerated.

Sure, prices are 25% lower in 12 years, 1973-74 has been one long bear market, many investment firms are going out of business or merging with others, and for financial people are predicting an early recovery.

But there are indications that the financial community is making a renewed effort to remove fault in existence. There are some straws in the wind:

—The stock boards of American stock exchanges have added 20 minutes to their daily trading sessions, lengthening the day to six hours. Brokers hope that the extra time will mean extra business.

—For the first time in a long while, a major new industrial stock—Sony Corp. of Tokyo—has been listed on the Toronto, Montreal and Vancouver Stock Exchanges. This is the first listing of a Japanese security in Canada.

—Those three stock exchanges, together with the Investment Dealers Association of Canada, have submitted to the federal government an imaginative proposal for tax incentives that would encourage Canadians to invest.

The proposal is obviously aimed at Finance Minister John Turner's budget to be presented to Parliament today this month or in early November.

The stock exchanges the IDA thinks these suggestions are:

—Let the first $1,000 of dividend income be exempted from income tax.

—Allow capital losses (which most investors have suffered this year and last) to be used to offset taxable income from any source, up to $10,000 rather than the present limit of $1,000.

—Create a tax shelter called Canadian Investment Plan, which would allow individuals to deduct up to $5,000 a year from taxable income and invest it in government and corporate bonds, listed Canadian stocks or mutual funds. Lifetime limit would be $50,000, and the exemption would apply only to new securities purchases, so that investments already held could not share the tax shelter.

The plan stands virtually no chance of being accepted by the government in its present tentative form, and has only a modest prospect of acceptance in any form.

The Trudeau government's policies have nearly always leaned toward penalizing rather than rewarding investment, and the proposals of the exchanges and IDA seem too favorable to savers and risk-takers.

Meanwhile, no encouragement whatever is emanating from the trading floors of the stock exchanges.

The bellwether Dow Jones industrial average—which reflects the movement of 30 blue-chip New York stocks—fell 28.6 per cent in the first nine months of this year, much farther than its 18.6 per cent drop in full-year 1973.

The most constructive analysis that comes from investment researchers can offer is that the lower the market goes, the nearer it is to the basis for a new recovery.

That, however, can point to any convincing evidence to justify that recovery.

A Need for Economic Discipline

The Brantford Expositor

Times were never more difficult than now for those whose profession it is to read the economic and financial signs and give advice on how money should be invested.

Today they operate amid bombed-out stock markets, guesswork as to where interest rates are going and a welter of statistics that, when charted, look like the graph of the human heart so many times, only to be reversed soon, that even their most devoted followers must have a feel that they have been bull-doned.

The most sober and cautious economists, those who usually prepare the monthly letters issued by banks and other big lenders, financial institutions. They have the tea-leaf reading down pat, and concentrate on discussing broad and basic matters. This approach has produced from the Canadian branch of the Royal Trust Company Bank a survey that draws attention to a little-noted aspect of owning property under a mortgage in these uncertain times.

How secure is the position of such persons compared with those whose main investment is in shares? Positive points to out that in the 1929 collapse most of the shares that became worthless were bought on margin, which meant they were largely bought with borrowed money.

Millions of such investors, or more correctly, speculators, were wiped out. By contrast, in 1929 most owners of houses (a much smaller number than today) held their property free and did not lose them.

Today, if a slump came, the situation would be reversed. Most stocks are now owned outright and, in the absence of market collapse, could eventually be sold at a profit, whereas vast numbers of homes and other properties are held only on an often slender down payment and under an obligation to pay off the mortgage over long periods. In the early years of the mortgage, the payments on the mortgage go mostly for interest, and the owner's equity grows initially at a snail's pace while a bugs debt hangs over him.

Therefore, concludes the survey, there is far more voluntary debt read now than in common stocks, now selling at their lowest price-earnings ratio in memory. Contributing to the proposed position of being a mortgage-holder has been the federal government's encouragement of low down payments and extended repayment periods.

These terms seem attractive when the borrower considers he is give hostages to fortune and can trap in a time of inflation, but experience is experience difficulty in servicing your mortgages", says the survey, than industrial companies have experience in paying their dividends.

All this, of course, is only a tentative forecast, backed by some economic signs that are encouraging but not yet to be positive. By comparison with most other industrialized nations, Canada is fair, indeed economically. But if we are not careful, there will be a much more restraint and self-discipline than has been shown of late in union halls, complex board rooms and other centres of private power.

Robert Stanfield Soldiers On In Holding Action for Conservatives

By STEWART MacLEOD
OTTAWA (CP) — On the surface, the new parliament appeared almost identical to the previous one, but Conservative Leader Robert Stanfield was on his feet for only a few minutes when the difference became apparent.

Eight months ago when Mr. Stanfield led off a throne speech debate his party was within reach of power and the enthusiastic supporters generally felt their turn in government was only one election away.

That day in February, the slightly stooped figure rose slowly to his place, appearing relaxed, embarrassed by the waves of desk-banging applause and shouting that greeted his entry into the debate.

Tonight, Bob, could be heard above the din as virtually every one of his supporters hemmed forward in their seats and contributed to the bedlam of support.

Every time his tone toughened against the government, there were new shouts of encouragement.

"Atta boy, Bob," said George Hees (Broadview — Greenwood, Parti, Hastings).

Every Conservative stayed in his seat, ready to cut off heckling from across the floor of the Commons. They sensed inevitable victory: The final drive had begun.

But it wasn't like that this month. Now trailing the majority Liberal government by 6 seats and already committed to ongoing down before the next election, Mr. Stanfield was filling an entirely different role. The scattered bursts of applause—most of it light—indicated he was not being seen as a future prime minister.

A few of his followers didn't applaud when he rose to speak. Several others made deliberate trips behind the curtains to the light operated and several conversations were in progress during his speech.

At the end, Mr. Stanfield was given an enthusiastic round of applause, but it did not compare with the 79 seconds of banging and shouting that brought his February speech to a conclusion.

No Conservatives are going to publicly admit that enthusiasm or determination have fallen off, privately, some predict there could be dreary days ahead.

Mr. Stanfield has said he will provide a "vigorous and constructive" opposition, but many of his supporters say he faces his most difficult assignment since he entered Parliament in 1967. For the first time, he is leading a party in Parliament, knowing he is highly unlikely to take it into another general election.

"I am sure he's not enjoying it very much," said an MP who has not been one of Mr. Stanfield's most vocal supporters.

"But he's doing it for the good of the party and you have to admire him for it."

Turks in Washington's Doghouse

Arms Issue

The Christian Science Monitor

In the long run it cannot serve the strategic interests of the United States to cut off military aid to Turkey — as Congress threatens to do until progress is made toward a military settlement on Cyprus. Turkey is the cornerstone of NATO in the eastern Mediterranean and more vital to the alliance than Greece was.

In practical terms, Turkey at the moment may have all the arms it wants and U.S. bases are there. So even is the short run a temporary aid cutoff might not unduly alarm the Turks.

American lawmakers argue justifiably that Ankara violated the American foreign assistance law by using U.S. arms for an invasion of Cyprus. To this, the Turks would probably say they had a right under international law — the 1960 tripartite agreement on Cyprus — to intervene because the political balance on the island was being upset.

However, the action by the House of Representatives to cut off aid and the Senate's similar, if nonbinding, resolution may serve a useful purpose. They should bring home to the Turks the strength of American public opinion, which they have underestimated. If aid actually is stopped for a time despite opposition from the administration — they might realize that Secretary Kissinger has a point.

Italy's Communists Wait in Wings

By HILMI TOROS

ROME (AP) — The Italian Communist party is holding for a role in government in the midst of an economic crisis.

"We have only to wait for the right moment and join the government," party leader Enrico Berlinguer said in speaking through the set-aside policy of "historic compromise" with Christian Democrat Party.

Founded 53 years ago, the Communist party of Italy has more than a million members and draws about 30 per cent votes in elections.

Although it is the largest Marxist political group in the West and controls some city halls, including Rome and Bologna, it has no formal say in national administration.

Now, however it is waging a new offensive for at least a share of power in Italy since the collapse Thursday of the country's first post-war government.

Enrico Berlinguer, its secretary-general, says with the Italian economy slipping fast, the Communists are "no longer disposed to be passive spectators."

The image of the party is not what it used to be. Gone are the days of Palmiro Togliatti, the stalwart theoretician, who died at age 71 eight years ago. Also gone is the subservience of Khigi Longo, Togliatti's successor who now is the party's honorary president.

To many, the party has become a political machine with a high degree of efficiency and less appreciation of ideology. It has also moved to attract middle-of-the-road voters with a platform of "law and order, law and order."

It draws its support from a large segment of Italy's 20 million working class as well as the intelligentsia. The Italian voter who supports it is more likely to do so as a symbol of protest than out of any Communist conviction.

Then there is Roman Catholic, but is able to square that with Communist because, as Giulio Giorgetti, a 43-year-old Christian Democrat says, the party often gives the impression that it "cares."

"When you go to a party branch, you feel the camaraderie," says Giorgetti. "It is the only party in Italy which doesn't look down on workers. It should run the country for many reasons. One simple reason is that other parties have proven that they can't."

Whatever the Italian Communist party has become, it is under the undisputed leadership of Berlinguer, a 51-year-old ascetic and soft-spoken Sardinian.

A thin, short-haired man, Berlinguer is considered a pragmatist. He is said to be closer to the Moscow line than to Peking, but he has not spared the Kremlin criticism — particularly after the Soviet-led invasion of Czechoslovakia and the suppression of Russian intellectuals.

Today In History

Britain's worst train wreck in years killed 112 persons and injured about 130 when two speeding express commuter trains in commuters' train at Harrow, near London; 22 years ago—in 1952. The impact left a 40-foot high mass of tangled wreckage at the scene. Express, from Scotland, passed through a red signal light and two stop lights to plow into the rear of the stationary train, the second express from London, coming in the opposite direction, hit the front end.

1871—The Great Chicago Fire began. It cost 250 lives and destroyed 17 square miles worth of property.

Kinsmen Offer to Lead Picton Pool Project

PICTON — The Picton Kinsmen Club has volunteered to spearhead construction of a $120,000 outdoor community pool at Prince Edward County fairgrounds if backed by all local service clubs and municipal councils.

Sheldon Whitaker, club spokesman, told town council Monday the pool is needed because of problems of water pollution in Prince Edward Lake, there is lack of transportation and access to swimming areas and a lack of facilities for swimming instruction.

The Kinsmen Club proposes to mount a campaign to raise funds for the pool and to complete its construction by June, 1975. Regular written and oral progress reports would be supplied to all councils and service clubs.

Mr. Whitaker explained the heated pool would be Junior Olympic size, measuring 82.5 feet by 42 feet. Depth of water would slope from three to 12 feet. Pool capacity would be 200 to 250 persons.

A change room, equipment storage room and shower room also would be included.

Financing of the community pool was outlined by Mr. Whitaker and Kinsmen Ed Rose.

Both the town of Picton and the township of Hallowell have available grants of $25,000 each. The Picton Rotary Club has offered a tentative donation of $5,000 and the Kinsmen Club a contribution of $10,000.

With a balance of $75,000 to be raised the club would look to Prince Edward's other service clubs and organizations, students of Prince Edward Collegiate Institute and individual donors. Also, contributions from Picton town council and Prince Edward County council would be sought.

It was noted county council had approved a grant of $154,000 this year toward reconstruction of the Wellington Theatre. Therefore, the club would not be asked for county assistance toward the pool.

It was noted cost of the pool had been estimated with a 20 per cent allowance for inflation.

At completion, the pool would be turned over to Prince Edward County council. The proposed location at the fairgrounds is county-owned property.

"We intend that the pool be operated by the town of Picton parks and recreation committee," Mr. Whitaker told council.

He asked town council for an indication of its feelings toward the service club's proposal and was told by Mayor James Bird that it is "a personal thought."

The mayor said many campaigns for a community pool have been started but none progressed. He referred to the Kinsmen Club's question as "interesting" but observed county council should be contacted first to avoid possible misunderstandings.

And Thanksgiving's Coming

Each year the Codrington Fish Hatchery and Game Bird Farm raises and releases most end up on hunters' tables, Farm manager Arnold Draves oversees 12 brooder-houses where the eggs are hatched, raises the birds to adulthood and looks after the production of 300,000 trout by a year.

Registration Practice Attacked by Council

City taxpayers and their dependents will be charged residence in registration for recreational programs and activities operated by the Belleville Recreation Association Department.

This was the decision of city council Monday as recommendations from the recreation committee were approved.

Bus Plan Stalled

TRENTON — Councillors were hesitant to become involved in the question of a bus service in reston Monday until they knew the town would be forced to eventually subsidize a private transit system that could not pay its own way.

Discussion during the committee of the whole session was prompted by Councillor Robert Wannamaker who asked if a franchise granted a service was owned by anyone in Trenton.

He said he had recently been asked the same question by a Trenton man who was considering placing two 15-passenger buses into service.

The councillor said the two buses would run a route into downtown from the east and west sections of Trenton.

Council was not sure whether a franchise was owned in Trenton.

Clerk O. W. Larry was instructed to investigate any possible franchise holdings. It is believed a town firm does hold the right to run buses in Trenton. Two previous bus systems have operated here.

Referring to the Trenton man's inquiry, Mayor Robert Patrick said, "We have to be careful. It may be that he will pay, but it may not and then we may have to subsidize the buses."

Any request for a bus franchise would have to be put to the vote of Trenton residents, possibly during the municipal election Dec. 2.

Mr. Larry told council any request for a franchise would appear before council. A brief outlining the number of buses, routes and rates, must be approved by the town before the proposal is placed on a ballot for a vote.

The two recommendations — one calling for city residents to be given first consideration in registrations and the other for a 25 per-cent surcharge for out-of-town participants, came out of a special meeting of the recreation committee held last Friday.

Alderman Paul Russell, speaking for the recreation committee chairman Alderman John Smith, who was absent from the council meeting, said the recommendations were the result of players from Trenton being registered in the winter tennis program to be held at the Ben Bleecker Auditorium this winter. He said that many Belleville players were unable to get in.

Of the 85 full time registrations in the winter tennis program, 19 were from Trenton.

Alderman Russell said the committee feels that the new policy should not be retroactive to the end of the last year.

In the meantime, he said, the recreation department should provide, if additional facilities to accommodate the program.

Bell Plans Survey

Bell Canada will survey the Marmora area again in November to determine if subscribers favor a larger no-toll calling area. The survey will cover every customer in the area. Marmora clerk-treasurer William Shannon said directed by council to write Bell manager George Thompson to indicate council's wishes in having Madoc, Havelock and Stirling added to the Marmora calling area.

Trout, Pheasants Codrington Pride

By CASH MAHAFFY
Staff Reporter

CODRINGTON — A trout caught up near Orillia or a pheasant shot in a provincial wildlife management area anywhere in the province might well be a gift from the community, 10 miles north of Brighton.

The Codrington Fish Hatchery and Game Bird Farm, operated by the provincial ministry of natural resources, supplies game hunters with 300,000 trout and 18,000 ringnecked pheasants a year.

West of Highway 30, just north of the village, the 160 acre operation serves as a location for the rearing of fish and birds.

Fish hatchery waters come from springs that rise on the property and are fed into rearing tanks through a gravity system. The water flows year-round.

Trout species raised are lake, speckled and rainbows. Since the water area is restricted, no brood stock is kept on hand at Codrington. Eggs that have reached the "eyed" stage are shipped in from other hatcheries to be reared to stocking size.

Lake trout and rainbows — 100,000 of the former and 150,000 of the latter, — are used to stock the province's lakes and streams with these species after fish.

"We never have enough fish" Codrington manager Arnold Draves says. Occasionally, vation officers and biologists determine where stocking is required or desirable and the resources ministry sets up priorities that award the available fish to certain districts, bodies of water.

Speckled trout are another matter, they are raised at Codrington for the province's "put-and-take" fishing locations. Here, anglers may take up to five trout a day free. The nearest of these to Belleville are at Millbrook, southeast of Peterborough, and Brockville. Speckles from Codrington are shipped in on the basis. Size ranges from eight to 11 inches.

The fish are fed a high-protein commercial food that encourages rapid growth and the longest any strys at Codrington is one year — with a few exceptions.

These are the stars of the show at Codrington. Visitors, and there are about 15,000 a year — can look into the clear water of a special, protected area of the creek and see 30-lb. rainbows cavorting with seven or eight inch speckles. All they can do is lick their lips.

The pheasants, too, are on a one-year schedule. When they're released they're shipped out to wildlife management areas.

Established in the 1930s, Codrington has been helping to keep hunters and anglers happy ever since and will continue to do so as recreation becomes more available to more people.

Request for Bridge Study Shelved by Sidney Council

A motion from Trenton town council calling for a study to determine the most suitable location for the proposed, new bridge linking Prince Edward and Hastings Counties met a "no action" response from Sidney Township councillors Monday night.

A week ago, township council endorsed a resolution from the Township of Ameliasburgh which asked the bridge be constructed connecting the county with Wallbridge Rd., rather than at the present Highway 14 location.

Councillor Ernest Kells said a new motion calling for a study would be contradicting their earlier endorsement of the Wallbridge Rd. location.

Councillor Reg McCarthy combined the two motions and passed with the earlier Wallbridge motion but did not receive a seconder and a motion that no action be moved by Councillor Kells — was subsequently passed.

Denies Let Baby Starve

TORONTO (CP) — A Toronto surgeon denied Monday a published report that a baby was allowed to starve to death at North York general hospital here because he was born a mongoloid.

Dr. Arnold C. Fallis said a decision not to operate to correct the infant's inability to digest food was based on the fact of brain damage caused by severe jaundice, not the baby's mongolism.

"This child was already sufficiently ill from brain damage—he was irretrievably and mentally damaged," said Dr. Fallis.

Morgentaler May Get New Trial

OTTAWA (CP) — There were some indications Monday that the Supreme Court of Canada might order a new trial for Dr. Henry Morgentaler on a charge of performing an illegal abortion.

The nine justices reserved their decision after listening to final arguments by Crown lawyer Louis-Guy Robichaud urging that a guilty verdict imposed on the Montreal doctor by the Quebec Court of Appeal be allowed to stand.

Members of the court expressed some doubts about an appeal court substituting its verdict for that of a jury, and the Quebec Court of Appeal.

Mr. Justice Louis-Philippe Pigeon said such a practice is very rare.

The court also seemed of the opinion that only a jury should decide whether the abortion performed by Dr. Morgentaler was necessary and therefore not an illegal act.

Mr. Robichaud was questioned sharply when he argued that Dr. Morgentaler made no effort to come within the 1969 abortion laws when he performed the abortion in August, 1973.

The Crown lawyer said the doctor made no attempt to have the girl brought before therapeutic abortion committees established in Montreal hospitals and called in the law.

Instead, after only a few minutes with the girl, he agreed to perform the operation, Mr. Robichaud said.

Mr. Justice Robert Dickson said there was evidence that the girl had made telephone calls to doctors and hospitals in Montreal without success. There also was evidence the trial that the girl, living in Montreal with only $20 a month for her college expenses, was in English over her condition.

He said it is up to juries to make judgments on such facts, not appeal courts.

The Crown lawyer again urged the court not to apply person for the benefit of that section 45 of the Criminal Code as a defence against abortion, saying it would open the way "for abortion on demand."

Section 45 states that "every one is protected from criminal responsibility for performing a surgical operation upon any person" if the operation is performed with skill and care, it is reasonable to perform the operation, and having regard to all the circumstances of the case.

Canadian Food Not Worst Buy

TORONTO (CP) — The Canadian shopper still stands out as the international supermarket whiz. It comes to prices, a study by the Grocery Products Manufacturers of Canada indicates.

The study also showed Canada's food and beverage industry is under increasing pressure from rising costs.

"Profit margins after rising from 1970 to 1973 are expected to be squeezed as raw materials, labor, packaging and distribution costs escalate," said the study of world food prices.

As an example, despite the recent destruction of millions of rotten eggs, one dozen eggs last May cost 30 cents in Ottawa; $1.26 in Copenhagen; 28 cents in Washington, D.C.; but in London in a one year period from May, 1972, to May, 1974, eggs prices rose to 87 cents from 37.

Boneless sirloin steak, $2.97 a pound in Ottawa last May, was $14.80 in Tokyo.

Japan experienced the highest food-price increase with a 28-per-cent jump in one year. German food prices rose 4.5 per cent, Holland and Belgium are the only other countries that have not experienced double digit inflation. Canada's food prices rose 16 per cent.

The amount of individual income spent on food up to 1972 declined to about 20 per cent from nearly 25 in 1961. At the end of 1973, it totalled about 21.5 per cent.

Toronto Investment Firm Rejects Pessimistic Approach

By THE CANADIAN PRESS

Wood Gundy Ltd. of Toronto says it rejects the view held by some market-watchers that the New York Dow Jones industrial average will decline through the 500 level.

In a recent market letter, the investment firm says that those who believe the Dow will decline that far presume that "members' earnings are going to be destroyed in the next six months to a year and remain destroyed as long as three or four years."

There are "many reasons to question that possibility even though we may be entering a period of lower earnings."

The prediction that the stock market seems to be making is that there is going to be a destruction of the earnings power of the major corporations in North America.

This prediction "hardly stands up, and we, for one, do not subscribe to it," Wood Gundy says.

It rejects comparisons between the current market slump and the 1929-1930 market crash, noting that the Dow fell 294 to 41 during that period, a decline of about 86 per cent.

One point that stands out is that there has been a reasonable growth pattern in earnings and dividends among stocks that make up the Dow average during a long period of time.

"Accordingly, investors should ask themselves whether there is something so unique about the present that makes the past meaningless. Or, are there still lessons to be learned from history."

Mr. and Mrs. Gregory Burr

Burr — Miller

Westminster United Church was the setting for the August wedding of Gillian Jane Miller, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. George Miller, and Gregory Scott Burr, son of Mr. and Mrs. Harold Burr, of Kirkland, Quebec.

Rev. Frank Mitchell officiated at the ceremony, and Mr. Mark Vines provided the wedding music.

CAT AN EXCUSE

CAKOVEC, Yugoslavia (AP) — Cats are not in short supply but the case of a cat in this Croatian town sent dozens of witnesses to five court investigations where an unspecified sum of money was spent. Farmer Josip Gersic, 50, said housewife Barbara Medved, 49, both laid claims on the cat. Observers, however, said the animal was used as an excuse to ward off their mutual and accumulated dislike for one another. The court tried to reconcile the two, to save them from further expenses, but finally gave the right to Barbara to keep the cat. Josip has submitted an appeal to the verdict.

Mr. and Mrs. Harold Ward

Diamond Anniversary

In 1924 Harold Ward and Myrtle Allison were united in the holy bonds of matrimony by Rev. Bradley in the parsonage in Demorestville. As a commemoration of couple recently celebrated their 50th wedding anniversary.

Festivities commenced when a party was given in their honor at the home son and wife Mr. and Mrs. Leon Ward, Ameliasburgh. A dinner was provided for the occasion by the members of the UCW of Demorestville Church for the 50 guests.

Response present extended their wishes and the couple received many gifts including a 48 piece service of silver, christening gowns and sums of money.

An open house was held later at the Ward residence in Redmondville, where Norris Whitney, former MPP, James A. Taylor who succeeded him on his retirement along with many local friends and fellow church members called to extend their congratulations. Congratulations through the mail were received from Georges Hees, MP, Williams Davis, Premier of Ontario, Lieut.-Governor Pauline McGibbon, Mayor Jeffrey of Belleville, Prince Minister Trudeau from Ottawa and Her Royal Highness Queen Elizabeth II.

Mrs. Ernest Way, a sister-in-law of Mrs. Ward and sisters-in-law Mrs. Ivan Ward and Mrs. Clarence Allison assisted her and the cookies and cakes were supplied by friends of the couple from their church — the Alliance Tabernacle of Belleville. The Wards have two sons, Keith and Leon, five granddaughters and two great-grandchildren.

Successful Living

'Serendipity' Invents Telephone

By DORIS CLARK

Just 100 years ago, in 1874, Alexander Graham Bell invented the telephone in Brantford, Ontario — a discovery which has revolutionized communications across the world.

What he was actually looking for was a way in which to help the deaf and hard-of-hearing to hear. What a glorious example of serendipity!

The profoundly deaf barber who wrote to me recently has supplied these words, coined by Alexander Graham Bell himself:

"Do not content yourself to follow others; quit the beaten path, and enter into the forest. You will discover new things."

"Maybe it will be just a 'million' thing; do not neglect it, examine it in all of its facets. The discovery will bring success, and before you will perceive that you will have found another subject worthy of interest.

"All great inventions are the fruit of the mind (the thinking mind). Then one unlimited ideas all around you going by to energy. It is up to you to grasp one of those ideas, and turn it into something useful for civilization."

"The quote may not be word-perfect, but it is the way it was given to us by our dear friend, and he judges by the way he acts and thinks, I'd say he has it memorized.

Dear Doris: I'm going to a new school this year and there is a boy who seems to like me and I like him.

Anyway, my mother says a good way to get to know the kids in a new school is to invite 'em to, to give a party. She says she will help me, but we need some ideas. Would you please send me anything you've got that would be good for a Hallowe'en party? — I've Got My Eye On Him.

Dear My Eye: Now there's the kind of a mother who does my heart good. A party — with some skits or games in it to help new friends from worrying about what to say or do — is a super way to encourage self-expression. Lots of laughs, lots of clowning: that's when you find the free spirits and spark delightful friendships.

Weather a child is admitted for treatment will depend on the degree of the problem, Dr. Casey said. Some problems are easier to treat outside the home environment but a major aim is not to disrupt the child's life.

"If it's a family problem, we can often work with the family in that: own home."

Besides Dr. Casey, the service is staffed by two psychiatrists, four social workers and two care workers. They have worked with 70 to 80 children under the age of 16 since the children's centre started.

The same services are offered to the youngsters as to adult psychiatric patients — group therapy, drug and individual and family counselling.

"Until we are about 5, we deal more with play than with words," Dr. Casey said. "We get a lot of insight from play what the child is thinking, what his attitudes are."

By setting up a play household, the staff can watch how the child reacts to different members of a family.

Dr. Casey found about half the children referred are reacting to problems in their family.

Kitty Arnott, supervisor of the social workers, agreed. "Sometimes parents don't realize the child knows what's going on and it frightens him," she said. Often the staff act as go-betweens, telling the parents how the child sees things.

The project is financed by the Ontario ministry of health.

Medical Secretaries Hold Fashion Show

For, leather and wool fashions from Woodbyrn were featured at the Quinte Medical Secretaries' Fashion Show which was held recently at BCH Education Hall.

More than 120 persons attended the show where Sheila Hunter, Jean Frue, Jackie Vivian, Jeanette Farquhar, Pat Sergeant, Marie Murphy, Diana Maxwell and Barbara Lewis modelled fashions against a Parisian background designed by Shirley Elliott.

Chairman and commentator for the evening was Miss Calhoun.

Coats of mink, broadtail lamb, fur cloth and leather and wool were highlights of the evening. Noble brunch coats and in one "boy" shirt dress with body sweater tops were included.

The grand prize draw, an Aquascutum rain coat, was won by Pat Sandiet.

Kids' Problems 'Tough'

OWEN SOUND, Ont. (CP) — It's fractured — or could be — bandages, Dr. William Casey's job would be a lot easier.

Dr. Casey is a child psychiatrist and director of the children's and adolescents' services at Dr. MacKinnon Phillips Hospital in Owen Sound.

Diagnosis and treatment of emotional and behavioral problems is tough because it is never clear-cut, he said.

"If we could treat skin infection of the pneumonia with penicillin, it would be simpler."

Psychiatric services for children are new in Owen Sound. The outpatient unit opened late last year.

Until then, children in Grey and Bruce Counties were sent to London for treatment or examined by two child psychiatrists who came to Owen Sound once a week.

In September, a 14-bed inpatient centre will be added to the facilities for children at Dr. MacKinnon Phillips Hospital.

Ann Landers' 'Sensible Advice for Moms'

Dear Ann Landers: In my opinion the advice you gave "Numb" (the mother who walked in on her 17-year-old daughter and her boyfriend and caught them in the act) was the most sane and practical answer I've ever read in your column. (I'm 17 and have been an Ann Landers fan for five years.)

You advised that mother to see to it that her daughter had an appointment with a doctor to discuss which birth control method would be best for her.

You went on and warned the mother against forbidding the girl from seeing the boy. You said it would create worse problems. You then made an astute comment: "A teen-age girl who has experienced sexual intercourse is not about to stop just because her mother or Ann Landers tells her to."

Your conclusion, that the important thing was to make sure the girl didn't get pregnant, was practical and realistic.

I'm sure many mothers who read that column were upset by your answer, but I can tell you, all in the last few months. Will you please say a word to the brothers, sisters, and in-laws of women who are married to physicians in training?

This letter is written by four wives who need help. We are: age five calls for week from relatives who would like "the doctor" to please drop in to Room 219 and see how Mrs. Neighbour's Cousin is getting along.

What the family doesn't realize is that the physician-in-training is so busy with his own sick patients that in order to make "social" calls he has to give up his meal time or miss a lecture.

When our husbands are "on call" we don't see them for 48 hours at a stretch. They work hard, and the hours are grueling. You couldn't believe how relatives have them paged at the hospital to make social requests, while they're, or course, what to do about the rash on baby's chin or baby isn't hangnail. Thanks for your help. Ann—Buffalo, New York

Ann Landers, that every girl in our class was applauding you.

Not all high school girls are sleeping with their boyfriends, and you made it clear you weren't in any sense of the word condoning it. But for those who are, there is no way they can get their virginity back, so the best thing is to protect themselves against getting a few lives—namely, a guy who doesn't want to get married, a girl who may be psychologically scarred for life by an abortion and a child born to a couple of kids who really don't want it. Although I speak for thousands, sign me—A Senior At Central High.

Dear Senior: Thank you for that nice letter. I received an unexpected response. Letters poured in from teen-agers, both boys and girls, and surprisingly few sided with their parents. The boys discussed generation gap is behind them.

Dear Ann Landers: You've spoken out in behalf of supermarket check-out girls, telephone operators and post office clerks, all in the last few months. Will you please say a word to the brothers, sisters, and in-laws of women who are married to physicians in training?

Dear Buff: Here's the letter. Now why don't you wives who have the problem make copies of this column and send them to the people who ought to see it? Is there no end to the number of gripers who want me to do their dirty work?!!!

Power Users Tapping Earth's Natural Steam

NEW YORK (AP) — Power users ranging from the big pool tree-growers in the United States to a handful of pioneering farmers are tapping the earth's natural steam as an alternative to expensive oil and gas.

Geothermal steam, produced by the heat of the earth's molten core, is already established in some western states as an economical source of power to run electrical utility plants.

Relatively shallow wells have produced man-made geysers in some areas of California, New Mexico, Arizona, Nevada, Oregon Washington and Wyoming.

"I think this country has a very vast geothermal potential," said Dr. Joseph Barnea, an energy consultant to the United Nations. "But work has only been done when potential hits you in the eye."

Barnea and Jeff Newman, a geothermal expert for the Centre for Energy Information, a non-profit research group in New York, believes geothermal steam can be found in at least 23 states.

Paper and wood companies such as Boise Cascade Corp., as well as a few farmers in Utah and Oregon are experimenting with geothermal heat to grow tomatoes, raise seedlings for giant firs and Ponderosa pines and freeze-dry vegetables and coffee.

The U.S. bureau of reclamation and several of the largest engineering firms are involved in pilot studies to use geothermal resources to create fresh water.

The energy crisis and sky high costs of fossil fuels such as oil and gas are prompting the government and a growing number of businesses to look at possible economic advantages of using the earth's heat for more than creating electricity.

Geothermal steam's advantage is that no fuel is consumed to produce its energy-giving heat.

Savings of utility companies have been encouraging. Pacific Gas and Electric Co. spends 3.5 mills per kilowatt hour on geothermally generated electricity, compared with a minimum of 17 mills using oil. Capital outlays total $125-$130 per kilowatt hour for geothermal energy, compared with $300-$350 for oil-generated power.

Geothermal steam becomes hotter and therefore more powerful the deeper it's found.

Geothermal drilling on the average goes to 5,000 to 6,000 feet, but Newman said drillers are starting to go as deep as 8,000. Oil drilling, Newman said goes to average depths of 20,000 to 30,000.

Duke Colorado said geothermal heat is being used in a 200,000-seedling nursery in Cove, Ore. A spokesman said the tree-ravaging tussock moth spurred the development.

With many of this year's seedlings grown outside of nurseries threatened by the moth in the Pacific Northwest, the company established the pilot nursery in hopes of reaping savings over the usual natural gas method of greenhouse heating. To do it, geothermal steam is diverted run through the building's heating pipes.

Andy Parker, manager of Oregon Desert Farms, turned to geothermally heated greenhouses about three years ago to protect his vegetable crops from cold desert nights. He said he reaped enormous savings.

B.C. McCabe, Jr., owner of a food-packing business called Pacific Geothermal Growers of Reno, Nev., is using geothermal hot springs to run his freeze-drying operation. Using standard ammonia - absorption refrigeration, 250-degree water from geothermal wells can create temperatures of 40 degrees below zero to freeze-dry coffee, tomatoes and onions.

"As far as the future is concerned, food processing is one of the identifiable fields where geothermal energy can fill a growing void," McCabe said. "As natural gas declines in availability and rises in price, food processors may be forced to use geothermal steam or shut down."

The bureau of reclamation has set aside some $13 million for a pilot study of desalinating geothermal brine in California's Imperial Valley. Two desalinating facilities have been built there, capable of handling 30,000 gallons of brine a day, using the power of geothermal steam to operate the facilities.

"We are satisfied with the results," a bureau spokesman said. "Tests to date have shown this may be a feasible way of providing water in arid areas."

He said the bureau hopes to have a desalinating plant in full operation by around 1979 "that is demonstrably commercial."

Home-heating and air conditioning using geothermal steam are other promising applications already in wide use in Japan and Iceland.

Several companies are exploring ways to extract valuable minerals from geothermal brine.

Illness Handicap In Hunting Jobs

CHICAGO (CP) — An applicant's medical history may be a handicap in finding a new job.

Two New York doctors, writing in Archives of Environmental Health, a publication of the American Medical Association, say a history of "physical or emotional illness, even of a mild degree, greatly diminishes the possibility that a patient will be given employment."

"With previous myocardial infarction (heart attack), rheumatic heart disease or a psychiatric history, the applicant has little chance of being hired even for clerical work," said Drs. Murray Weinfeld and Jacob I. Haft of the Mount Sinai School of Medicine.

The writers were reporting on a poll of industrial physicians, where they asked whether they would recommend individuals for employment who had a variety of past health problems.

Many said they would not hire a 38-year-old applicant for a managerial position with a history of heart attack, even if he no longer had symptoms of heart trouble. Some even would refuse to allow an individual to return to his old job after a heart attack.

Also high on the list of rejectees were diabetics controlling their disease with insulin, individuals with uncontrolled or poorly controlled high blood pressure and those with a record of psychiatric illness.

The industrial physicians said their advice would be based on concern about liability for injury or further illness, possible increase in compensation rates and possible loss of work time.

The researchers said patients may have increasing difficulty in finding work in the future because pre-employment and annual physical examinations are becoming more common. With dissemination of hospital records, retrieval of medical data is becoming easier and a patient may be unable to conceal a past or present illness, however unimportant.

"The criteria used for determining employability appears, in some cases to have little relation to modern medical judgment."

Luxury and Deprivation Both Known by Oil Nomads

ABOARD THE HAVDRILL (CP) — The life of an oil nomad is one of luxury—and certain deprivations.

The 70 to 90 men living on the drillship Havdrill about 120 miles northeast of St. John's, Nfld., are provided with just about everything they want.

The salaries are excellent—even the kitchen crew makes $12,000 a year. The food is first-rate. Living quarters, while small, are comfortable. And there is color television, stereo and movies.

But ask a driller what he misses and the reply is prompt.

"Liquor and women," says Bruce Fox, a 25-year-old well logger from Medicine Hat, Alta.

Fox is one of a dozen Canadians, mostly engineers and geologists, on the Havdrill. The rest are from Britain, France, Norway and Holland. Not a single Newfoundlander works on the ship.

The 250-million vessel, owned by a Norwegian company, is leased by British Petroleum in BP's first offshore exploration project in eastern Canada.

Along with his companion Roger Cleon, 28, of Calgary, Fox is responsible for monitoring the drill operations from both a safety and geological point of view.

From Newfoundland, two well probably go to the Arctic later this year. They have worked in Texas, the Middle East, the North Sea and the Irish Sea.

Where they go next year will largely depend on what oil exploration is under way and which companies offer the highest wages.

Fox and Cleon both work on a basis of two weeks on and one off. "The first week back on the ship is OK," Fox says. "But the second week—it's a long haul."

Agreed Cleon: "I'm not too crazy about spending too many years on one of these. But it's a good way of getting some money together."

For their week off, the two are given return air fare from Gander to St. John's where a house is available for their use. BP also gives them $30 daily spending money.

Young adventurers like Cleon and Fox comprise about half the Havdrill's work force. The rest are older men, most married.

For the 40 to 50 Norwegians, life aboard is an improvement. The majority are experienced seamen, used to being away from their families for months at a time.

Now they are flown home without personal expense for a four-week holiday at full pay after spending the same amount of time on the drillship.

There are only four drillships currently afloat. The Havdrill built in Rotterdam and commissioned last November, is the most modern. One of the others, the Petrel, is off the Labrador coast.

Drillships differ from other oil rigs in that they are neither attached nor anchored to the sea bottom.

They remain dynamically positioned at a fixed point by means of a computerized multiple propulling system.

Drillships are the only kind of rig that can operate safely in ice-infested waters. Even semi-submersible rigs such as those operating on the Grand Banks can't leave the scene with the speed of drillships which can cruise at 12 knots.

The Havdrill had to close the hole it is drilling before it flee from icebergs. One of them passed directly across the drill site.

Another feature of drillships is that they are designed to explore for oil in deep waters. The Havdrill is floating 1,100 feet above the seabed, while most others drilling now in now has been in depths of 300 and 500 feet.

Healing Substance... Shrinks Piles, Checks Itch
Exclusive healing substance proven to shrink hemorrhoids ... and repair damaged tissue.
A renowned research institute has found a unique healing substance with the ability to shrink hemorrhoids painlessly. It relieves itching and discomfort in minutes and speeds up healing of the injured, inflamed tissues.
One hemorrhoidal case history after another reported "very striking improvement." Pain was promptly and greatly relieved . . . actual reduction or retraction (shrinking) took place.
And most important—this improvement was sustained in cases where clinical observations were continued over a period of many months. Furthermore, these tests and observations were made on patients with a wide variety of hemorrhoidal conditions. All this was accomplished with a healing substance (Bio-Dyne) which quickly helps heal injured cells and stimulates growth of new tissue. Bio-Dyne is offered in ointment and suppository form called Preparation H.
In addition to actually shrinking hemorrhoids, Preparation H relieves pain and tension. Infection is checked. It helps prevent infection which is a stated cause of hemorrhoids.
Just ask your druggist for Preparation H Suppositories or Preparation H Ointment (with a special applicator).
Satisfaction or your money refunded.

Gas Bar Robbed

TRENTON — Only minutes before closing time Monday night, two Canadian Tire Gas Bar attendants were robbed of the cash receipts by two men, one brandishing a knife, who then made good their escape on foot.

Town police, armed with good descriptions of the men, are continuing their investigation of the 11:45 p.m. robbery.

About $185 was taken from attendants Randle Parks and Ralph Rattlen, both 19 years old.

Police said two men entered the booth at the Dundas St. east gas bar and demanded money.

The pickets were called off an hour earlier than planned, and teachers preceded to the study session at a west hill church.

Council Rejects Resolution For Bridge Location Study

Belleville city council is not interested in a study being done to determine the best site between Bridge St. and Trenton for the proposed new high level bridge to Prince Edward county.

Trenton town council last week passed a resolution calling for the minister of transportation and communications to do such a study and the resolution was passed on to Belleville council. City council Tuesday took no action on the matter.

The Trenton council resolution is based on the earlier Ameliasburg township resolution recommending the new bridge be placed west of Belleville to connect with Wallbridge-Loyalist Rd.

Acting mayor Stu Meeks moved non-concurrence in the Trenton resolution, suggesting that a bridge over the bay at Wallbridge-Loyalist Rd. would be "completely unreasonable."

He noted that the distance across the bay at the present bay bridge crossing is 2200 feet whereas that water stretch at Wallbridge-Loyalist Rd. is 5200 feet.

In addition, the alderman said the much longer span, locating the new bridge at the above site would require expensive property acquisition as well as costly highway relocation to connect up with Highway 14 both north and south of the bay.

Council already has approved a resolution calling for a feasibility study for a tunnel rather than a high-level bridge.

The resolutions concerning the possible location for the proposed new bridge are the aftermath of an announcement by the provincial ministry head John R. Rhodes, that plans are underway for a new high-level bridge to replace the present obsolete swing bridge.

City to Save On Sand Tender

In these inflationary times tender submissions coming in at a lower figure than for the year previous are a bit unexpected.

But it does happen and as a result the city will save a bit of money on its winter sand supply for the next season.

When tenders for the supply of 2,500 tons of sand were called Charles Dezell Construction was the only supplier to submit a bid, the price quoted was $1.30 a ton, delivered. Last year, the same contractor supplied winter sand for the city at $1.95 per ton.

Alderman George Zegouras wondered about the lower figure this year in view of constantly rising prices.

City manager Wilbur Purcell said specifications for this year's sand were the same as last year.

Teachers Walk Out Despite Rejection of 'Study Session'

By LENNY WILLIAMSON
Staff Reporter

Loyalist College teachers went on the picket line only today, although the one-day work stoppage to protest the deadlock in salary negotiations was cancelled at 11 p.m. Monday by the Civil Service Association of Ontario.

The picketing was called off at 9:30 a.m. by Quinte Branch president Paul Wall on an hour earlier than originally planned.

The teachers went to the previously-arranged study session at Holloway Street United Church Hall, to hear an explanation of the last minute actions from their branch president.

In a release prepared by Mr. Wall during the night and handed out by the pickets, Mr. Wall said he received "strong suggestions" during the night from senior college administrators who wanted the study session cancelled and students notified by radio that classes would continue as usual with the teachers in their classrooms "if the teachers are expected to be paid".

The union had said previously that the study sessions and picketing would be cancelled on 13 hours notice of the resumption of negotiations.

Since the Quinte branch had not been given 13 hours notice, Mr. Wall suggested that the teachers meet in the study session, where he would support a motion that the teachers return to the college by noon, provided that the pay-docking order was rescinded.

Bob Brant, a representative of the Canadian Labor Congress, joined teachers at the college this morning and told branch president Mr. Wall, "the CLC definitely supports our (Loyalist) stand".

Mr. Wall said it had been suggested to him "my reliable sources" that provincial management would order all colleges to pay teachers for Oct. 8, because the decision to terminate negotiations had come literally at the 11th hour.

Teachers' contract negotiations have continued for 17 months and broke off last week. To break the deadlock, Judge J. C. Anderson of Belleville, permanent chairman of the Ontario Civil Service Arbitration Board, last Thursday offered to step down and let the issue go to arbitration under the Ontario Labor Relations Act. Agreement on this proposal was reached by 11 p.m. Monday.

Students Absent From Classes

Acres of vacant parking lot at Loyalist College this morning testified that few students turned up for classes.

About 28 students were counted in the cafeteria at 8 a.m. when classes were scheduled to begin.

Administrators, office staff and technicians were all on the job, as well as few teachers who have never belonged to the union.

An informal conference took place on the staff parking lot when college president, Herbert Young, arrived and met Paul Wall, president of the Quinte Branch of the Civil Service Association of Ontario, the union representing the teachers. They were joined by dean of faculty, Paul King, and union steward, Rick Williams.

Mr. Wall later said "they (administration), are accusing us of not acting in good faith because we didn't call it (the study session) off in the middle of the night.

"They (provincial management) have taken the position of time to call off the study session."

Community college teachers, forbidden to strike, called the province-wide study session today.

They met at Holloway Street United Church about 9 a.m. with Bob Brant of the Canadian Labor Congress in attendance. Mr. Brant, said Mr. Wall, told the teachers that the CLC will "back your ports or stand".

The decision to go to arbitration was announced last night — too late to call off the work stoppage at most colleges. However, some Toronto colleges called off their study sessions, and broadcast reports of this from Toronto stations led to some confusion.

Mr. Wall last night telephoned Judge J. C. Anderson, former Loyalist college board chairman, whose action after negotiations broke deadlock. He expressed the Loyalist union branch's sincere thanks for his efforts to end the impasse.

Any forward that we've been looking for," said Mr. Wall. "Had they told us yesterday, there would have been plenty Meneeley was remanded from Madoc provincial court to attend the hearing last week.

The OPP spokesman said once Meneeley has finished being examined at the Institute he will be returned to provincial court. No date has been set.

Woman Must Pay

A Belleville woman was told to pay $100 and court costs when she appeared in small claims court Monday after refusing to pay a dentist bill.

Mrs. Loretta Bemiger of Victoria Ave. claimed she had been overcharged by a Kingston orthodontist for work that needed to be done on the teeth of her three children.

Mrs. Bemiger said the children, Loretta, 17, Peter, 13 and Lindsay, 15, were taken to the orthodontist in October 1973 after their regular orthodontist moved to Toronto. Mrs. Bemiger claimed the work started one year by the Kingston orthodontist and then had to pay a higher price after the work was done.

The doctor and his nurse appeared in court to successfully refute the charges.

Equipment Smashed

City police are investigating a weekend incident in which $500 damage was done to a fork lift truck being construction work at Moira Secondary School.

Police said sand was poured into the automatic transmission and all gauges were smashed.

Also being investigated is a stolen car incident. Police said the car was parked at the Bell Mill between 8:30 p.m. and 11:08 p.m. Monday evening and was missing when the owner returned.

The car is described as a white 1966 Chevrolet, four door, hard top.

You're never too young to learn how to be fire conscious. And at the fire department's Information Booth at the Quinte Mall Monday Fire Inspector Reg Christopher hands a picture to four-year-old Trevor Dunk to color. That's his mom, Cheryl Dunk of Campbellford, standing by. The two were visiting the display set up to remind people that this is Fire Prevention Week.

City Council Waffles On Official Plan

A special meeting of city council will be held within the next 14 days to consider approval of Belleville's new official plan.

The move for a special meeting was made at Monday's council meeting with approval of a recommendation from acting mayor Stu Meeks who said the official plan is much too important a document to be decided upon without more input from council.

The new official plan was before council two weeks ago but was referred to the Subdivision Planning Advisory Committee which later referred it back to council.

The recommendation for a special meeting to deal with the official plan was carried by a 6-3 recorded vote with only Alderman John Stock and Jack Ireland dissenting. Voting for the special meeting were Aldermen Joe Cox, Arthur Keegan, Stu Meeks, Roger Porter, Paul Russell and George Zegouras. Aldermen John Stock and Ben Corke were absent.

Before the vote, Alderman Stock, chairman of SPAC, said the official plan had been before his committee at its last meeting for unanimous decision being to send it back to council.

He said the official plan had been before his committee on many occasions and suggested it is now up to council.

Alderman Ireland said the official plan had been before council two or more years. There had been several public meetings held and it now is time for a council decision.

"It is time for council to make a stand," he said.

Speaking against the motion, Alderman Stock said Belleville's official plan had become an "official joke".

"It has got to the point that it can't be hammered any more. All public input has been made and the longer we waffle the more grant money we are losing," he said.

Alderman Paul Russell was not in favor of council should take immediate action in approving the official plan with a simple motion. He said there are many items in the plan with which he does not agree.

The date for the special meeting to discuss the plan will be set by Mayor Robin Jeffrey following her return from holidays in the Soviet Union, but when the meeting is held there is certain to be representation from parties seeking changes in the draft plan.

Three objectors asking for changes were present at Monday's council meeting to present their case.

One of Monday's objectors was local realtor Douglas Grant, who appeared for the owners of North Front St. property south of Tracey.

Present zoning of the approximately seven acres (mostly vacant) is RM3 allowing highway commercial use but under the proposed official plan this zoning would be limited to the first 400 feet west from Front St., the remainder being rezoned for residential use.

Mr. Grant said the proposed zoning split would reduce the property value by 75 per cent.

He said RM3 zoning had been long established in the area and asked that it be retained.

Also appearing before council was Toronto lawyer, Desmond J. Mackey, of the firm of Mackey, Morris, Cumming, Yerex and Bennington, representing McFarlane Gendron Manufacturing Ltd. of Belleville.

He noted that the buildings occupied by the firm on Sidney St. at the rear of the property south of Tracey.

Under the draft official plan the proposed zoning for the firm's present property is single family residential, but Mr. Mackey said a more realistic designation would be for higher density town housing or apartments.

Earl Mary, owner of property in the College St. area also appeared before council. He said the proposed parks designation for much of his land was discriminatory.

Alderman Stock noted that while park use was indicated for the subject area there is no suggestion that the park land be all on Mr. Mary's property.

So even though the Dodgers were playing before 54,000 in their home stadium and holding a 2-0 lead in the best-of-five series, Alston couldn't relax ahead.

Striving to Improve Situation

Officiating Inadequate — Czech

PRAGUE (CP) — Former coach Viktor Kosta of the Czechoslovak national team said Monday night the Czech Ice Hockey Federation has been struggling for years to have the level of international officiating improved.

Kosta said in an interview at a reception for the Canadian delegation that officiating throughout the Canada-Russia series was inadequate.

Team Canada '74, the World Hockey Association selection which completed its eight-game series against the Soviet Union on Sunday, arrived here by chartered aircraft Monday. The Canadians face the Czech national team tonight before returning home.

The Soviets won four games, lost one and three were tied in the series marred by poor officiating in most games.

"The Polish (Ryszard Szczepak) and the West German (Josef Kompalla) officials are second-rate, even by European standards," said Kostka, who coached the Czechs for many years before retiring in 1973.

He also objected to the use of a Canadian, Tom Bowes of Toronto, and a Russian, Victor Dombrowski, in the same competition.

"Officials from the United States, Czechoslovakia and Sweden should be used," he said. "There is no bias in their calibre and the officials have a chance to work the games of top teams."

Journalists here reacted strongly to an announcement Monday that Vaclav Nedomansky and Richard Farda have gone to Canada.

The announcement said that the Czechs have joined Toronto Toros of the World Hockey Association as coaches.

One reporter said Nedomansky was over-rated and that Jaroslav had been appealed to have him dropped from the Czech national squad.

The announcement here of the defection was accompanied by a front-page editorial condemning North American teams for luring top Europeans away from their homes.

The editorial also said Nedomansky had accepted

Colt Castoff Sparks Miami

MIAMI (AP) — "I wasn't used to that good blocking at Baltimore," said Hubert Ginn, laughing over his sudden emergence as a hero for Miami Dolphins after being waived out of the National Football League camp.

Ginn's 41-yard romp for a touchdown against Houston provided the victory margin Monday night as the Dolphins withstood the second-half aerial bombardment of Joe Namath to beat New York Jets 21-17.

"I hope Joe Thomas watched the game," said Ginn.

Thomas, as Baltimore general manager, obtained Ginn from Miami in 1973 in return for Don Nottingham and a draft pick, rookie Randy Crowder.

Ginn ran only 19 times for the Colts last year, was waived this fall and was signed by Miami as a free agent two weeks ago.

"I got a few less told to me since they're at Baltimore that I'd be playing," said Ginn, who had a 42-yard touchdown run on a return against the Jets nullified by a penalty. "I just never got a bad break there. Hopefully, things will work out for me here."

Namath almost kept the Jets from their third loss in four games as he completed 17 of 38 passes for 200 yards. He had touchdown passes of 80 yards to Richard Caster and five yards to John Riggins and set up a 43-yard field goal by Bobby Howfield.

But Namath also suffered three interceptions, including one at the Miami 3 by safety Jake Scott with only 19 seconds left.

Jets' coach Charlie Winner bitterly denounced his defense for allowing Miami quarterback Bob Griese to complete 13 of 18 passes for 154 yards in the first half and set up two touchdowns. One score came on a two-yard run to Jim Mandich and the other on a one-yard plunge by Larry Csonka.

"They couldn't have completed any more passes if we didn't have rushed out there," said Winner. "It was just pathetic. We should have called the whole 11-man defensive unit but we couldn't close the hole in the middle.

"They couldn't have completions in 22 attempts for 190 yards as Miami upped its record to 3-1.

Eskimos Ready

MONTREAL (CP) — Edmonton Eskimos, after a 23-20 loss to the Argonauts in Toronto Saturday will be seeking to win their two - game Eastern Football Conference swing when they meet Montreal Alouettes tonight.

Coach Ray Jauch gave his club a day off Monday after cancelling one Sunday.

"We knew pretty much what to expect from the Alouettes and we believe we'll be ready for them," Jauch said.

"I didn't think we were physically ready to work Monday after a tough game in Toronto Saturday."

In the Toronto game, the Eskimos were leading 20-19 with less than three minutes left when they elected to gamble on a third down and inches-to-go situation. The Argos stopped the Eskimos at the Edmonton 31 and Zenon Andrusyshyn then kicked the winning field goal.

CFL Could Produce 5 1,000 Yard Rushers

TORONTO (CP) — For the first time since 1966 there may be five 1,000-yard rushers in the Canadian Football League this season—perhaps more.

George Reed, all-star fullback with Saskatchewan Roughriders of the Western Football Conference, was the first entry in the club this year. He has been a member of the team since it left 1974 Individual leader with 1,211 yards.

Leo Harris of British Columbia Lions made it Sunday when he gained 102 yards against Montreal Alouettes to increase his total to 1,028. Tony Bell of Edmonton Eskimos had a 114-yard day Saturday against Toronto Argonauts and needs 172 more yards to exceed the 1,000 plateau. Moreno Ley of the Lions is less than 100 yards off the mark with four games to go.

The record number of players passing the 1,000-yard mark in a season is five—a figure attained four years in succession, 1962 to 1965 inclusive, when Earl Lunsford, Johnny Bright, Dave Thelen, Gerry McDougall and Leo Lewis terrorized defences.

With the four WFC stalwarts on the march this year, it remains for the EFC to produce two members to set a record. Montreal Alouettes' Steve Ferrugnelli and Hamilton Tiger-Cats' Andy Hopkins have the best chances.

Ferrugnelli has five games left to rush for 204 yards and Hopkins needs 256 in three games. Longshots are Toronto Argonauts' rookie pair of Ed Shuttleworth and Doyle Orange.

Shuttleworth is 306 yards shy of the 1,000-yard goal, while Orange must gain 365 in four games.

Wheels, Sharks Facing Oblivion

NEWPORT BEACH, Calif. (AP) — Detroit Wheels and Jacksonville Sharks will fold within three days unless new investors are found, the World Football League announced Monday.

The Wheels and Sharks games this week were wiped off the schedule. Florida Blazers, who were to play Detroit on Thursday, had already been scheduled against Jacksonville, still play each other instead at Jacksonville under a revised schedule released by WFL president Gary Davidson.

Don Anderson, a WFL vice-president, said: "No exact hour has been set as a deadline but the financing is complex and we have to be done in the next two

SOJHL Defies USAHA

LONDON, Ont. (CP) — The seven-team Southern Ontario Junior Hockey League voted Monday to defy a United States Amateur Hockey Association edict and continue to operate a franchise in Buffalo, N.Y.

By a 6-to-1 vote, with Detroit Junior A Hockey Association, the league voted to play all regular-season games scheduled at Buffalo as set out by the schedule released in August by the Ontario Hockey Association (OHA).

A week ago, the U.S. governing body announced that Buffalo Stampeders had withdrawn from the U.S. because the team was comprised almost exclusively of Canadian players.

The Canadian Amateur Hockey Association (CAHA) — or three days to keep the clubs operative this year."

Anderson said the cost of operating the Detroit and Jacksonville teams is about $500,000 each for the balance of the season, which would cost the first-year league $1 million. It also operates the Florida Blazers franchise.

"Unless there is some indication of immediate investment by new investors, other teams in the WFL will select Detroit and Jacksonville players at a draft-like session here later in the week," he said.

If no new investors take over the troubled clubs, the WFL will honor all contracts of those players not selected in the draft, Davidson said.

and the OHT, a member of the CAHA, said that under terms of the agreement between the Canadian and American Amateur associations, the U.S. group has the right to operate a franchise but not consider suitable.

Despite the league vote, the decision reached Monday still must be approved by the OHA. Ontario Hockey Association vice-president of the OHA and chairman of the Monday meeting, said the situation will have to be dealt with at the OHA monthly meeting in Toronto Wednesday.

"I don't feel it was a case of survival," said Willie Marshall, coach and part owner of the Tondas. "We're quite happy that the league has supported

Palmer Starts

BALTIMORE (AP) — Baltimore sees righthander Jim Palmer against Oakland today with titles today in the third game of baseball's American League playoffs, with both clubs apparently satisfied by the split of the first two games.

The duel for the pennant now comes down to a five-game series in Baltimore after the Orioles won the opening game behind Palmer took an early shower, but the Orioles overcame a 4-0 deficit to beat Blue again.

That series was won by Oakland in five games.

Blue has a 17-15 record and belted 211 1-3 innings this season, second on the club only to Palmer.

Palmer spent 24 days on the disabled list because of an inflamed nerve in his elbow and struggled to a mediocre 7-712 record. He was 4-4 after returning to the Orioles rotation in August. And doubt lingers over his condition.

in Oakland and the A's bounced back with Baltimore winning both games.

In the opener of that series, Palmer shut out Oakland while Blue was yanked in the first inning. In the fourth game,

JOHNNY RODGERS

No Money Problems

MONTREAL (CP) — Sam Berger owner of Montreal Alouettes of the Canadian Football League confirmed Monday that Johnny Rodgers, 1973 CFL Rookie of the Year, has requested a long-term contract with the Alouettes.

Berger said Rodgers has signed a new contract with us for a number of years," said Berger, who declined comment on terms of the contract.

He also declined to say when details of the agreement would be announced officially.

The Omaha, Neb. World Herald reported in a copyright story that Rodgers has signed to play for seven more years at about $1 million.

Rodgers, the 1972 Heisman Trophy winner from University of Nebraska, renegotiated his contract in the second year of a three-year pact that guaranteed him $100,000 a year.

He is ranked fifth in Eastern Football Conference scoring, with nine touchdowns and second in pass receptions with 28 catches for 719 yards.

Rodgers, who has rushed for 1,028 yards on 71 carries, declined comment on the new contract except to say: "I'm really much satisfied with it. After a few more years I won't have to worry about money."

SACO Can Duplicate Feat Of 1957 Booth TV Team

BLIGES — It was great to see Frank Insley in Trenton on the weekend. Well known in this area for his work with the Ontario Amateur Softball Association and St. John Ambulance as well as for being just an A.1. guy, Frank was part of the official ceremonies which followed the Midget B Softball final, Sunday.

Along with Jim Tebworth and Bruce Hickle of Belleville, Frank represented the OASA when it came time to hand out awards to the championship Trenton Dickson's team and runner-up Elliott Lake.

The amiable Insley was slowed for some time by heart trouble but is back now taking an active part in proceedings he enjoys.

Hold the phone on that Trenton Spartacus-Belleville Golden Mile Olympics Challenge Cup semi-final result.

Golden Mile won the Sunday match 7-3, Bob Ray of Quinte Soccer Association secretary Dudley Hillier reports the Spartacus team has lodged a protest.

Spartacus is questioning the eligibility of some of the Golden Mile players who may have played more than the three games allowed with Belleville Olympics of the Premier Soccer League.

And Dudley also passes along word that Peter Crewe's wife resigned (verbally, that is) as president of the YCSA some weeks ago, has agreed to finish out the season.

Explains Hillier: "Peter's letter of resignation has not yet been read at a meeting simply because we've not been able to have a quorum present."

We're not surprised at Peter's decision to see it through. He strikes us as that kind of individual.

But what about next season? He'll be a hard man to replace.

When the SACO Pavers go after the Ontario Amateur Softball Association A crown in Sault Ste. Marie on the weekend, they'll be attempting to repeat a feat pulled off by another Belleville team, 17 years ago.

It was in October, 1957 that Lou Culhane and George Woodbridge led the Booth TV squad to provincial honors in a final series with Simcoe.

Booths dropped the first game of that title set 4-3 in Simcoe, won at home, 15-14, and, when the scene shifted to Oshawa for the deciding tilt, the Belleville youngsters came through with a convincing 14-3 victory.

Members of that 1957 championship team were Jim Ross, Bob Ethier, Greg Bruyea, Pete Mitchell, Gary Wardell, Deno Williamson, Carl Bonnelover, Pat Glancey, Jack Boyle, Bob Boyle, Lee Mullins, Rick Deacon, Allan Mott and Bob Moon.

Pickering Panthers ran into a red hot Peterborough Lions goaltender in a recent Metro Junior B Hockey League match.

Panthers rained 46 shots on target during a 5-4 loss to Lions.

You may have already guessed that the goalie who frustrated the Pickering marksmen was Rob Duncan who filled in so well for our Bobcats during the playoffs last season.

It was a long time between Ontario Amateur Softball Association titles for Napanee.

When Ryan's Color and Sound aquiris captured the C crown on the weekend, it was the first provincial championship for that community since an intermediate C club went all the way in 1937.

Napanee squirt sponsor Mike Ryan saw his team go through 22 tournament and playoff games with only two losses.

With Al and Bob Garrison supplying the leadership as coach and manager, respectively, the Napanee youngsters made it in a big way.

On the way to top honors, Ryan's got by Sharbot Lake, Campbellford, Keswick, St. Paul and Minesing.

Al Garrison—Out of Lineup

Cats Will Meet Voyageurs, Lions

Coach Tim Wilkams sends his Belleville Bobcats through a pair of practice sessions tonight and tomorrow in preparation for Thursday's Metro Junior B Hockey League date with the Voyageurs in Kingston. Friday night at Memorial Arena, Cats hook up with Peterborough Lions.

The status of Napanee's Al Garrison, a Cat centre with a talent for putting the puck in the net, is questionable.

Al will not be in the lineup for this week's games.

Garrison's right eye, seriously injured during a game early last season, is still causing problems.

"I was having quite a bit of pain after the games," Al explained Tuesday morning.

Al will see his doctor, Thursday and some questions may be answered at that time.

"I talked it over with coach Williams and we'll just have to see how it turns out," said Al.

"I really want to play but it depends on how I feel."

Hopefully, Garrison's absence from the lineup will only be temporary. He has been signed by the club and hopes to return to action.

Team manager Russ Soule said Tuesday winger Brian McIntosh from Frankford and goalie Tim Mader of Trenton will be taking in the practice session this week.

Cats will be aiming to extend their unbeaten string in this week's games. The club tied Whitby 5-5 and downed Oshawa 10-5 in its first two starts.

On January 8th, 1947 brash rookie Howie Meeker scored 5 goals as the Leafs beat Chicago 10-4. His production beat the Hawks singlehandedly and earned Howie a record that still stands — "Most goals by a rookie in one game — 5". Here Howie accepts congratulations from Hap Day, the Leaf coach. Again this season Howie Meeker will share analyst duties with other ex-Leaf stars Bob Goldham and Babe Pratt on Hockey Night in Canada.

A Big Man Between the Pipes

After his one year "sabbatical" in a Toronto law firm Ken Dryden returns to the Montreal Canadiens nets this season. The return of the 6'4" goalie give Canadiens high hopes for another Stanley Cup season. In 134 regular season games he's allowed only an average of 2.2 goals per games. Ken and the Canadiens will be seen regularly on Hockey Night In Canada.

Hockey Night in Canada Ready

NHL Season Opens Wednesday

The eighteen hockey teams are ready for the start of a gruelling 80 game NHL schedule — so is Hockey Night In Canada's three ply telecast team.

Action gets under way Wednesday night.

National coverage on CTV will feature the New York Islanders at Montreal Canadiens game while CFTO (Toronto) carries the Kansas City Scouts at Toronto Maple Leafs contest.

Saturday, CBC will carry the New York Rangers at Toronto match, nationally.

In Montreal, Danny Gallivan, voted Canada's Outstanding Sportscaster last year, returns in the booth to team up with sidekick and color man, Dick Irvin, for their 9th season as a dynamic duo. In all Danny is commencing his 22nd season of colorful play calling. Last year his amazing consecutive game string of over 1,100 broadcasts was broken, but he's already well started on another long run at the microphone. Danny and Dick will be joined by a new intermission host this season. He's Dave Reynolds, CFCF Montreal sportscaster.

In Vancouver the on air crew is anchored by the veteran broadcaster Ted Reynolds as host. Jim Robson's exciting delivery will once again detail the play-by-play activities of the hometown Canucks while Bill Good Jr. is the color man and Walter Babe Pratt is resident good humorman and analyst.

Bill Hewitt and Brian McFarlane, Toronto's booth team last year, return for another year of describing the action from Maple Leaf Gardens. Dave Hodge is starting his fourth season as host and Jack Dennett can always be depended upon to plug any gaps that may arise. Foster Hewitt continues most of his broadcast activity to radio these days but will participate in the telecasts occasionally.

Newfoundland's Bob Cole made his Hockey Night in Canada debut last season as a swingman, filling in for both Bill Hewitt and Danny Gallivan. Bob's operational scope will likely be increased this season with more games from Montreal and Toronto as well as some possible visits to Vancouver, spelling off Jim Robson.

Only the Vancouver crew has a permanent analyst in Rabe Pratt, Montreal will present a variety of experts including Jean Beliveau, Red Storey, John Ferguson, Don Marshall, Red Fisher and recent Hall of Fame nominee Dickie Moore. Howie Meeker will add his pungent observations on some occasions from the Forum broadcast booth as well.

Toronto's resident analyst is veteran Bob Goldham, who'll handle the majority of Leaf games. Meeker, his former teammate of the mid-forties, will spell Bob from time to time over the season.

All of the analysts will be employing a new technique through much of the coming season. The emphasis of between period analysts will be on plays, situations and facets of the game that aren't readily apparent in the basic game coverage.

The analysts will be looking for and commenting about the often forgotten arts of the game which lead to goals being scored, big plays being made. An isolation camera will be deployed to provide a different look at various aspects of the game, all designed to provide more insight and more enjoyment on the hockey spectacle.

Overtime and Penalty Shots

Exhibition Schedule Ends

By THE CANADIAN PRESS

Penalty shots and overtime were featured in two consecutive victories for major league exhibition hockey Monday night.

In the final National Hockey League pre-season match, a penalty-shot goal by Bobby Schmautz in the second period helped Boston Bruins to a 7-6 victory over New York Rangers at Boston.

In a World Hockey Association match, Minnesota Fighting Saints beat Houston Aeros 4-3 on George Morrison's overtime goal.

Greg Sheppard, Andre Savard, Johnny Bucyk, Bobby Orr, Carol Vadnais and Terry O'Reilly scored the other Boston goals. Pete Stemkowski, Jerry Butler, Rod Selling and Rick Middleton shared New York's goals.

The Rangers took a 2-0 lead on a goal by Stemkowski in the first period and Butler's goal early in the second.

An unsuccessful penalty shot attempt by the Rangers' Ted Irvine at 12:38 of the second period was followed by three Boston goals.

Sheppard cut the deficit to 2-1, then Schmautz was awarded a penalty shot when he was tripped by defenceman Gilles Marotte on a breakaway.

Schmautz beat goalie Gilles Villemure to tie the score.

Savard put the Bruins ahead to stay.

Morrison scored with 30 seconds remaining in sudden death time in the match between last season's WHA finalists at St. Paul, Minn.

Houston had led 3-3 with three minutes to play in regulation time, but Dan Tannabill scored by banging in a Ted Hampson pass at 17:09 and at 18:46, Minnesota defenceman Terry Ball took Morrison's pass and hit the lower right of the net, past Houston goalie Wayne Rutledge. Scoring for Houston were Andre Hinse, Frank Hughes, Paul Popiel, Gord Labossiere and Yeakin Jerry Rushkowski.

Scoring earlier goals for the Saints were Ted Hampson, Kevin O'Shea, and John Arbour. Minnesota now is 4-0-1 in exhibition play while Houston is 1-3-1.

WHA pre-season action continues tonight with Toronto three meeting Cleveland Crusaders at Memphis while Michigan Stags are at home to Houston. The NHL regular season opens Wednesday.

Breathing Pause Common in Sleep

By G. C. THORTESON, MD

Dear Dr. Thosteson: When my husband sleeps he stops breathing for 60 seconds or so. His heart is beating but he is not bying perfectly still, which I find very frightening. Just before he starts to breathe again, he twitches a few times and then breathes normally again, starting with a deep breath.

It really upsets me. He won't see a doctor. Maybe it is normal but I would feel better if you could explain the reason. — Mrs. M.E.J.

Were he to hold his breath, while awake, for 60 seconds or so, you wouldn't be alarmed, and it wouldn't hurt him.

Well, when we are asleep, all the body processes slow down, including breathing. Periods of no breathing lasting about 10 seconds occur and can be frightening to someone who notices it.

However, there is nothing harmful about it, or even unusual. In this brief period of no breathing, carbon dioxide of course accumulates. Carbon dioxide is a respiratory stimulant, so as the carbon dioxide content of the blood increases, breathing starts, usually with a deep breath as you have noticed. That's all.

Dear Dr. Thosteson: I am a heart patient suffering from clogged arteries and am on medication. I feel best in summer. I would say my dream is, or was, to retire to Arizona. My doctor says I should stay away from extreme heat and extreme cold. I would like your opinion as the advisability of living in Prescott, Ariz., or its suburbs. Literature from the Chamber of Commerce says it is the health capital of the world. I am 43 and can afford to live there without working.—A.D.

I'll start with the advice I give almost everybody who is thinking about moving to another climate: Try it first! Go for a visit and see how the weather suits you. Evidently you can afford it.

Second, your doctor's advice about avoiding extremes of heat or cold makes sense.

Third, Arizona can get very hot indeed in summer. It was over 100 degrees not too long ago. But if you have air-conditioning, as many do, and will stay indoors at such times, your doctor might not object to your going. Why not discuss it with him?

Dear Dr. Thosteson: I asked the doctor's nurse for a fasting blood sugar test and she drew about 1 ml of blood about the size of a needle out of my finger. I never had it taken this that before. They always got it out of my arm and it took a vein to hear what the results were, but she had the results right away and wrote 110 mg. on my card. Is it possible to take a fasting blood sugar from the finger?—E.R.

Yes. In your past tests, the doctor may not have had his own equipment for such a test and had to send the blood to a laboratory.

Caribou Haven

The name of Pangnirtung, a settlement on Baffin Island, comes from an Eskimo word meaning "place of the large ball shaped rocks."

Straightens Itself

The Costicok River in Quebec's eastern Townships is named from an Indian word meaning "something crooked which straightens itself."

Ranks 16th

Alabama ranks 16th among the states in the number of beef cows and 20 in total cattle.

IN MEMORIAM

MOYES — In loving memory of our dear father and grandfather, Jack Moyes, who passed away Oct. 7, 1973.
Though tears on our eyes do not show,
And days seem a night or a morning,
We still think of the father we love,
And the grandfather we cherish and honour,
Who left a big gap in our lives,
But a day do we forget, dear,
Though we may not show how we feel,
Our love and our memories linger,
And time will not heal.
Sadly missed by daughter Gwen and husband Ken, daughter Joan and husband Bill, grandchildren Jeff, Jim, Jackie and Jill.

Cyclist in B.C. 8 Years on Road

PRINCE GEORGE, B.C. (CP) — Horst Drechsler, a bicycle enthusiast left Germany before eight years ago on an adventure around the world. Mr. Drechsler and his bike are still going strong.

Mr. Drechsler, who recently cycled his way into Prince George, has been North Africa, Asia, Australia, Japan, Hawaii, Alaska and Western Canada from the time he bicycled from here he plans to visit the United States, South America and Africa again before returning home.

"To see the world was my dream since I was a little boy," he said. "When I finished my studies I thought if I didn't do it now, I would never do it."

Mr. Drechsler took training as an electrician and an engineer, which has enabled him to find work when money begins to run out.

The 3500 lb. started with $5,000 a year and seven months taking him as far as Australia. There he earned enough money in a year to finance another three years, and it was not until he reached Vancouver that he had to work again.

In his eight years of travel, Mr. Drechsler has pedalled 26,000 miles and worn out 40 tires, five bicycle chains and three saddles.

His carries all his worldly possessions—clothing, a tent, a stove, food, and spare parts for the bicycle. His pack weighs 120 pounds, which, coupled with his 150-pound frame, puts a heavy strain on his vehicle.

Sleeping by the roadside and avoiding expensive government campsites, Mr. Drechsler said he travels between 25 and 120 miles a day depending on the terrain and the weather.

He said his journey was inspired by another German cyclist who circled the world 30 years ago.

Mr. Drechsler's counterpart completed his journey in only 2½ years, but the modern-day traveller said he has found the world, so beautiful he just can not stop.

The 34-year-old adventurer said the most dangerous of all countries to visit are the so-called civilized nations.

He said the drivers in these countries have posed the greatest threat to his life. He was in a cast for six months with a broken leg as a result of an Australian accident.

Nicobar Attracts Indians

BOMBAY (CP) — A remote and beautiful island in the Indian Ocean has begun to attract enterprising farmers and people tired of modern urban living.

Nearly 200 families from various parts of India have settled down in Nicobar Island, where 14,000 natives continue to live in a primitive world of their own.

A part of India since 1947, when the government of Denmark sold it to the British, Nicobar is a lush tropical area of about 350 square miles. The Indian government is encouraging maldanders to migrate to the island by providing them with handsome incentives.

The fact that Nicobar is separated from mainland India by nearly 900 miles of the Indian Ocean has made its modernization extremely difficult. Another major difficulty for Indian administrators has been the opposition of the Nicobaris to contacts with outsiders.

The Nicobaris have little in common with Indians. Though the bulk of them have been converted to Christianity by missionaries, they continue to believe in ancient rites like black magic and witch-doctors.

Indian farmers have brought several hundred acres under the plow. Among other things they grow rice, potatoes, bananas, oranges and coffee.

Other Indians have gone to Nicobar to find relief from the crowding problems of urban life.

Sardar Kartar Singh, a New Delhi businessman who spent a year in the island, said: "Nicobar is a paradise—one of the last on this polluted earth. There are few modern conveniences out there but after a time you get used to the new life. In fact, it is so much better than living in a crowded city."

Singh is taking his wife and two sons to Nicobar shortly.

The Indian government and the local church have started schools for Nicobari children. But, as one government official said: "The Nicobaris still cling to their primitive ways. An elderly native told the official that "schools will make the jungle spirits angry."

One major reason why the Nicobaris distrust outsiders is their bitter memories of Japanese occupation during the Second World War.

Many of them were tortured by Japanese soldiers and an estimated 200 were executed for refusing to collaborate with the invaders.

"Some of the islanders do not even know that the world war has ended," said one mainland immigrant.

Pear-shaped People Make Success in Life

LONDON (AP) — If you have a shape like a pear, don't let it bother you. You are more likely to succeed in life than most people.

At least, that is the nonscientific observation set forth in an article in The Director, journal of the British Institute of Directors.

Some of the pear-shaped people who have reached the top, says the article, are Napoleon, Gen. Charles de Gaulle, and British Prime Minister Harold Wilson as well as the nation's Conservative Opposition Leader, Edward Heath.

The article goes written by John Byrne, managing director of a glass manufacturing firm, who noted that many pear-shaped people achieved the heights of intelligence and leadership.

The successful type, says the article, has the rather narrow shoulders and elongated limbs of the lean type and the wide hips and somewhat pudgy chest and belly of the fat type.

In exaggerated form, the successful shape "is like a pear or inverted top," says the magazine. It is also known as the "Burgundy bottle" look.

Vietnam Oil Find Questioned

SAIGON (AP) — American geologists have taken a cautious approach to the announcement that traces of oil have been discovered off the coast of South Vietnam.

Their attitude has been in sharp contrast to that of Saigon government officials who are loudly aware that the production of petroleum could give a much-needed boost to the economy of South Vietnam.

Saigon's minister of trade, Nguyen Duc Quang, has voiced hope that the discovery would encourage foreign investment.

Officials said the oil was discovered 4,600 feet beneath the bottom of the South China Sea after only eight days of drilling. They said the site was located about 125 miles south of the coastal resort of Vung Tau.

It marked the first exploratory hole drilled by a joint venture of Shell and Cities Service. Other foreign oil companies are expected to start drilling soon under exploration rights granted in a large area off the coast.

It was noted, however, that about 300 wells off the coast of Libya had come with traces but without discovery of productive fields.

American officials said that even if the oil off South Vietnam proves to be of commercial value, it would take several years to begin production. Even then, the volume would probably be much smaller than that of the Middle East.

Although hopeful of making a strike, Saigon officials have shown considerable restraint in estimating the potential value of their prospective oil reserves. In 1972, Tran Van Khoi, executive director of the National Board of Petroleum, warned that Vietnam was no Middle East.

Some Vietnamese expressed hope that enough oil would be found to fill the gap left by the end of American aid and the deep inroads the war has made on rice farming in the whole area.

Arthritics Are Fleeced

VANCOUVER (CP) — A spokesman for the Canadian Arthritis and Rheumatism Society says frauds cost arthritis sufferers in Canada $20 million last year.

Mildred Jeffery, the society's public information director for British Columbia, said arthritis victims spend more than $10 on quack cures for every dollar spent on legitimate arthritis research.

"People suffering from arthritis are susceptible to quackery because of the way the pain plays on and on," she said.

Ineffective treatments like visits to radioactive mines and inhalations of moon dust harm people by keeping them away from reputable medical care, she said.

Whites' Last Bastion

The white-ruled states of Rhodesia and South Africa serve, to all intents and purposes, the last bastions of white supremacy on the African continent.

Early in September, the Portuguese government abandoned the policies of the regime it deposed earlier in the year and granted the independence to Guinea-Bissau, ending more than a decade of guerrilla war in what was previously Portuguese Guinea. Similarly, Portugal bowed to the Frelimo independence movement after years of war and promised Mozambique full independence by June 25. Portugal's third, and richest, African colony, Angola, also is preparing for self-determination.

As a result, Rhodesia and South Africa are faced with the prospect of defending borders which once had acted as buffers between them and Black Africa.

South Africa appears to be better able to accept the spread of black nationalism than Rhodesia. Mozambique's economy replies in a large measure on South Africa's use of the ports of Lourenco Marques and Beira, its use of power from the Kabora Bassa Dam in Mozambique's western arm, and the dependence of the tourist industry on South Africans. Some observers feel Mozambique and South Africa will perhaps grudgingly accept the need to make limited economic deals.

Rhodesia is not so fortunate. Mozambique has little need to deal with the government of Ian Smith, and it is likely its ports will be closed to Rhodesia. Rhodesian African nationalists will find it easier to launch attacks from a black-ruled Mozambique and some western diplomats predict Rhodesia could be a black ruled nation in three years.

With an African government in Angola, South Africa almost certainly will face increased guerrilla attacks on South-west Africa, which it now controls. The same diplomats believe South-West Africa could fall before Rhodesia. (CP News-

New Zealanders Like Leadership Changes

AUCKLAND (CP) — The new leadership of New Zealand's Labor government has been welcomed by all political groups in the hope that it will be able to bring more muscle into setting the economy on an even keel.

The change of leadership was forced on the dismayed Labor regime when Prime Minister Norman E. Kirk died at the age of 51 following a heart seizure. A big man in stature and personality, he had so dominated the government since it took office in late 1972 that no other member of the cabinet had any strong base with the public.

The Labor caucus in Parliament chose Finance Minister Wallace Edward Rowling as Kirk's successor in preference to Labor Minister Hugh Watt, who had been the late prime minister's deputy. His first announcement was that he would give increased attention to domestic problems.

The 46-year-old prime minister majored in economics for his master of arts degree and was a part-time lecturer in economics at Canterbury University before entering politics. He describes himself as more conservative in outlook than some members of his party.

Robert James Tizard, 50, the party's spokesman on finance before it attained power and health minister in the Kirk administration, has been named deputy prime minister and minister of finance.

Given the economic background of the new prime minister and finance minister, the government is expected to gear its policy to a stronger attack on inflation.

New Zealand has been no more successful than other countries in finding an answer to inflation although governments sometimes contend that the spiral has been kept under better control than elsewhere.

The Kirk government was attacked for granting inflationary wage increases to the country's militant trade unions with Labor Minister Hugh Watt singled out for a major share of the criticism.

Watt, an unsuccessful candidate to succeed Kirk despite strong union backing, has been switched in the works portfolio by Rowling, who gave the labor assignment to another leading cabinet member, A. J. Faulkner.

Flush of Modest Prosperity Has Ended for Bell Island

BELL ISLAND, Nfld. (CP) — The flush of modest prosperity is over for this island, with its stark cliffs rising abruptly from the green waters of Conception Bay.

Like many Newfoundland communities, Bell Island has been, financially, a solid point from the beginning — one that has struck this province harder than any other in the country.

In some areas, a declining fishery, seasonal and cyclical logging and pulp industries or simply rapid population growth have led to the high jobless rate.

Bell Island, because it was a major iron-mining centre, has a different history. It was never dependent on the fishing industry or logging.

But that did not save Bell Island. Richer ores in Labrador sucked the industrial lifeblood from the island and the last mine closed in 1966.

Now those who are left on the island live in a community without an industrial base. Those who work provide services to others or commute to St. John's, about 10 miles away.

The rest struggle along on welfare, unemployment insurance or pensions, often wandering the roads and trying for the scarce work available locally.

Many have left the island. In 1959, when the first of the Wabana mines closed the population was about 14,000. Now it is 7,000.

The record of unemployment in Newfoundland, as reported by Statistics Canada, is depressing.

In June, the seasonally-adjusted jobless rate for Newfoundland reached a peak of 20.5 per cent. The national average was 4.9.

By August, the rate was down to 17.6 per cent, while the national average was 5.3.

Since August, 1970, the average annual jobless rate in the province has never dropped below 16.6 per cent. The closest any other province came to that figure was the 8.3 rate of New Brunswick in 1973.

While the unemployment rate is higher in Newfoundland, the participation rate—the proportion of those of labor force age who are working or actively looking for work—is the lowest of all provinces. In August, it was 48.6 per cent compared with the national average of 58.9.

Two per cent of Canada's population lives in Newfoundland and Labrador, but about five per cent of unemployment insurance payments are made there.

Between August, 1972, and August, 1974, the labor force in the province grew to 198,000 from 188,000. But the number of those employed remained static at 174,000.

The government have been questioned by provincial government officials, but no one disputes that unemployment is higher here than elsewhere.

Behind the statistics is a multitude of woeful tales.

Coc Boone, 63, worked at a fish plant in St. John's until he was laid off during the recent fishermen's strike. Now that the strike is over, he could return to work, but he will have to wait about two weeks for the trawlers to bring in their catch.

A former Bell Island miner, Mr. Boone, who has nine children and a Grade 4 education, once worked in the mines at Thermalite, Man. It was too far from home, so he returned.

Jim Gastwell, a laborer-truck driver with seven children, went to Toronto to work for $2.65 an hour—about $110 weekly.

But he had to pay $300 a month for a three-room apartment. Then he was laid off.

He returned to Bell Island, where a two-storey stucco home sold for $5,500, a man can raise a garden of vegetables and where he has friends.

Another man, who learned carpentry in "Her Majesty's Hotel"—the provincial jail in St. John's—built his own home on the island but is unable to get a job as a carpenter because he lacks the proper papers.

As official goes to the island one day a week from St. John's, but most of the time the unemployed must make the way to the city to find work.

Potter Wants Inquiry

DR. RICHARD POTTER

TORONTO (CP) — Richard Potter, Ontario minister of correctional services, said Monday he will recommend to the provincial cabinet that a public inquiry be held into conditions at the Don jail here.

Dr. Potter said in a news release his decision followed a police investigation into allegations that prisoners had been assaulted by guards at the jail.

"Today, I received an interim report from the Metropolitan Toronto police and, after reviewing the contents of this report, I have decided to recommend to my colleagues in the provincial cabinet that an inquiry be ordered under the Public Inquiries Act," Dr. Potter said.

"I am taking this course of action, after examining the report, I believe that the interest of the public—and particularly the interest both of staff and inmates at the Toronto jail would best be served by a public inquiry."

Dr. Potter cited published reports that a former guard at the jail described abuse of the prisoners by the guards and "some staff and co-inmates" might have been directly involved in the death of a prisoner at the jail Sept. 5.

"The cause of this inmate's death falls within the scope of an inquest to be held Nov. 15," Dr. Potter said.

Brucellosis Breaks Out

OTTAWA (CP) — About 85 cattle herds in Carleton County are under quarantine because of an outbreak of brucellosis, a federal agriculture department spokesman said Monday.

None of the affected animals except steers may be sold and no new animals can be brought into contact with the diseased cattle, the spokesman said.

But farmers can still deliver milk from the cattle, he added. Pasteurization kills the brucellosis bacteria in the milk.

The spokesman said 15 inspectors from the health of animals branch will begin Oct. 20 checking all herds in the county. There are an estimated 1,500 cattle herds in the area.

Wants Inquest Halted

TORONTO (CP) — Lawyer Paul Copeland said Monday he will seek to halt a scheduled inquest into the death of a prisoner at Millhaven penitentiary until he is able to represent the interests of other convicts there.

The prisoner, Kenneth Nalon, 40, died Aug. 10 in his cell and prison officials said at the time his death apparently was a suicide. The inquest is scheduled to start Wednesday in Kingston, Ont.

Hydro Holds Hearings

NEWCASTLE, Ont. (CP) — Two alternate routes for the proposed Lennox-Oshawa power route will be considered at two more Solandt consultation hearings in November, Dr. Omond Solandt announced Monday.

Dr. Solandt, former chairman of the Science Council of Canada, is a member of the one-man commission. Newcastle is 15 miles east of Oshawa.

Ontario Hydro wants to run a transmission line from Lennox near Napanee, to Oshawa, picking up feeder lines along the way from new generating stations at Wesleyville and Bowmanville.

Dr. Solandt said the hearings are scheduled for Nov. 6 and Nov. 13 in Newcastle.

Sugar Firms in Court

MONTREAL (CP) — Lawyers for Eastern Canada's three largest sugar companies pleaded not guilty Monday to charges of conspiracy to fix prices and lessen competition, as their trial began before Mr. Justice Kenneth C. Mackay of Court of Queen's Bench.

The lawyer for Redpath Industries Ltd., Atlantic Sugar Refineries Co. Ltd., and St. Lawrence Sugar Ltd. and St. Lawrence Sugar Ltd. also asked for a bill of particulars specifying how, where, and with whom the conspiracies are alleged to have taken place.

The Crown's indictment says the companies conspired with each other and nine other sugar and brokerage companies in Canada, New York City, London, England, West Indies, India, and South Africa to raise the price of sugar in such places as Ontario, Quebec, New Brunswick, Nova Scotia, Prince Edward Island and Newfoundland, between 1959 and 1972. A trial by charge is laid for conspiracy between companies.

U.S. Firms Get Break

TORONTO (CP) — The Globe and Mail says exemptions of more than $200,000 have been granted to foreign firms under Ontario's land transfer tax.

The biggest single exemption in the latest group approved by the revenue ministry was for $200,000 for Xerox of Canada Ltd., the newspaper says.

Xerox was exempted from paying the 50-per-cent tax on non-farmland. It said it was in the process of purchasing in the Oakville area when the government announced its new tax in the April budget.

The company is putting together a research facility in Oakville. Its head office is based in Connecticut.

Indians Fail to Show

OTTAWA (CP) — Elected representatives of Indian peoples and organizations did not show for what was termed a national assembly called by leaders of militant Indians occupying an abandoned building.

The meeting, called for 7 p.m. EDT Monday, was billed as the "first national assembly of the Indian peoples" by leaders of the Indian caravan that left Vancouver in mid-September and brought protest to the pomp and pageantry of the opening of Parliament Sept. 30.

Shortly after 9 p.m., a spokesman for the caravan told reporters there would be a news conference at 10 a.m. today. He refused to comment on the scheduled meeting not taking place.

Security was tighter than usual and reporters were confined to a small room near the side entrance to the old stone building, a few blocks from Parliament Hill.

Today, five of the occupants are scheduled to appear in provincial court on charges arising from the Parliament Hill disturbances.

Donald Greig, 30, of Guelph, Ont., Archie Boots, 34, of Cornwall, Ont., and Paul George Lane, 26, of Hamilton, Ont., are charged with assaulting a police officer.

John Corrie, 18, of Toronto and James Kenick, 40, of Ottawa are charged with obstructing a police officer.

Gun Story Withdrawn

OTTAWA (CP) — Don Whiteside, president of the Canadian Federation of Civil Liberties and Human Rights Association, denied Monday he ever having said that a member of the RCMP had a gun during a violence-marked Indian demonstration Sept. 30 on Parliament Hill.

"I may have said that I was pushed with a gun or something like that," Mr. Whiteside said in denying a Canadian Press report Oct. 2 that he had said in an interview that a policeman pulled a gun when Mr. Whiteside went to help an elderly woman pushed by a baton-wielding RCMP constable.

Mr. Whiteside said some members of the RCMP riot squad tear-gas guns but others had both hands full—baton in one and plastic shield in the other—and could hardly have drawn guns.

New Pipeline Ready in 1976

OTTAWA (CP) — Energy Minister Donald MacDonald said Monday he hopes an extension of the interprovincial pipeline to Montreal from Sarnia, Ont., will be completed in early 1976.

He told Marcel Lambert (PC—Edmonton West) in the Commons that National Energy Board hearings on the pipeline application will resume Wednesday. If the board approves the application, construction could start late this fall or early in the spring.

In an interview later, he said the pipeline extension proposal is "absolutely all short the split it needed for "security of supply."

The existing pipeline moves western crude oil to refineries at Sarnia and Toronto. The world alert movement of the oil to Montreal for use in the eastern market.

"It's needed for security of supply," Mr. Macdonald said. "We're out of the woods at the moment, but there is no guarantee that supplies won't be cut again in future."

He added that an oil embargo "is still the best weapon the Arabs have."

Before the Arab embargo last winter, Alberta crude oil fed the domestic market and the energy board flow through the Ottawa Valley. Oil purchased in the world market was used primarily east of the Ont.

The federal government said it wanted the pipeline extended so that the eastern provinces could get oil supplies from the West in case of any future embargo.

It was originally hoped the pipeline would be ready to be completed in 1975, Mr. Macdonald said. But energy board approval was delayed last spring when the Quebec government opposed a proposed route for the pipeline.

The province said the route would take the pipeline through the Lake of Two Mountains near the intake pipes for the Montreal water supply.

A new route was selected this summer during negotiations between Ontario and the company, Interprovincial Pipe-lines Ltd.

Indian Royalties Raised

OTTAWA (CP) — A bill to ratify new royalty rates for oil and gas taken from Indian reserves was introduced in the Commons Monday by Indian Affairs Minister Judd Buchanan.

Indian Act regulations proclaimed last March by cabinet raised the royalty rates to the new levels established by Alberta and Saskatchewan, the chief oil-producing provinces.

PM Dampens Takeover Talk

OTTAWA (CP) — Prime Minister Trudeau dampened speculation Monday that the Canadian Pacific takeover of Canadian Pacific Investments Ltd. in Montreal.

He told the Commons that MPs should not get up any argument to nationalize the company on the basis of a statement he made last week. He said Thursday he would consider a takeover.

United Aircraft workers have been on strike at the Longueuil plant for nine months. Representatives met Monday with Ed Broadbent, New Democratic Party parliamentary leader.

Mr. Broadbent renewed his call for nationalization Monday, telling Mr. Trudeau in the House that it would be in the interests of both the workers and the public. A takeover would mean fair treatment for employees and would tie in with the operations of de Havilland Aircraft in Toronto.

De Havilland, which buys engines from United Aircraft, already has been taken over by the government.

Mr. Broadbent asked for a debate by the end of the week.

The prime minister said only that there is no federal policy of nationalizing companies to settle labor disputes.

While Mr. Broadbent discussed the matter inside the Parliament buildings, about 30 United Aircraft workers demonstrated peacefully for 15 minutes outside.

Feels Inflation Embedded

OTTAWA (CP) — All governments must make a renewed effort to control inflation because of recent international economic developments, Finance Minister John Turner said Monday.

He told the Commons that economic circumstances have been changed by international crop failures and high oil and commodity prices.

"All this means that inflation is more embedded and its solution will mean a more protracted effort on the part of this country and other countries than was anticipated six months ago."

He was replying to Opposition Leader Robert Stanfield who asked for elaboration on a reference to inflation in the throne speech, read when Parliament opened Sept. 30.

The speech said the government was consulting various groups—business, labor, the professions, farmers and provincial governments—to devise new anti-inflation measures.

Mr. Turner said Monday that informal consultations have taken place and discussions will "reach a more concrete form" later.

When this happens, he said, new information will be made public, either by himself or Prime Minister Trudeau.

Mr. Stanfield asked whether the consultations are a genuine attempt to solve inflation or a move to cover up ignorance and confusion and to give the government more time.

Mr. Turner replied the voters chose the government's anti-inflation program over proposals to apply wage and price controls, advocated by the Conservatives.

Seeking Extension Of Subsidy

OTTAWA (CP) — The Canadian Labor Congress asked the federal government Monday to continue the five-cent-a-quart subsidy on field milk.

Shirley Carr, executive vice-president of the congress, said the federal government's decision to eliminate the subsidy in stages threatens the welfare of low-and moderate-income families.

The federal government has indicated it will eliminate the subsidy paid to the provinces by one cent a month.

In a statement, the congress urged the government to study the recommendation of Daryl Thompson, chairman of the food prices review board, to reinstate the full subsidy, retroactive to Oct. 1.

Ouellet Defends Mail

OTTAWA (CP) — A demand that alleged misleading advertising by the post office be stopped caught Communist Affairs Minister Andre Ouellet off guard Monday.

He let before his old and new portfolios Monday.

"The post office service in Canada is one of the best in the world," he said in reply to a Commons question by Peter Stoddon (PC—Calgary South).

Mr. Rawlon asked Mr. Ouellet, postmaster-general until the August cabinet shuffle, if he would "take steps to prevent further misleading advertising by the post office on next-day deliveries."

The post office has been advertising that mail posted by a certain time in various centres will be delivered the next day to other cities.

The Alberta MP said the post office is in a chaotic state as proved by a Calgary test in which "98 per cent of letters and parcels were delivered late or not at all."

In his reply, Mr. Ouellet ignored the charge of misleading advertising, a responsibility of his new department, to defend the post office.

Bryce Mackasey, the new postmaster-general, said new automatic equipment for deciphering postal codes has caused some problems in the Calgary post office.

Ford Takes Tax, Promises Homes

WASHINGTON (AP) — President Ford has challenged Congress and the United States to accept higher taxes and less energy as part of an anti-inflation program that also includes jobs for the unemployed and stepped-up production to halt food-price increases.

Congress has indicated it is willing to co-operate up to a point.

Democrats by many lawmakers indicated that the point at which they would balk would be at enactment of a five-per-cent surcharge on the tax levied on incomes of more than $15,000 for a family and $7,500 for a single person.

But with events this year just beginning to take their toll on the public purse, a national election in mid-November and politically unwise . . . Ford told Congress at a . . . Interfaith joint session of the House of Representatives and Senate.

"But I do so in all sincerity . . . and we may politics with America's future. . . . This is the acid test of our joint determination to act . . . and act now."

He asked the nationwide audience to help . . . make . . . hard . . . choices here, hear, and . . . share with others."

Congressional leaders moved fast to...two measures on which Ford asked for immediate action: a resolution to hold spending at 1974 levels, $6 billion less than Nixon ordered, and legislation he said would clear the way for the government to pour $3 billion into the ailing home mortgage market enough for 100,000 homes, by buying conventional as well as government-insured mortgages.

Leaders conferred on ways to get procedural...through and send these two measures to Ford by Friday, the day Congress is scheduled to begin a month's campaigning recess.

Ford's hour-long program ranged over the issues of taxes, food production, employment, energy, capital, building and price-raising practices both of the government and the private sector.

The proposed surcharge would apply to corporate income and to private incomes above the specified levels.

Ford's annual income would compute his tax in the usual way, then add five per cent to the tax on that part of his income above the specified levels—$7,200 for a single person and $15,000 for a family.

The surcharge would be in effect for a year only.

Some congressmen said the personal-income surcharge has no chance, others that increasing public concern on inflation might...put it over, and many that it might be enacted if the income floor were raised to $20,000, $25,000 or some higher figure.

"By now, almost everybody else has stated my position on federal gasoline taxes," Ford said. "This time I'll do it myself... I am not asking you for any increase in gas taxes."

He said the tax measures he is seeking would raise an estimated $5 billion, which "should pay for all additional taxes I have recommended in this message."

"To halt higher food prices, we must produce more food," he said. He asked Congress to remove acreage limitations on wheat and cotton, and said he will allocate to farmers by the fuel and fertilizer they need.

"Those who suffer most from inflation, he said, are "those with the smallest...through no fault of their own."

Housing Highest

Living Costs Slowing Down

OTTAWA (CP) — The consumer price index rose six-tenths of one per cent in September, the lowest month-to-month increase this year, Statistics Canada reported today.

Higher mortgage costs and rent increases helped push up the housing component of the index as this segment accounted for about four-fifths of the overall gain.

Seasonal declines in prices of fresh fruit and vegetables and a drop in beef prices moderated the increase in the food index, which was up four-tenths of one per cent. Prices of processed fruits and vegetables, dairy products and sugar were among those going higher.

The September index level of 170.6 was 10.9 per cent above the level of a year ago.

The index number means that a mix of consumer items which could be bought for $100 in 1961 cost $170.60 in September, $169.60 in August and $153.90 last September.

The purchasing power of the 1961 dollar was down to 59 cents in September.

The largest gain during the 12 months to September was an 18.1 per cent rise in the restaurant food index. Next were increases recorded in the indexes for food eaten at home and household operation.

Canadian Farmers Can Double Output

OTTAWA (CP) — Canadian farmers could double food production if they had more stable federal government support, a Canadian conference on the world food crisis was told Tuesday.

Caretakers Sworn In

ATHENS (Reuter) — A caretaker cabinet under Premier Constantine Karamanlis was sworn in today to supervise Sunday's Nov. 17 parliamentary elections — the first in a decade.

Charles Munro, president of the Canadian Federation of Agriculture, and of the Canadian International Federation of Agricultural Producers, told Canada would have much more food for export to under-developed countries if the government could end the "boom and bust" cycle in the farm economy.

Mr. Munro, a farmer in the southwestern Ontario community of Exeter, said government should stabilize farm marketing practices, clamp down on the conversion of prime farm land to other uses and invest more money in agriculture research.

Housing May be Force-fed

TORONTO (CP) — Municipalities may be forced to start to accept some form of government-sponsored housing, Donald Irvine, the new Ontario minister of housing, said in an interview Tuesday.

"If necessary, we'll pass legislation to force municipalities in areas which as far as we're concerned have great needs for housing."

"But I see no reason why a region that has no senior citizen housing, no rent-geared-to-income housing and no non-profit, ale-income housing shouldn't have to do its part," he said.

Grain May Move By Weekend

OTTAWA (CP) — Grain may be moving by Tuesday night or Wednesday if Commons "grain handlers" strike they say is now by the end of the week.

"We're asking for necessary consent from all parties to get this thing done with before the weekend," a government spokesman said after the bill passed second reading—approval in principle—by a 137-to-77 vote in the Commons.

Only the Progressive Conservative party opposed the bill, which would legislate an end to the dispute between 350 grain handlers and five elevator companies.

However, Conservative House Leader Gerald Baldwin said in an interview his party will co-operate to speed the bill if Labor Minister John Munro and Otto Lang, minister responsible for the wheat board, are candid when they appear before the Commons labor committee.

The bill goes to the committee today and both the Liberal government and the Conservatives expect it to emerge there through Thursday. Following committee study, final Commons passage, Senate approval and routine royal assent are regarded as a formality in law.

Mr. Munro said Tuesday night he hopes the bill will be in effect by the end of the week. Grain should start moving in about another day, he added.

The government spokesman said both the New Democratic and Social Credit parties have said they will help expedite passage.

Normally, there is at least a 48-hour waiting period between a bill leaving committee and final reading, but Mr. Baldwin said his party will agree to waive that delay if the two ministers are forthright in committee.

News Briefs

WASHINGTON (Reuter) — United States State secretary Henry Kissinger left by air early today on another trip to the Middle East, seeking to get Arab-Israeli peace talks moving again and to explore what can be done about the oil crisis. Kissinger, who will devote the first four days of his mission to talks in the Middle East peace issue, and the...of the time mainly to the oil question, arrives in Cairo tonight.

Pensions Edge Up

OTTAWA (CP) — The September increase in the consumer price index indicates there will be a 12.69 increase in old age security payments in January. This is a preliminary figure because details of the index level must be considered before a payment adjustment can be made and it is based on an estimated five per cent rise in the index level next month. The monthly old age security payment rate was set at $117.65 beginning this month.

Smokers Big Cause

TORONTO (CP) — Ross Brown, Toronto's director of fire prevention, says people tend to blame inanimate objects for a fire when it is usually caused by human negligence. He said careless smokers caused 1,000 of Toronto's 3,823 fires last year. Mr. Brown added that nine of every 10 fires in the city could be prevented. This week is Fire Prevention Week in Canada.

Athletes Use Drugs

OTTAWA (CP) — More athletes are using drugs in their competitive drive for peak performances but some of the drugs could be dangerous, says a spokesman for the drug-screening program for the 1976 Montreal Olympics. It remains to be proved that the most widely used drugs, the amphetamines, actually improve athletic performance, Dr. Robert Dugal and Michel Bertrand told Tuesday at a Spectrotoxy Society of Canada meeting. Amphetamines and related compounds produce alertness, wakefulness, decreased sense of fatigue, heightened confidence and ability to concentrate, they said.

Cheevers Claims Game Plan Bugged

TORONTO (CP) — Gerry Cheevers says the rooms of Team Canada players are bugged during their recent intrasquad game in Toronto's Maple Leaf Gardens.

"After the first game in Moscow we decided to hold a team meeting in one of the committee rooms on the 19th floor of the Rossia Hotel.

"Billy (Harris) said he noticed the fixtures were playing wide and we should be burning out through the openings in the middle. We all agreed that was an intelligent suggestion.

"Harris also stated at the second game in Moscow and during the intervening holidays he had been thinking about the game. Bugged in the middle. Only thing was, he couldn't remember the game there was at least one Soviet player guarding that bugged spot on opening in the previous games. You have to credit it, was rather a quick change in the Soviets' tactics, don't you think?

Harris, who played in seven of the eight games against the Russians, was traded all four in Moscow—the Russians won the series with four victories, one loss and three ties—said he used a listening device in his hotel dresser.

He examined it carefully, sang a few Canadian songs, then tore it apart. I don't think they found out what I heard that afternoon in my hotel room. I guess that's where we should have held our meeting.

"Some of the other players also found hidden microphones. Gordie Howe was one and Mike (Walton) another. Shakey (Walton) taught the Soviets the meaning of the English language when he detected the bit-size transmitter. I don't think they'll play that tape back in public."

Kidnappers Make Deal

SANTO DOMINGO (AP) — The United States ambassador says six leftist terrorists have agreed to release the hostages they have held for 12 days in the Venezuelan Consulate in exchange for safe conduct out of the Dominican Republic.

"We are now negotiating final details and we cannot say how long it will take," Ambassador Robert Hurwitch told reporters Tuesday night.

Hurwitch said he does not know where the terrorists will choose to fly to what country will agree to receive them. There was speculation that they will go to Mexico, Peru or Algeria.

On Sept. 27, the terrorists kidnapped Barbara Hutchison, 47, the head of the U.S. Information Service here, and took her from outside her office to the consulate. There they captured two Venezuelan consular officers, a Spanish priest and a Dominican messenger and holed up with the group on the second floor.

The initial demands included $1 million in cash and the release of 37 political prisoners.

British Election Thursday

Heath Issues Eleventh-hour Warning

LONDON (CP) — A seemingly hard - pressed Conservative Leader Edward Heath has pulled out all the stops in making his bid for victory in Thursday's British general election.

Confronted with decidedly unfavorable public opinion polls and a highly-confident Prime Minister Harold Wilson, Heath lashed out Tuesday night that Britain faces austerity, frugality and sacrifice—"a kind of danger we have never faced before."

But Heath's warning that "it could be a slump worse than the 1930s merely prompted one business newspaper to interpret the Tory leader's speech as his first public indication of doubt regarding the outcome of the election.

In making this comment, The Financial Times of London cited Heath's remark as indication that he wished his message about impending hard times had struck home across the land.

"It may be the fault of politicians like me. If it hasn't," Heath said in a campaign speech.

In a remarkable instance of election-eve apologetics, Heath said:

"Perhaps our language hasn't been the right language. We may have underestimated people's reaction to a challenge of this dimension."

Polls conducted for Conservative - supporting newspapers showed an increasingly solid lead for the Labor party as Britons prepared to vote in their second general election this year.

Wilson earned...ridicule when he ridiculed Tory allegations that his Labor government had put the interest of the country at crisis.

Despite last-minute Tory charges that Labor is dominated by left-wingers, Wilson asserted that to abandon his government's policies now would end Britain's hopes of overcoming its economic crisis.

Long-time observers of Wilson described him as looking more confident on the eve of this election than on any previous occasion of this kind.

Yet today brings an editorial declaration from The Times newspaper expressing hope for a coalition between the Conservatives and the small Liberal party, which had 13 seats in the last election in the House of Commons.

"Such a government would be European, progressive, international, unsympathetic to further nationalization and relentless in its resistance to inflation," The Times says.

Right to the virtual end of the election campaign, Heath has been plugging his main plank in the all-important fight against inflation—the "social contract" between the government and the unions, exchanging worker wage restraint for the pledge of government steps towards a more just society.

"It is a policy of consent and partnership on a scale never before tried in this country," Wilson told a national television audience.

Fire Destroys Two-storey Home

CARRYING PEACE — No one was injured in a mid-day blaze Tuesday that gutted the two-storey frame home on Amelissburg township's second concession southeast of here.

Both the Amelissburg and Wellington-Hillier fire departments were called out to the blaze reported by a neighbor at 10 a.m. Firefighters worked into the early afternoon before flames were completely doused.

No one was in the house when it caught fire.

Cause of the blaze is unknown but fire department officials said they believe it started in the kitchen at the rear of the two-storey wood-frame structure.

Capt. Jim Lynn said firefighters had difficulty getting at the fire once it reached the attic.

He speculated the flames started in the ground floor, burnt through a lean-to into the false roof, and up a wall into the attic. Heavy fire breakers in the walls of the house slowed flames in some upstairs unchecked, he said.

Firemen Douse Blaze

Firefighters brought the blaze at the Amelissburg township concession road two home of Dale Beckwith under control before noon Tuesday and finally doused flames in the early afternoon. Amelissburg and Wellington-Hillier firemen were called to the blaze at 10 a.m. It is unknown what caused the fire that gutted the two-storey home, valued at an estimated $25,000.

Oshkosh Saves Lives At CFB Trenton

TRENTON — Close to a ton of machinery, the Oshkosh plows through a wall of flame, siren wailing in an abrupt downed on the runway.

Foam sprays from the front mass from beneath the vehicle, the pests. Its own way in the heart of the blaze where any potential fuel called the plane's personnel will take place.

It's not an easy operation, but firefighters at CFB Trenton are prepared for the eventuality with their crash-rescue vehicle always using the base will crash.

The Oshkosh is the prime piece of equipment base firemen have to fight fires other than those in buildings. Each of the three at the base are 22 feet long, weigh 1,800 pounds carry 822 gallons of water and 110 gallons of light water, aqueous foam.

Cpl. Donald Spears said Tuesday, what's mixed, the water and foam-and-it squash a jet fuel fire effectively.

The information officer said foam sprays from nose-ground nozzles and nozzles in the diesel truck to reach the fire centre.

Most recently, said Cpl. Spears, the trucks were used after the mid-air collision of two Tudor jets during the June 16, 1974 airshow at the base. One plane landed safely, the other, piloted by Hangar 10 with the loss of the pilot's life.

The Oshkosh and the remaining five firefighting vehicles were standby by at the time. Firemen had all machinery outside the hall. The men were dressed.

They were prepared, said Cpl. Spears.

However, rescue work with armored aircraft is only part of the role base firefighters fulfill.

Fire prevention and protection in Middleton Park, along the Highway 2 hanger line, in administrative buildings and in the Aircraft Maintenance Unit (AMDU) most also be provided.

The 24 firefighters also conduct monthly inspections of nearly all facilities on the base.

CFB Trenton fire hall facilities and their role as two-time winners fire-fighters — crash and building protection — are open this week, Fire Prevention Week, to area school children.

Chief Says School Education Key to Better Fire Prevention

By MARG HAYLOCK
Staff Reporter

PICTON — "People are growing more fire conscious every year," says Picton fire chief Leonard Tripp.

Town fire chief for more than five years, he suggests one of the best ways to promote awareness of fire safety rules is through education programs in elementary schools. Each year more than 1,500 youngsters tour the Picton fire hall where they are shown firefighting equipment and told of fire prevention methods. Pamphlets containing check lists for home hazards are distributed and the students are encouraged to have their parents complete the forms.

Inspection of Picton area commercial and industrial sites will be conducted by the Picton fire department this week in conjunction with Fire Prevention Week in Canada.

Home owners and tenants also may request free inspections to detect potential fire hazards.

Chief Tripp explains a recent program advertising these free inspections failed because there were too few requests to justify the cost of the ads.

When an inspection is made firemen check for rubbish heaps, overloaded and overfused fuse boxes, defective wiring, flammable liquid stored in unsafe places, defective chimneys and blocked exits. Also on the danger list are paint and oily rags not in metal containers, combustibles too close to a heat source and no proper means of exit.

If one or more of these hazards is detected during an inspection, the home owner or occupant is given time to correct it and a second safety check is made.

Picton fire department, headed by Chief Tripp has 17 firefighters. Twelve are volunteers, who drill at the fire hall weekly except during July and August.

"I don't know of any fire department that has all the equipment it wants," observes Chief Tripp, referring to the Picton brigade.

"The town has been conscious for many years but the cost of a department makes all costs much higher. Budgets have to be watched," he says.

"The cost of equipment is terrific," adds the fire chief.

Picton's first fire truck was a 1936 Dodge pumper that carried soda acid tanks. It is still used by the department today although it has been modified to carry a 300-gallon tank and pump that can handle six gallons per minute.

"It's in perfect shape," says Chief Tripp, speaking of the veteran pumper.

A 1955 model International with a 500-gallon tank was purchased new by the department in that year.

In 1970, a new Dodge truck was purchased and is capable of pumping 615 gallons of water per minute. This truck also is equipped with a 30-foot ladder.

Although there has been a campaign to paint emergency vehicle yellow, Picton's fire truck's remain bright red.

"Everyone expects a fire truck to be red," says Chief Tripp.

He adds that with the truck's flashing lights on, the color of the vehicle is not really distinguishable in any event.

"Yellow doesn't goes over too well," observes the chief. Prince Edward County's only yellow fire truck was purchased in 1972 by the Wellington-Hillier fire department.

Chief Tripp, discussing community fire protection, offers enthusiastic support for the Mutual Aid association. This agreement, among area fire departments, provides valuable back-up protection for all of the participating brigades in the event of emergency.

"Mutual aid is not an organization of fire chiefs but of fires and firefighters. We all get together," explains Chief Tripp.

The Picton fire department seals protection to several rural townships, among them North Marysburgh and Athol and Prince Edward Heights. The provincial government facility for the mentally retarded also is protected, as is Loch Sloy Industrial Park.

Picton Hires Engineer

PICTON — A Picton resident, David Hickman, has been appointed town engineer, filling a municipal post vacant for almost two years.

One of nine applicants for the engineer's job, Mr. Hickman has been employed with the Lake Ontario Cement Company Ltd.

In 1972, he was elected to the Public Utilities Commission here and is completing a two-year term of office.

Town councillors this summer agreed an engineer should be re-hired in view of community growth.

The engineer's salary will be $12,500 a year with an additional car allowance of $500.

Town councillor Jack Evans quoted Mr. Hickman's position with the PUC and was told he would resign as a commissioner, once appointed as municipal engineer.

Murray Requests Frankford Aid

FRANKFORD — After dropping Frankford fire department's services, Murray Township wants them back.

Trenton wanted more money to provide fire protection to Murray than that township's mayor could stand so Brighton and Frankford were eliminated two years ago.

The area's residents might protect with its fire fighters extends from Gentor Settlement Rd., which runs south of the Stockdale Rd., to Wooler, and north to the German Settling area on the Trent River.

Reeve Bill Rose said at committee meeting last week if the village was stepping into something it couldn't handle.

Councillor Carl Smith pointed out they had looked after the job for 25 years, but said more daytime men were needed.

Councillor Carmen Allied said that out of 70 volunteers, three or four men could leave at any time, and that eight or 10 were on stagered shifts, so the fire department "was not too bad off." Fivteenor seven or eight men were readily available in the daytime.

Councillor Smith said it is not fair to expect the fire department to have to provide the men. He said it was Murray and Frankford councils' responsibility.

Reeve Rose replied that "we do it at their request. Over the years they have operated on their own."

Council members will discuss the matter with the fire department before advising Murray if Frankford is back on the job.

Council At-a-glance

FRANKFORD — This week council granted a cost of living bonus to all employees. Salaried personnel will receive a lump sum of $520, while casual hourly paid workers will receive a similar scaled-down boost.

Municipal employees are non-union in Frankford, and Reeve Rose explained that council felt obligated to give the employees something.

The increase will be broken down hourly and given weekly next year, in addition to this year's one shot payment.

FRANKFORD — A senior citizens project will eventually have a population of 200 to 400 people might be moved from a previously proposite site two and a half miles to the north of and behind the Frankford area owned by Bata Shoe Co., and situated in Sydney Township. Bata is giving the land to Ontario Trust Triangle Court Ltd. The only approval required now is from the ministry of the environment, which is responsible for sewage and water facilities.

Developer Gets OK For Housing Units

PICTON — Campbell Construction of Picton has obtained town council's approval for an application for additional building permits for the Argyle Cres. sub-division.

After reviewing a report from consultants Totten Sims, Hubicki Associates Ltd., council agreed progress of this development justifies additional permits.

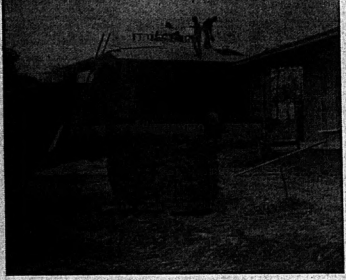
Four sites of the Talbot St. sub-division involving construction of 15 houses.

The consultants' report to council stated no asphalt paving has been done but this work will be completed in 1975 in conjunction with other work in phase two of the project.

It was noted no dust preventative has been applied as required in the sub - divider's agreement with the town.

Malcolm Campbell of Campbell - Construction Ltd. told council there have been several applications for caloium on Talbot St. but because of speeding it does not stay. He said road dust is not a problem as long as drivers observe the speed limit.

The Argyle Cres. sub-division is one of several new housing developments underway in Picton this fall. Others include new houses on Pitt St, and in the Spring St. area.



More to Come

Malcolm Campbell of Picton's Campbell Construction received town council approval Tuesday night to continue with Argyle Cres. residential development. While four homes have already been built on the street and 15 are included in the company's first phase predictions, no mention was made concerning how many building permits would be issued by the town to cover the remaining 11 homes in the plan.

A Rebirth ?

Point Anne as a recreation and conservation area. Camping facilities and trails, perhaps for scouts and guides. Space too for tennis, ball, and football. Room for horse riding.

It is just an idea of course, but one we believe has merit.

For right now Point Anne is almost a ghost community. Where the cement plant operated for more than half-a-century, and the company had recreation facilities of the kind mentioned, there is now the sound of the wrecker's hammer.

The village on the edge of the bay, on Belleville's outer fringes, is itself in limbo. Even the corner store is now gone.

As a recreation centre though the community might have a future that could benefit young and old.

Through the trees, off the road that once bore the commerce of the cement plant, and in a clearing, are the remains of the tennis courts and the ball park.

Today this one-time recreational area resembles something like a Roman ruin, an illusion heightened by trim concrete pillars at the entrance to a trail leading off to nowhere. And there are tracks of cars, in one place turning sharply into the bush, suggesting that this isolated near-wilderness is where some of the local boys get their kicks.

But it could be an area of more widespread and more positive public usage: for recreation, and as an exercise in environmental revitalization. It could be a place for people, without necessarily interfering with the comfort of the community's residents; it would benefit them too. To leave things as they are, on the other hand, is to envisage a lasting prospect of neglect and environmental deterioration.

Hockey Aftermath

It is one thing to have Team Canada come out of the series against Russia with only one victory. It is quite another to come home from overseas, and not for the first time, with complaints of "hooliganism" against some of the players. The word, implacable as it may seem, is one the Russians have borrowed from the Irish. If Canadians call it something else the ill effects on our national reputation are the same. Rough facility in ice is something our hockey teams and our national image, with which hockey is so much interwoven, can do without.

None Perfect

Of course if the Russians are upset by what they call hooliganism on the part of Team Canada they might, before casting the first stone, look at a mote or two in their own national eye.

Consider the tight rein exerted by Soviet officialdom: at best exasperating to western observers, at worst, heartless.

Toronto sports columnists Dick Beddoes told how a customs official at the airport in Moscow stood by unheeding when asked to call an ambulance for a Canadian who had suffered an epileptic seizure. An airport porter rushed around, stepping over the victim's legs.

An isolated incident perhaps, but typical enough of the long chronicle of frustration which inevitably besets the western traveller in the Soviet Union.

Which is worse — a few knocks in what after all is a tough, masculine encounter? Or the long drawn out discomfort faced by the average westerner behind the iron curtain?

Bright Memory

A lingering look at the now departed and magnificent troupe of dancers, Feux Follets. In a sense, it is better that such a company comes but rarely, the more to savor their vigor and their art. And twice in the space of about a decade, Belleville is fortunate indeed. Doubtless many of the earlier cast have moved on, but among the present company there are the same good looks, the same consummate skill in the myriad dance forms, and an element of physical skill and fitness that cuts out with the message of jolie de vivre, and Olympian good health. And this in a land that cries out in turn for a vigorous citizenry. The company has gone from our midst — but the memory lingers on.

Neutralism Thing of The Past

India Since Krishna Menon Era Projects Warlike Image

By JOHN D. HARRON
Foreign Affairs Analyst
Thomson News Service

The death of V. K. Krishna Menon, the once-fiery Indian exponent of neutralism for his country in world affairs, reminds us how far from the ideals India has moved since he blasted the United States in the United Nations as "neo-colonialist."

Twenty years ago few world leaders raised the hackles of the West as much as the controversial leader who rammed India's moralizing position down everyone's throat during the years of the cold war.

To Mr. Menon, a left wing Indian politician and intellectual who admired Lenin as much as his own party patron, the late premier Nehru, the Indian concept of non-alignment in the close to political purity in world affairs in the era of atomic weapons bolding of the U.S. and the U.S.S.R.

Looking back it is hard to visualize that India was once the major world exponent of neutralism as a national foreign policy goal.

Mr. Menon's critics never entirely agreed that he was as neutral as he claimed. They already visualized a time when the Soviet Union would take advantage of his political leanings to offer India weapons.

This finally began while he was Indian defence minister, and ended in the early delivery of Soviet submarines to the Indian navy.

What is tragic to view in the light of India's once strong neutralism is the present pro-Soviet pallist position (which was not shared by Indira Gandhi nor by Bahadhan Menon), has been this Asian country's delay from neutralism of the 1950s to warlike posturing in the 1970s.

Since the early 1960s, India has fought with the Chinese and Pakistanis, threatened to go to nuclear bombs and seized their former Indian colonies of Goa in 1961 to a show of force.

All the Goa seizure did was satisfy the leftists in India's Congress party that colonialism, even small, had to go. Today a Christian Portuguese-speaking minority in Goa is free with even larger Hindu ones around it.

Since Menon's time India has fought twice with China in border disputes, engaged in numerous full blown wars with Pakistan, one in 1965 where she came off badly and the second in 1971 which she won.

Current Indian efforts during 1974 have been to deceive Canada on the promised peaceful use of our nuclear reactor delivered to New Delhi in the halcyon days of non-alignment and to propose annexing a neighboring Himalayan kingdom of Sikkim through a bill passed in the Indian Parliament over the protests of the people of this tiny country with India.

Last summer at the annual commonwealth conference in Ottawa, Col., intellectual super-star Mortimer Adler, invited as a president of the Hudson Institute, India's "task" in New York state, offered several scenarios for the most warlike states in contemporary affairs.

He immediately dismissed the prospect of a U.S.S.R.-U.S. misclear war given the equal build-up in weapons on either side and the successful Miami-Brezhnev negotiations, at detente.

He then dismissed the possibility of a Sino-American conflict given the identity there and China's deep concern with domestic affairs.

By everyone's criteria, he listed India as the most warlike state in the world today (after the chronic Middle East) ers enemies of Israel and Czechoslovakia by citing the number of wars and determined efforts at aggression she has attempted by India since about 1962.

Among these he especially cited the cynical approach of India in unilaterally changing the rules on the peaceful use of Canadian nuclear expertise to explode a "nuclear device. Canada's objections were ignored.

International Energy Agency Will Counter Future Shortages of Oil

By VINCENT EGAN
Business and Consumer Affairs Analyst
Thomson News Service

The worldwide oil crisis of the past year is at last leading to a new and encouraging degree of international co-operation among major oil users.

Although both the short-term and long-term consequences of that crisis are frightening, the crisis will be better prepared to cope with future shortages than they were with last winter.

Canada is one of the 13 countries that have recently banded together to establish a new International Energy Agency. The others are the United States, Japan and all members of the European Common Market except France.

The role of the agency is to devise a joint strategy for dealing with the oil-production cartel. In more specific terms, it will be a means of sharing oil shortages equally among the agency's members.

That means that the oil-consuming countries will have a way of jointly countering future attempts by the Arab-dominated Organization of Petroleum Exporting Countries to cut off shipments to individual countries that the Arabs may deem to be too independently pro-West politically.

Last winter, OPEC placed embargoes on shipments of crude oil to the Netherlands and to the United States.

Under the draft agreement reached in Brussels a month ago, members of the international Energy Agency are to share equally in any future shortages. There is no knowledge pooling of petroleum.

It remains to be seen how effective the counterforce this will be against OPEC, which is probably the strongest cartel ever known in world trade.

Still sorely needed are other joint countermeasures by oil-consuming countries — ranging from the establishment of energy consumption (probably through wider rationing of petroleum products) to heavy tariffs on exports to OPEC countries.

It's strange how any suggestion that the West should use anything like OPEC's own techniques is widely denounced as "blackmailing," when in fact it is simply an indication of reasonable concern about the survival of peaceful world trade.

Obviously, the OPEC cartel is going to be in a very strong position to force up the price of crude oil to the limit of what the traffic will bear.

"Why didn't you go when you had the chance?"

But this is futile. Most children are too busy with their doings to take note of their internal capacities, or work out their potential. They're born to go to the gallon. And anyway, how can they know? The adult world in Ontario has arranged their facilities in a way that strongly discourages participation to accept that people have to have a toilet from time to time!

It is a long, long way from Archambault Park in Hull to Belleville and Brockville. Far from taking a kind of civic pride in public washroom facilities, the prevailing attitude appears to be one of denial in Ontario; a simple disbelief that even in the long-distance driver any hope of relief beyond the occasional patch of shrubbery.

The nearest public approach to a recognition that this inconvenient fact of life is the ubiquitous coffee shop or refreshment inast also offer the traveller washroom facilities. In the event, of course, that you may use a washroom if you have a snack. The charge is related to the other rule that says you can use it only if you have a meal. Package deals.

Whatever the law may say about the obligation of hotels and restaurants and service stations to provide washrooms, it evidently says very little about the standard to which they are to be kept. This will readily have been observed by anyone who has toured in Ontario this summer. With urgent need and revulsion in the balance, the traveller wages a lonely struggle in a turmoil of uncertainty. After all, he won the key (after having to ask for it) from an astonishing little room by choking down a coffee he didn't want and would have he did not really need.

The thick coating of grime on the cracked washbasin, the suspicious-looking, unhinged towel-rack, the dirty grated towel, used recently by an army of automobile mechanics, the spidery accumulation on the ceiling paint - should we try to talk, for the sake of decency, to the probably not. It could be just as bad as the one at hand.

This sort of thing must undermine every dollar in the provincial tourism budget as well as creating the feeling in some Ontarians, perhaps that there are some parts of the province in which they would rather not stand - or sit.

Speed, Water Levels, Forest Fires

By DON O'HEARN
Canada's Park Editor
Thomson News Service

TORONTO — About 20 years ago we had a select committee on highway safety.

This committee turned to be a "speed" committee.

It started out with the conclusion that high speeds were the major cause of highway accidents and its approach was tired on proving this thesis — which it did to its own satisfaction but not to that of more critical analysts.

And still there are a great many people who believe that speed is the big villain in highway safety.

Such people are given a bit of encouragement with the release of a study of vehicle speeds done by the ministry of communications.

This study found that there really wasn't enough material on which to form a good conclusion on the relevance of speed to highway safety.

But from what material it did have to study it formed the opinion that other factors, such as road conditions and traffic volumes probably played a bigger part.

The one constructive suggestion of the study group was that there should be a detailed further study of highway safety.

This study hasn't been ordered yet but if it is and it is any good, one speculation on what its main finding will be: longer sightlines.

Cycles of nature keep sticking their nose into public affairs and are responsible for a few and derided by the many.

The prime cycle has been the cycle of high waters in the Great Lakes.

History, and long history, has shown that these occur about every 30 years. But despite all the evidence there are still people who say this is so much baloney-dash.

Now we have another and very intriguing one.

This relates to forest fires.

The ministry of natural resources has reported that since 1923 the most serious fire seasons have hit every 12 years.

The ministry says that with one exception every 12 years damage from forest fires has exceeded a million acres.

What's more the same phenomenon apparently has occurred in Australia.

The explanation? There just isn't any. Sometimes the total number of fires has been less than other years but the total burn has topped the million acres.

Perhaps 12 really is an unlucky number.

Language Tuition: Citizens Paying For Wives of Bureaucrats Too?

By RICHARD JACKSON
from The Intelligencer's
Ottawa Bureau

OTTAWA — It still may be the official policy of the Conservatives to support the bilingual program instituted and strongly promoted by the Liberals.

But policy or not, it isn't preventing some Tories from questioning certain aspects of it they obviously regard with suspicion. One phase being examined is what has become known as "cocktail circuit bilingualism."

It involves the use of taxpayers' money to cover the cost of language lessons for people who are not in the public service.

These include the wives of senior public servants.

Veteran Nova Scotia Conservative MP Robert Coates already has on the Commons order paper a series of questions about them.

Who are they, he asks, demanding their names.

How are they selected, and why?

What is the justification for charging language training for "these private individuals" to the public purse?

"And what," asks Mr. Coates in his concluding question, "is the cost in each instance of providing the training to these persons?"

He may have to wait a long time for answers.

Tom Cossitt, former Liberal constituency president and now two-term Conservative MP for Leeds, asked similar questions late last winter, both verbally on the floor of the Commons and in writing on the Order Paper, and waited until the start of the summer recess of Parliament without receiving answers.

In his verbal question put to the Trudeau ministry in the House, Mr. Cossitt wanted the wives of two top public servants.

His question: "Why should the taxpayers pay for language lessons that will be of benefit to the Governor of the Bank of Canada who makes $75,000 a year, and the wife of the president of Central Mortgage and Housing Corporation, who has been publicly quoted saying she finds it hard to make ends meet along better in French at Ottawa cocktail parties?"

There was no answer then, and none later as his question remained on the order paper — all names and costs remained for months on end. Finally an extension was given — but not to the MPs — by Paul Tellier, president of the Public Service Commission of the bilingualism program.

"...The bilingual program is being operated," he explained, "and in the opinion of senior civil servant carrying heavy responsibilities, it has been found that French or English can be heavy indeed.

"...In such instances ...It was felt that the psychological support of the wife could be importantly helpful.

"...And where more so than in a social occasion?

At that time it was confirmed that 170 wives were receiving language training at the Public Service Commission's language school at a cost of $900 each for a total public treasury bill of $153,000.

Why then is Robert Coates still pursuing it?

Because, he says, "the questions never have been answered officially. And I've got nothing on the parliamentary record."

"All we have is the brief word of a public servant, or of No. 2 or No. 3 people. No accounting of costs. No official rationale."

What worries Mr. Coates is that the bilingualism aims of the government has to be interpreted to the approval of "cocktail circuit bilingualism."

This being so he is concerned that if $85,000 was being spent to bilingualize 170 wives last year, "how many are receiving language training at public expense and at what cost now?"

And why, he asks, "can't these high salaried top 2,000 senior public servants pay for their wives' French lessons?"

"Who are these people — let's have the names — and perhaps they won't be so keen to charge cocktail chit-chat to the taxpayers."

Washroom Facilities Under Fire

Loneliness

Editor
The Intelligencer:

A large Canadian Church group recently published a book in which loneliness was described as the greatest problem facing the elderly in Toronto.

It goes on to say that more attention must be paid to combatting the psychological need for sufferers. Radio stations are urged to list more activities and services available for people. The two year study called upon senior citizens to demand changes in the media.

On the surface these recommendations are good: the disturbing part of it is that the suggestions come from the Church. Is this the best the Church can offer?

The media is properly programmed may give some temporary relief and diversion but will not remedy the situation.

The feeling of people like has ceased to be worth living. Fear, hate, panic, because of loneliness and other's eventual suicide. No artificial or mechanical instrument goes deep enough.

The problem is a spiritual one — Until we are ready for a revolution against ourselves, against our own nature and will-to-power, the new life from above we will continue drifting in the wrong direction.

JOHN G. ERNST.

Harbor

Editor,
The Intelligencer:

It is about time that somebody gave an accredited account of events that took place at Victoria Harbour regarding the Victoria Harbour Improvement Committee.

Hard and voluntary work went in to the construction of that dock and facilities which are direly needed and wanted by visiting boaters.

I can assure the taxpaying public of this, for I met most of them in my job as dock attendant.

The people who are frequently complaining about the dock and I never saw them or heard them asking to be in a hand, have in my eyes no basis for complaint. Instead I would think they could be proud of the improvements and almost revive the clock of Victorian harbour of Belleville's steadily growing popularity.,

MEMO FROM HELEN GAGEN, CONSUMER ADVISOR

TRADITIONAL THANKSGIVING — WITHOUT EXTRAVAGANCE

Most of us will take a long look before buying extras when we shop for Thanksgiving weekend this year. But by choosing carefully, you can still afford to include the favorite foods that give meaning to the day.

You'll be glad that turkeys are at least as reasonable or lower this year as last — with utility grade particularly good value. Self-basting turkeys, and fresh hens are also available for those who prefer them. Remember that utility poultry is usually grade A, occasionally B, never below grade B. They're designated utility because of a skin tear, or perhaps a missing leg or wing. You can also choose from fresh pork legs (wonderful with a flavorful stuffing), hams in wide variety, and fresh Canadian lamb. There are even some good prices in prime beef steaks and roasts.

Of course, all kinds of traditional produce is available, from pumpkin and cranberries to squash and turnips. Whatever your menu, have a Happy Thanksgiving.

This Family's Traditional Thanksgiving Starts in the Kitchen

Thanksgiving togetherness means more than sitting down at the table together for the Brooks family. Sons Chris, Richard and Phil get busy in the kitchen, too.

Story And Photos By Isabel Huggan

Thanksgiving dinner at the Brooks' home on Wallaceburg Place is really a family affair.

Phil, age 11, Richard, age 13, and Chris, age 8, pitch in to help their parents, Art and Bev, prepare the festive meal.

Mr. Brooks is vice-principal of St. J. Clark Public School and Mrs. Brooks is vice-principal at Mother Teresa Separate Elementary School.

They agree that it hasn't been entirely their intense zeal that has interested the boys in the kitchen.

"It actually started as a result of cooking meals for their scout and cub badges," says Mrs. Brooks.

"They aren't in the kitchen every day, of course, but they do like to take part in making special meals."

"We all get a lot of satisfaction out of a dinner we've made together," Mr. Brooks says.

The recipes that the boys have mastered are not complex, and may be just the sort of thing to stimulate the youngsters in your family to lend a hand this weekend.

Besides the boys' recipes, Mrs. Brooks has suggested menus of their family favorites that make Thanksgiving dinner a real treat.

MENU

Ginger Pear Salad
Crusty Orange Relish
Potato Souffle
Green Beans Almondine
Roast Turkey with Bread Stuffing
Tossed Salad with Honey-French Dressing
Pumpkin Pie
Coffee Tea

Ginger Pear Salad
one cup ginger ale
one can pears with juice
one pkge. green jelly powder
1 tsp. finely grated fresh ginger

Pour ale into a bowl in which you are making the salad. Add jelly, and add one cup of juice from the can of pears. (If there's a shortage, add hot water.) Let the jelly partly set, then add the pear halves and pour the mixture into a ring mold. Refrigerate until set, then turn out on a salad plate.

Richard's Cranberry-Orange Relish
1 cup of water
1 cup of sugar
2 cups of whole cranberries (¼ pkg.)
1 fresh orange

Put 1 cup of water in top-of-stove saucepan. Add 1 cup of sugar. Stir to dissolve. Add 2 cups of whole cranberries. Boil the cranberries until they start to pop. Keep stirring so the cranberries won't stick to the bottom of the pan.

Turn the heat down and let the cranberries simmer while preparing the orange. Leave the peel on the orange and slice the orange thinly with a sharp knife. Throw away the two end pieces and chop the rest of the slices into small pieces. Add the orange pieces to the cranberries and stir until it all begins to thicken.

Remove from the stove and let cool for a while. Pour the relish into a serving dish. Makes enough to go with a large turkey.

Potato Souffle
two cups hot mashed potatoes two eggs, separated
one cup cream
1 tbsp. butter

Add butter to the mashed potatoes. Beat the egg yolks until light in color, and add them to the potatoes. Then pour in the milk and stir the potatoes until well blended. Beat the egg whites until stiff, and add them, lightly. Place the mixture in a greased dish, and set it in a pan containing hot water in a 375 degrees over for 30 to 35 minutes.

Green Beans Almondine
two pkgs. frozen beans, French style one 4 oz. pkg. sliced almonds
two tbsp. butter

Cook the beans as directed on the package, and drain. Add half the almond slivers and the butter, mixing well. Place in a serving dish, and place the remaining almonds on top.

Chris's Turkey Stuffing three-quarters to one loaf bread one large onion, finely chopped
one cup chopped celery stalks
1½ tsp. ground sage
1½ tsp. salt
¼ cup margarine, melted
one cup boiling water
one chicken bouillon cube

This recipe is adequate for 14 to 15 lb. turkey.

Cut the bread into cubes, and dry slightly in a warm oven. Mix all the dry ingredients together in a large pan. Add the bouillon cube to the boiling water, and when dissolved add to the bread mixture.

Stuff the turkey well but don't pack it in. Chris stuffs by hand (well-washed) and fills some stuffing into the pocket of skin between the drumstick and the breast. Then he ties the turkey legs into the flap of skin at the tail and ties the wings down.

Honey French Dressing
½ cup sugar
one tsp. dry mustard
one tsp. paprika
½ tsp. salt
1½ tsp. celer seed.
one tsp. onion juice
five tbsp. vinegar
one tbsp. lemon juice
one thin slice onion
one cup salad oil

Put Honey, vinegar, lemon juice and salad oil in a blender and blend for one minute. Add sugar, mustard, paprika salt and onion, and blend for two minutes. Just before turning off the blender, add the celery seed. This makes two cups of dressing, and can be stored for a long time if refrigerated.

Phil's Pumpkin Pie
one small can pumpkin filling
¾ tsp. nutmeg
¾ tsp. cinnamon
one nine-inch pie shell
Bake at 400 degrees for 15 minutes and 325 degree for 35 to 40 minutes.

Most Families Opt for Traditional Turkey

Despite the fact that turkeys cost more this year than ever, a random sample of Quinte area households indicates that the majority of the population will continue to enjoy the traditional bird on Thanksgiving.

A lot, by supermarket, however, have put their housewife to work in earnest.

Wilda Tracy, at Consumer, has organized a turkey club. Each member puts a monthly sum of 44 cents a pound for utility grade at one store and a maximum of 49 cents a pound at another for grade A large young toms.

This week last year, turkeys averaged 10 cents per pound less.

If, incidentally, you've been planning to substitute duck, chicken or ducks for the more traditional turkey, you'll save money.

A few stores in Belleville have geese and ducks available at prices from 89 cents to $1.39 per pound for duck and 79 to 89 cents per pound for geese.

A lot of people figure they save money for their families by dining out on Thanksgiving. That way they keep tradition without facing pounds of leftovers.

"We usually go out unless we're expecting guests," Grace Anderson says. "For our small family it makes sense."

Mary Stafford, who lives in the country, thinks her family may skip turkey this year.

"I don't imagine we'll be having turkey. We've got a freezer full of beef and pork we raised. I don't feel it makes sense to buy a turkey this year with all this other meat."

Eldon McGee on the other hand, will be giving her family turkey this year just as she has every year "for many years".

Thanksgiving is a special time to entertain relatives from far and near for the McGees and the same menu appears on the table annually.

The family expects the same dinner every year. If I make a change, somebody says "where's the.....", Mrs. McGee says.

Homemade rolls, several salads, turnips, squash, mashed potatoes and sage dressing along with "two kinds of cranberries, always" are served along with a special Thanksgiving pudding with burnt butter sauce contributed by an aunt.

"I'm afraid I'll always cook a turkey no matter what it costs. I can't give it up. It's once a year and we like it"

Tom Turkey: Cost Hasn't Made Him Obsolete

"I buy things when I see them for sale cheaply," she says. That's the only way to save money."

Alice Storms has done the same thing.

"I've got a turkey in the freezer. Otherwise I wouldn't be buying one. Of course, when you go to buy something else, it costs just as much... and there's a lot of eating on a turkey."

Women Students: Nobody Takes Them Seriously

VANCOUVER (CP) — A survey conducted on the campus of the University of British Columbia finds female students are treated with indifference, condescension and benign neglect.

The 56-page report released by the university's Women's Research Collective is based on interviews with a random selection of female students during the 1973-74 academic year.

Those interviewed said the process of channelling women into low-paying, low-status service work begins at birth and is reinforced at university level where they are "kept out of the high-status, high-paid fields and channelled into fields seen (by male professors and faculty members) as appropriate to them."

They come to that perception from the channelling process that wastes so much of their potential."

The report is full of examples from the attitude of classmates to the female students in a predominantly male environment, an interviewee said:

"At first they didn't know what I was doing. There's always some reluctance in a classroom situation to goalsmen, and lady, I had one instructor who put something on the board and he'd always address me and ask me if I understood. I ended up dropping the course."

Other female students criticized the attitude of professors who either viewed them as "dividends on a degree" or "just another pretty face" and discounted the idea that they were in class to achieve intellectual and academic goals.

Women are made to feel less competent than male students and consequently begin to think of themselves as being less adequate and capable than men, said the researchers.

Women are afraid to speak out in the classroom, said a female student.

"It took me until about the third year to realize that I had every right to go into my office hours, look him in the eye and say I don't like it."

Professors and classmates were faulted for being unable to see, define and relate to women as total participants in the educational experience. Interviewees said that where ambition and intellectual aggression are valued and encouraged in men, they are criticized in a woman. One student recalled:

"When I was doing my study I had to get permission from one psychology professor. He sat me in his classes. I had to sit there and explain to him what my project was about and his comments he voiced.

"His sat there, listening and frowning, and he leaned back in his chair and said, "You know, I find you a very ambitious woman, very ambitious, not the type of woman I am attracted to at all."

Many women students feel that two major areas need to be changed to optimize educational opportunities at the university level.

One basic change would be to hire more female staff as teachers and researchers on the university level. This would encourage other women to become involved in education.

But the first factor must be recognition on the part of professors and department heads that female students are discriminated against.

The researchers said discrimination against women is often the subject of feeble jokes.

"Two years ago, during a discussion on the question of the status of women at UBC, the male head of a department told his students: 'We don't discriminate against women— we don't have any women in our department to discriminate against.'"

Successful Living

Child Has 'Adult' Problem

By DORIS CLARK

Dear Doris: Our daughter Kathy, 17, has had a baby. The Doctor arranged for a boy friend and I to be married to sign paper at the child care agency, but I don't know whether she signed them or not, or whether she might get the baby back.

She says she hates every one. I don't see she had to like herself before she could really start liking anyone else.

We told her we will not look after her and the baby; she would live here but not with the baby. She needs further education but said she thinks "creeps" and don't like the teachers for one reason or another.

She drives most of the time as her boy friend's parents' home but comes home here often. I'm at work to get something to eat. I think Kathy needs to talk to some one else for a time.

Bewildered.

Dear Bewildered: I'm guessing you made a decision for her which she resents. Was she ever free to decide who (her or not she could keep that baby?

I strongly suspect she resents being treated like a child with an adult problem.

No one ever needed more counselling more — and that means you, too. Better get it before guilt feelings take too strong a hold on both of you.

Dear Doris: I am planning to become engaged in the fall to a boy boy friend and I am wondering about how we could manage, using just cost of living for engagement to marriage. I never did care for a lot of rings.

Do you just put it on a different finger?

Promised.

Dear Promised: If you are not a ring wearer, there is no law about it. Just announces the engagement. If pals ask where your ring is, say you decided not to have one or that your have chosen some other sign of betrothal (maybe a pretty pin? Or nothing at all.

A bride-to-be who has no engagement ring sometimes chooses a more elaborate wedding ring— perhaps a little wider, or set with jewels of her preference. Yet the old-fashioned plain gold band still is the most popular choice.

But do not put your wedding ring on any finger, ahead of the wedding.

(Try having your trouble into triumph by getting help from a trained social worker. Write to Doris in care of this newspaper.)

Dear Doris: I am what other people call a fairy. I hate this and try to be more masculine, but it doesn't do any good because they still call me fem, fairy or fag.

Would you have any suggestions about what I could do to become more of a man?

Fem.

Dear Fem: People have to be human beings first. All of us have both masculine and feminine characteristics.

You don't have to be thick-skinned, sit fast, tell dirty stories or succeed in business to be a success. Think of yourself as a person with human qualities of kindness and interest in the world around you, and learn to accept difference in personalities whether they show up in individuals dubbed male or female.

If you feel effeminate and it is bothering you, there are a few thing you can do. Try a physical culture program to improve your body's performance. If you are slight in stature or worry about the way you walk and talk, you could enrol in a Hatha-Yoga program at your local Y. Yoga is wonderful for giving you poise and relaxation; and more confidence in yourself.

If, indeed, you are homosexual, remember that Freud said while "Homosexuality is assuredly no advantage . . . it is nothing to be ashamed of, no vice, no degradation; it cannot be classified as an illness."

Ann Landers

Future Dismal For Fatty's Kids

Dear Ann Landers: My boy Jamie is 9 years old, 5'4" and weighs 240 pounds. Statistics show that in about 10 years he will have his first heart attack or stroke. Already he is unbearable at his present weight.

Last week he had two "unexplainable" cold sweats and last night he suffered his second "unexplainable" nosebleed in three weeks.

We have three children, the baby is less than a year old. The future looks dismal because I fear our youngest will be fatherless during their teen years, when their need for a dad is the greatest. I am not asking for any answers from Ann Landers. I've been reading your column long enough to know what you tell people who ask what to do about a husband who eats too much, drinks too much or is hooked on cigarets or dope. You tell them, "It's a do-it-yourself problem and the lady can make someone else do or stop doing anything."

I am asking you to please exhibit my photo and my overweight daddies out there. I will see themselves as their wives see them. Maybe then they will understand that we don't want to be fatgirls, we just hate to see them kill themselves.—We Really Love Them

Dear Lover: I can bear those sickening sweet cries all across the country. This column is going to be placed on more dinner plates and pillows and taped to more bathroom mirrors than any I've printed in a long, long time.

Dear Ann Landers: I come from a family of very superstitious people. Almost every hour of the day or night we hear some idiom like it has been handed by woodpeckers. Everybody is knocking on wood. How did this superstition get started.—Just Wondering

Dear Just: Knocking on wood goes back to the Druids of ancient England who believed the trees were inhabited by gods. When aiding a favor, the Druid priests would knock on the bark of a tree. If the "tree-god in residence" was in the mood to grant a favor he would knock back. Today it's still a common way of trying to make a dream come true.

Dear Ann Landers: I'm in my early 40s. After 21 years of marriage I find myself thrust upon the world in a society I don't even remember. I'm a single woman searching for a mate.

I've had two dates in the last several months and both of them wanted to check into a motel. I said "NO" and haven't heard from either one since.

I've been called "frigid," "old-fashioned," "fussy-up" and "no religion." I've been told I'm saving myself for nothing and that I'm "no fun" at all.

My children are grown and the thought of going through life without a husband is very depressing. I'm a person who is only whole when I'm half.

Am I being unrealistic, Ann? Satisfactorily, do I stand a chance of remarriage? I have a good figure and am fairly attractive. Can you give me a little hope? Any there any men in their 40s left who want a woman in her 40s? Or are they all chasing young girls, trying to recapture their own youth?—Lonesome

Dear Lo: Look for a man in his 50s or early 60s. Men in their 40s are looking for women in their 30s.

But don't give up—or in. Your high standards will protect you against getting mixed up with bums and sex maniacs. Those two offers was offered you a night in a motel on the first date were no bargains. Be glad you didn't waste your time on them.

A CARICATURE HISTORY OF CANADIAN POLITICS — J. W. Dafoe

Here is a selection for modern readers of the cartoons originally published in 1888. One hundred and thirty-four cartoons are reproduced, together with Bengough's original explanatory notes. The cartoons provide a vivid insight into the issues and personalities of Canadian public life in the mid-1880s, when the shape of Canada was being determined.

THE RETREAT FROM MOSCOW — R. F. Delderfield.

Mr. Delderfield's novels are well known and deservedly popular. Less well known are his three books on Napoleon. "The Retreat from Moscow" traces the wheel of Napoleon's Russian campaign from overconfident beginnings to disastrous end. The triumphant advance, almost unopposed, to the gates of Moscow, only to find that supply lines had been overreached and were cut upon them, and then the tragic and bitterly fought retreat. Beyond the heroic and melodramatic, the author brings out the undertones of self-destruction, fatal hardihood and courage.

LIVING WITH YOUR EYE OPERATION — Theodore Berland and Richard A. Perritt.

Although more than 100,000 eye operations are performed annually in the United States, many people face the prospect of eye surgery with dread. The authors of this book, one an internationally famous eye surgeon, have set out to allay some of the fear. After a description of how the normal eye functions, they outline various ways in which the eye can become damaged and describe five major types of operation: corneal transplants, removal of cataract, relief of pressure from glaucoma, restoration of detached retina, and excision of tumors. The balance of the book gives advice on what to expect before and after the operation and how to care for your eyes afterwards.

UFO'S FROM BEHIND THE IRON CURTAIN — Jan Robert and Julian Wevenbergh.

The authors have used historical sources, official and scientific records, and their own extensive files based on personal experiences sent in from observers, to present the first account of UFO evidence from behind the Iron Curtain published since the official clamp-down on information in 1968. Their conclusion is that reports of UFO sightings in the East parallel experiences in the West and that there is a mystery to be solved.

GRANDMOTHER'S SECRETS: HER GREEN GUIDE TO HEALTH FROM PLANTS — Jean Palaiseul.

Herbal remedies were largely empirical — no one understood how or why they worked — they had simply been handed down from generation to generation. But they have frequently been proven to be efficacious and Mr. Palaiseul has listed the vital properties of more than 150 of them. Not only does he describe the plants, tell where to find and how to use them, but gives interesting quotations from the ancient herbalists such as Pliny and Galen of Rome and John Parkinson who published a book on plants in 1640.

Kenya's School System Paralysed by Violence

NAIROBI (AP) — Kenya's school system has become victimized by violence that sometimes spills over into the streets.

Hooliganism and riots have virtually paralysed by classroom forced the closure of a number of secondary schools by education authorities in recent months. Strikes by students in support of demands ranging from better food to sanitary conditions have closed others.

Rebellion has also permeated the corridors of the country's highest institution of learning, Nairobi University, which was closed down in mid-August after its 1,200-strong student body refused to end a week-long boycott of lectures to back up demands for sweeping campus reforms. University authorities said it may not be reopened for a few months.

The pattern of student indiscipline has become familiar. Students boycott lessons, hold their tutors captive, destroy property and generally wreak havoc in a move to initiate corrective action.

School authorities retaliate by expelling students en masse and closing down the school, declaring that the militant students will be readmitted only if they come back with their parents, repent, pay for the damage and pledge in writing that they will be of good conduct henceforth.

Secondary students at one school in the Rusia District in western Kenya could not flush their toilets because of a serious leakage block; they wrecked the headmaster's residence and razed the laboratory, library, generator and offices were destroyed. Damage was estimated at $130,000.

At another school upcountry the students walked out on their black teachers saying they would only return if white graduate teachers were hired to teach them.

Nairobi consultant psychologist Dr. A. W. Rogan-Kamuge blocked "a serious deficiency in counselling their traditional authority and dubious of their right to exercise such authority in the face of youth dissension. Imitation of foreign behavior patterns in the wake of the mass media depicting youth rebellion in other parts of the world has been a major complementary reason to student unrest."

Modern education systems provide no recognized outlet for the latent aggression in every individual, he said. Such aggression is at its biological peak in secondary students.

A STATEMENT BY THE PRINCE EDWARD COUNTY BOARD OF EDUCATION CONCERNING PUBLIC USE OF SCHOOL ACCOMMODATION AND EQUIPMENT

At the recommendation of the Ministry of Education, the Prince Edward County Board of Education has agreed to charge fees for the use of school facilities, under Section 23 of "The School Administration Act". The Board intends to adopt a policy and by-law implementing the provisions of the Act, and has established a committee to study the matter. The Committee has met with representatives of various groups, and has two recommendations and one answer to report.

Use of school accommodation and equipment by the public normally results in additional costs to the Board, and it is felt that these additional expenses are related to three separate areas:—

1. COST OF ADDITIONAL CARETAKING DUTIES

Caretaking duties are required to open and close rooms at hours when they are not normally used, to turn on and off lights, heating and ventilating equipment, to clean up after each function, to set up and take down furniture, and to perform other duties. Caretaking hours are normally 8:30 a.m. to 4:30 p.m. Monday to Friday, and 8:00 a.m. to 12:00 noon on Saturdays and Sundays.

2. COST OF ADDITIONAL "WEAR AND TEAR" ON ACCOMMODATION

This additional "wear and tear" may not be related to hours of use, but rather to the number of persons using the facilities. For example, one concert may be a series of individual performances that result in a general disorder of the auditorium, whereas another concert may be a performance by a single group that leaves the auditorium in relatively good condition. Therefore, the Board proposes to charge a fee for each person attending a function, with a minimum charge for small groups.

3. COST OF ADDITIONAL "WEAR AND TEAR" ON EQUIPMENT

Equipment is normally subject to breakage or damage during periods of use. Certain equipment, such as pianos, is subject to deterioration from use by the public. Therefore the Board is considering a charge for the use of pianos, and will require that the user will be responsible for the cost of repairs to damaged equipment.

Faced with costs which are directly related to the use of facilities by the community, the Board feels that it is reasonable to charge for the use of facilities. The Board has also considered the question of local taxpayers as a group who have already paid for the facilities, and feels that the charges for use should not be so high as to discourage the use of facilities by the community.

In order to keep public use costs at a minimum, the Board proposes that a charge be made only for the use of facilities outside of a time and use period. This period would be from 8:30 a.m. to 4:30 p.m. Monday to Friday, and would not include any evening or part of an evening that is normally used for school purposes. Therefore, the Board proposes that no charge be made for the use of facilities by the Parent Teacher Councils of the schools.

Charging the additional costs directly to those using school facilities is more equitable and less complicated than charging all taxpayers of schools that have not been involved in the additional costs.

The Board is of the opinion that today, it is better to charge a small fee on a regular basis than to suddenly impose the problem and cost of collecting a large fee on a few occasions. The Board has considered the question of the cost of collecting small fees, and has decided that it is not practical to charge for activities connected with the normal operation of the school programs and to small groups of adults using the facilities.

Present Board policy calls for three separate charges (at applicable rates) for the use of school accommodation and equipment:

1. CARETAKING CHARGES

Three and a half (3½) hours may be booked by any individual or organization without charge. Caretaking charges will be applied to the first (1st) hour of use and to all additional hours. Caretaking charges for activities connected with the normal operation of the school programs and to small groups of adults using the facilities are waived.

2. EQUIPMENT

A fee per use of equipment and charges for the use of the piano will be established.

3. ACCOMMODATION CHARGE FOR "WEAR AND TEAR" AS FOLLOWS

Hydro Proud Of Leak

TORONTO (CP) — Ontario Hydro officials defended the Candu nuclear generating system Tuesday, following disclosures that radioactive heavy water had leaked from pressure tubes at its Pickering generating station.

At a news conference called after the leaks were first made public, officials said they are proud that the technology of the Candu system allowed efficient detection of the problem that was discovered Aug. 18.

Harold Smith, Hydro's chief engineer, said the leaks that began that day and continued for about six weeks presented no danger to anyone inside or outside the plant, located just east of Metropolitan Toronto.

Warren McConnell, director of thermal generation, said the incident is a "blessing in disguise" because "it demonstrates the maintainability of the Candu reactor system."

The heavy water, valued at $250 a pound and leaking at the rate of about 10 pounds an hour during the six weeks, remained sealed in a steel-and-concrete chamber and no one suffered from its radioactivity, he said.

The heavy water is used as a coolant in the Candu system.

The leaks developed as Hydro personnel attempted to start up the third of four nuclear units after the unit had been turned off in July for normal annual maintenance.

As pressure was applied to tubes filled with a uranium alloy, the lining cracked and radioactive heavy water began leaking, McConnell said.

Mr. Smith said the cracks were caused by an error in installation that resulted in the stretching of the zirconium lining as the tubes were pressed from within to establish first contact with a supporting ring on the exterior.

After the crack was discovered in one tube, all 380 tubes of the reactor had to be checked and, within two weeks, technicians found two others that also had to be replaced, he said.

"Problems of this nature are not uncommon in the operation and maintenance of any generation station," fossil-fuel or nuclear," Mr. Smith said.

Ontario Hydro does not consider the leaks to be a major problem, he said.

Mr. Smith confirmed Hydro has lost $4 million in revenue during the months that the reactor has been out of production.

MacBeth Skeptical Workers Exploited

TORONTO (CP) — Ontario Labor Minister John MacBeth was skeptical Tuesday of charges made by the Ontario Federation of Labor (OFL) that farm workers are being exploited in the province.

Commenting on an OFL report calling for legislative changes to alleviate the farm-labor situation, the minister said he would need more proof of the charges before being convinced that minimum-standards legislation and other labor laws should be extended.

The report said changes are necessary to eliminate such abuses as low pay, long hours, unsanitary living conditions, child labor and unsafe working conditions for migrant farm workers.

Touching on several points of the report, Mr. MacBeth said he could see nothing wrong, for example, with children of migrant workers picking vegetables or fruit.

"Young people have been doing farm work for years," he said. "It's a healthy occupation. It would be another point if they were exploited."

Noting that the report also suggested that farm workers should have the right to organize, Mr. MacBeth said he did not favor legislative changes "just because someone says there are abuses."

"To save one bad situation you would be putting hundreds of farmers through the hoop."

However, Mr. MacBeth said most of the questions raised by the OFL come under the jurisdiction of Agriculture Minister William Stewart who was out of town Tuesday.

OFL President David Archer, commenting on the group's concern with organizing farm workers, told a news conference that a traditional bargaining structure for them is probably inappropriate because the industry is seasonal in Ontario.

But he said the interests of the farmers might be protected by OFL or consumer-group representatives on local agricultural manpower boards established this year by the federal ministry of manpower and immigration.

Some Nostalgia

STOCKTON, Calif. (AP) — A bill of nostalgia dating back to the 1930s grants patrons stopping into Stockton's new mid-city post office. It is a partition looking windows and letter drops which was salvaged from most of the questions raised by a recently closed post office.

Civil Service Freezing

TORONTO (CP) — The Ontario government and the association of its civil servants indicated Tuesday they are prepared to make concessions in how they want the Crown Employees Collective Bargaining Act amended.

But at the same time, the government disclosed that it has implemented a plan to freeze the civil service at its present civil service size.

Eric Winkler, chairman of the cabinet's management board, said the government is planning to make amendments to the act and they probably will be announced soon.

He also said the government's intention is to keep the strength of the civil service at between 61,000 and 64,000, although details of the new policy are confidential.

The act, which sets down negotiation procedures between the government and the civil service, has been under review by the cabinet since the Civil Service Association of Ontario (CSAO) committed a change in its composition this year.

Rent Tied to Index

TORONTO (CP) — A spokesman for the Canadian Union of Public Employees (CUPE) said Tuesday that a Toronto man's lease tying rent to increases in the cost of living might set a "dangerous precedent."

Russel Doyle, president of Local 43, CUPE, says the clause in the lease of Gordon Maisley, 47, is unfair.

His rent for a one-bedroom apartment in central Toronto is $150 a month and the lease allows only a subtle. There is nothing in the least about a decline in the cost of living.

Questions and Answers On Highway Travel

Ontario Motor League
Eastern Ontario Club

QUESTION: Some years ago your column described the best places to visit when viewing in one fall colors. Unfortunately in moving house we lost the article and would like to make the trip again, could you please help us?

ANSWER: The most significant fall coloring is in the North Bay area where about 10 per cent of the leaves have turned and 5 per cent past finishery and French River. Foliage change in the Bruce Peninsula, Kawartha Lakes region, and Parry Sound is well underway with 5 per cent coloration. In the southeastern portion of Ontario there has been significant and rapid change only near Marmora and Hawkesbury. Maple trees are especially impressive near Arden and Haliburton. There are frequent blazes of color in Lake Superior Provincial Park. Coloration is isolated or has not begun in other areas of the provinces.

VERMONT — In the State as a whole, the peak of fall foliage color is usually the first two weeks of October. However, peak coloration in the mountains and northern portions of the state usually occurs in late September, while good color is maintained in the southern and lower elevation areas until October 12th. Of special beauty are the deep red sugar maple trees and the warm and gold hues of wild form. Many communities have special detailed maps of backroad routes for fall foliage viewing which may be obtained from local Chambers of Commerce.

For up-to-date Vermont foliage reports contact: (1) Vermont Welcome Centre, Interstate 91, P.O.B. 905, Brattleboro, Vt. 05301. (2) New England Vacation Centre, Rockefeller Centre, New York, NY. 10020. (3) Vermont Information Centre, Laurentian Hotel, Montreal, Quebec.

WISCONSIN — In the north, there has been about a 5 per cent change of color, primarily maple trees.

Based on past seasons, the following list is a general guide of when the best fall foliage color usually occurs in the United States.

CONNECTICUT First two weeks of October.

KENTUCKY Throughout October.

MAINE Early October.

MASSACHUSETTS First week of October; in the western areas and second week of October in the eastern portions.

MICHIGAN Late September. In the Upper Peninsula and mid-October in the western and southern areas.

NEW HAMPSHIRE Late September in the north, and mid-October in the Southern areas, though color may peak 4 days to a week later.

NEW YORK First two weeks of October though coloration occurs in the Adirondacks in September.

OHIO First two weeks of October.

PENNSYLVANIA In the Poconos, foliage peaks at the end of September and in western Pennsylvania during the first two weeks of October.

RHODE ISLAND Mid-October.

TENNESSEE Last two weeks of October.

VIRGINIA Peaks in the third week of October and lasts until the first week in November.

WEST VIRGINIA Throughout October.

Prehistoric Man's Weapons Found at B.C. Hydro Sites

VANCOUVER (CP) — The remains of weapons used by prehistoric man about 10,000 years ago have been discovered in a part of British Columbia's Peace River country that may be flooded by B.C. Hydro power projects.

"It was a most exciting find," said Knut Fladmark, archeology professor at Simon Fraser University.

Dr. Fladmark said he knew Hydro may not be too thrilled with the news, as its discoveries became the most recent further long and detailed archeological studies of areas where power projects are being considered.

The professor led a university team of 10 members through the Peace River country for about 10 weeks this summer, financed by the $30,000 grant from Hydro.

The team had two separate assignments. The first was to study the area that will be covered by a reservoir when Hydro's Site One project, 14 miles downstream from the W. A. C. Bennett Dam on the Peace River is completed. Preliminary work on this development has already started.

The other was to study the Peace Pass, which would be affected by Hydro's Site E and C projects. Both projects include dams and reservoirs and are under study by Hydro.

Site E is on the Peace, one mile upstream from the Alberta border, and Site C is 42 miles upstream from Site E.

In the Site One area Dr. Fladmark and his team found little of archeological interest. "It is historically recorded that Indians went through there but they were very nomadic and didn't leave anything behind them," said the professor.

In Sites E and C however, the team found more than 200 sites showing evidence of human activity.

The time spent covered by the things we found was about 10,000 years because they included natives' canoes and clovis points."

The artifacts known as clovis points are projectile points—were the prehistoric find that most excited Mr. Fladmark.

The points, which resemble arrowheads, were attached to the end of dart-like spears. They were used long before the bow and arrow and could bring down enormous animals such as mastodons, mammoths and bison.

The professor said discovery of projectile points is further evidence of the existence of an ice-free corridor along the eastern flanks of the Rockies down which early man migrated from Alaska and the Yukon to the central parts of the continent.

Dr. Sites is a great archeological argument about this corridor—its extent and when it was open," he said.

Mr. Fladmark said the significance of his team's findings this summer is so great that he will recommend to Hydro that further research work be done in the area.

"Even if dams are proposed and accepted for Sites E and C it would probably be five to 10 years before there are any changes in the land there. So hopefully that would give us enough time to find out what is there before the land goes under water."

In addition to his Peace historic discoveries, Prof. Fladmark and his team spent some time searching for the site of the first fur trading post on the B.C. mainland. The Northwest Co. post, called Old Rocky Mountain House, was occupied from 1798 to 1823.

Prof. Fladmark said he hopes that with further study of pertinent documents during the winter the site may be cleared then.

The team did discover a find of the month of the Beaten River that was occupied from 1806 to 1810. Prof. Fladmark said he had no time to do any digging at the site but noted that it had been completely undisturbed since the early 19th century.

"It's amazing to think that the people who lived there were worried about Napoleon's exploits in Europe."

Lumber Town of Twenties Little More Than Memory

LOST CHANNEL, Ont. (CP) — Lost Channel isn't much more than a memory.

During its boom in the 1920s, more than 1,000 people lived in this logging community about 25 miles north of Parry Sound with its 12-bed hospital, hotel, lumber mill, community hall and even a private railway.

Today it consists of ruins of buildings nestled in the dense bush and a few legends.

John Tolonen, operator of a nearby fishing camp, has talked to people who lived in Lost Channel during its heyday and even has an old photograph of the lumber mill.

It shows the mill with its three towering smokestacks belting from the sprawling mass of the mill building perched on the tip of a rocky channel, a widening in the Pickerel River 13 miles east of Highway 69.

The most-recruited cement foundation walls are the only sign of the once-profitable operation.

The mill was built in 1914 and a community carved out of the woods to house the lumbermen. Four bunkhouses and 35 houses were built.

The two-storey hospital had a resident doctor and the schoolhouse boasted 60 pupils. The company general store, now a crumbling shell, handled the residents' outside needs.

Lost Channel got its name when a log drive down the Pickerel River to Georgian Bay went astray, the logs ending up in a deep river pocket with no way to get them out. It became known as Channel of the Lost Drive, or Lost Channel.

Jarvis Parker of Orillia said the mill was owned by an American company, Schrodt Lumber Co. Ltd., and managed by his father James Lapgate of Parry Sound.

Mr. Parker said the mill had a capacity of 75,000 board feet a day and operated six days a week.

The gravel road from High way 69 to Lost Channel covers what used to be a private railway on which two trains a day travelled to the mill and hauled out the lumber.

Mr. Tolonen has a picture of a steam-driven train with the name Jay Valley Railways on its side that operated until the mill closed in 1936.

When it closed, the company sold 40,000,000 feet of stockpiled lumber including first-grade hardwood slatting, 12 to 20 cords a cord, for hogging fuel.

Mr. Tolonen's remains of the belongings left behind by former residents because of sourness and curious fishermen.

Rusted plates, rotted wagons, a ruined sewing machine and shovels are strewn about in some of the buildings and surrounding bush.

Mr. Tolonen has found scraps of paper, some dating back to the early 1900s, including a foreman's pay slip.

Although brittle and weathered, the pay slip shows the foreman was paid $14 a week in 1922.

Details of life in the community during its boom are scarce since most of the lumbermen and their families are dead or have moved away.

The Parry Sound district municipal office has no record of the community's actual size because it was designated as an unorganized township and no records were kept.

The lumber companies in the area ceased to exist many years ago.

But area residents and cottagers have come up with their own rough history, based largely on rumors about the Lost Channel.

One rumor is that the hospital served as a tuberculosis clinic and an undiscovered graveyard near the community contains corpses of patients.

The provincial ministry of natural resources may soon rip down the remains of the village to build a boat-launching facility.

And construction crews are widening the old logging road to the area from Highway 522 at Port Loring to the east to link it with Highway 69.

Mr. Tolonen said that project should take about two years to complete.

The better road should attract more tourists and cottagers to the area, he added.

Lost Channel may not be quite as lost after that.

Congressmen Revive Plan To Siphon Lake Michigan

WASHINGTON (CP) — Democrats, some on members of the House of Representatives from both Republican and Democratic parties revived a decades-old scheme that has been consistently opposed by Ottawa and endorsed by the U.S. Supreme Court.

The legislation proposed Tuesday — which is given little chance of passing Congress in this 1974 session — would appropriate $274 million to divert Lake Michigan water through Chicagoland canals and far-reaching sewage treatment facilities and far-reaching sewage treatment facilities and far-reaching sewage treatment facilities

Townships Request Modifications in Rural Land Use Study

By COLIN BRUCE
Staff Reporter

The Quinte Planning Board will be asked next month by the planning director for a firm commitment concerning the controversial rural land policy statement that seeks to freeze rural land for agricultural use only.

Ron Keeney, director, addressed a meeting of the planning board staff and the township planning boards of Sidney and Thurlow municipalities. Both municipalities questioned whether it is fair to limit what a farmer does with his property.

The board, at its last meeting, recommended the policy study be taken back to the council so that the townships could provide some input into the statement.

Last week, the townships returned with written comments which more or less coincided with the original statement but the board "forgot to" go to a conclusion to the staff for study implementation in the official plan, said Bert Keeney, planning director.

Not coming to a conclusion was an "oversight," when a "knock down, drag out discussion did not result," he said.

The policy statement stipulates "marginal agricultural lands should be used where beneficial for open space, conservation, forestry and recreation that the rural character is preserved."

Also the townships' first recommendation expanded the list of marginal land uses to include residential, commercial, institutional and industrial land uses."

The second recommendation states a farmer be allowed to convey a parcel of land for the creation of a residence for permanent farm staff and that the farmer be allowed to convey a further parcel of land for his retirement home.

"Actually, they (township councils) are saying the same thing as we are ... though from a slightly different angle," said Mr. Keeney.

"I don't think they are saying anything significantly different ... but to develop the best farm land last," the planning director said.

They want a little more detail from the board on which land is marginal and which is prime and that this information be spelled out in the official plan, said Mr. Keeney.

At the last planning board meeting the staff wanted some discussion whether or not to use the study material in the conceptual plan for the area, said Mr. Keeney.

This is the decision the staff will ask for in November.

As for the conceptual plan, the document that will form the guideline for area development, Mr. Keeney said it is coming along well and will be completed fairly soon.

Loyalist Walkout Fizzles, Teachers Return to Class

By LENNY WILLIAMSON
Staff Reporter

Loyalist College was the only community college in eastern Ontario whose teachers were out on the job Tuesday in protest of a breakdown in contract talks.

They returned to work at 1 p.m., after a few teachers picketed the college entrances from 7:30 to 9:30 a.m. and moved on to a meeting of the Quinte Branch of the Civil Service Association of Ontario at Holloway Street United Church.

President of the local branch of the union, Paul Wall, was informed about 9 p.m. Monday that the dispute between the provinces community college teachers and the government has gone to arbitration. The deadline is 17-month negotiations was the reason for the work stoppage. He contended that the last hour of the notification gave him no time to cancel plans for picketers and for the study session, originally called for all day Tuesday. He said arrangements had been made to call off the work stoppage if 12 hours notice was given of resumption of bargaining.

Loyalist president Herbert Young said Loyalist was the only college in eastern Ontario where CSAO executive "apparently had an opportunity to call their study session", but, "for reasons not known to me", chose not to do so.

Mr. Young noted: "It was suggested by dean of faculty Paul King to Mr. Wall Monday evening that the radio could be used as a means of informing the faculty that the study session had been called off."

Union executives in Cornwall, Brockville, Kingston, Peterborough, Owen Sound and Orillia used local radio announcement to call off their study sessions.

The Loyalist study session was attended by 110 teachers, with only a few non-union members of the faculty remaining at work at the college. They voted unanimously to return to work at 1 p.m. Tuesday.

Mr. Wall said today that college administrators will accept an official statement on attendance Tuesday from the union executive and teachers will not be asked to sign individual statements regarding their whereabouts. It is not yet known whether or not the teachers will be docked for all or part of their salary for the work stoppage Tuesday.

Car Lands In River

James Quinn 24, of 19 Gordon St., Belleville, escaped with cuts and bruises Tuesday after the car he was driving went out of control on Camilla Rd., struck a guardrail and landed upside down in the Moira River.

The accident occurred around 4.30 p.m. Police Chief Douglas Crosbie said the vehicle was northbound on Camilla Rd. near the Devil's Elbow north of Bridge St.

He said the vehicle, in which Mr. Quinn was alone struck a guardrail, travelled a distance along the shoulder and then landed in the Moira River, on its roof.

Mr. Quinn was taken to Belleville General Hospital with cuts and bruises and later released.

Damage to the car was estimated by police at $3,000.

Teachers Meet

Loyalist teachers held their study session Tuesday morning in Holloway Street United Church, but cut it short to return to classes at 1 p.m. Outlining the reasons for the walkout to protest the deadlock in salary negotiations, now resumed, is union steward Rick Williams, Bob Brand from the Canadian Labor Congress and Paul Wall, president of the Quinte Branch of the Civil Service Association of Ontario.

Preparations Underway For December Vote

The December 2 election is still almost two months away but already the office of city clerk Earl Dafoe is gearing for the day when up to 24,000 or more voters will go to the polls to elect the People who will head up the municipality for the next two years.

To be elected in Belleville are a mayor, six aldermen, six member each for the public and separate school boards and two public utilities members.

To date, however, there has been little indication of just who will run for what positions. Most incumbents so far have been generally mum about their intentions.

"This year there are 24,814 names on the voters' list which, Mr. Dafoe says, is about the same number as in the 1973 election. The voters' lists will be posted Oct. 21 behind the scenes there will also be a period for revision when additions or changes may be made. The period for revision runs until Nov. 1.

This year there will be only one advance poll at city hall on Nov. 26 for the convenience of voters who will be out of the city on election day.

Before election day each household in the city will receive a card from city hall listing the address of the polling place where householders are to vote.

There will be 70 different polling places in the city on election day with many of these being double or triple polls for a total of 81 polling booths.

Official Urges More Fire Inspections

PICTON — Picton deputy-reeve Larry Richardson said this week that he is annoyed by the town fire department's apparent reluctance to make more fire inspections.

His remarks at a meeting here Monday night were in support by the fire and emergency committee in which fire chief Leonard Tripp noted the inspections would be conducted but the budget allocation is the first move.

"I can't recall anywhere where council agreed the public should make the first move," said the deputy-reeve.

He commented there have been several fires in Picton recently and suggested inspections might have prevented them.

"It is our duty as a council and a fire department to do something" emphasized deputy-reeve Richardson.

Reeve Ross Cronkwright, chairman of the fire committee, noted council has run an advertisement concerning fire safety inspections but received only six requests. He said inspections without request could be made unless there is good reason to suspect hazardous conditions.

Deputy-reeve Richardson replied he is skeptical about the use of such ads and does not respond to this type of campaign.

"The whole principal of safety in industry is to work at it all the time. You can't sit back," he asserted.

He suggested regular inspections should be conducted and said some owners probably would not refuse to admit firemen for inspections without notice.

"I'm not suggesting we think down here," added the deputy-reeve, who described the inspections as a safety service.

OPP Warn Residents Of Phoney Canvass

PICTON — The Picton detachment of the Ontario Provincial Police today issued a warning to Prince Edward County residents regarding an illegitimate telephone canvass for the Canadian National Institute for the Blind.

Community services officer Donald Watt said a legitimate, door-to-door canvass now in progress in the county for the CNIB carries transplant eye cards.

Residents directed by Prince Edward Collegiate Institute teacher Larry Hodgkinson are collecting the money and carry proper identification and receipt forms. It is soliciting is done by telephone.

Constable Watt says persons receiving telephone solicitations for the CNIB should contact them "Strictly Illegitimate."

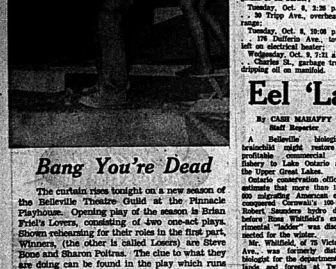
Bang You're Dead

The curtain rises tonight on a new season of the Belleville Theatre Guild at the Pinnacle Playhouse. Opening play of the season is Brian Friel's Lovers, consisting of two one-act plays. Shown rehearsing for their roles in the first part, Winners, (the other is called Losers) are Steve Stone and Sharon Poltras. The clue to what they are doing can be found in the play which runs until Saturday and again next week, Oct. 15-19.



Eel 'Ladder' Might Restore Profitable Fishing

By CARL MAHAFFY
Staff Reporter

A Belleville biologist's brainchild might restore a profitable commercial eel fishery to Lake Ontario and the Upper Great Lakes.

Ontario conservation officers estimate that more than 750,000 migrating American eels conquered Cornwall's 100-ft. Robert Saunders hydro dam before Ross Whitfield's experimental "ladder" was discovered for the winter.

Mr. Whitfield, of 75 Victoria Ave., was formerly district biologist for the department of lands and forests at Trenton and now is working out of the ministry of natural resources's Kemptville.

His eel ladder is 200 feet long, a series of simple wood-en troughs that cross the face of the dam 75 times on a 13-degree rise. Believed to be the only one of its kind in North America, it is the highest in the world. With the ladder, established in the Indian of the eels take care of the trail. Until it was built, the migrating eels were prevented from getting into the tributaries of the great lakes by the dams in the canals.

Freshwater eels spawn in the central Atlantic's Sargasso Sea, a huge floating mass of seaweed. From the time as young eels, or elvers, swim thousands of miles to freshwater rivers or streams. Their parents die after mating in the Atlantic. The young eels remain in fresh water, living in bottom mud or under stones for many years until the mature eels drive them to sea to mate and die.

The eels, given the opportunity, will travel as far inland as they can go. If the ladder works as well as its first year indicates, a profitable eel fishery is a distinct possibility, according to authorities.

While eel is not a popular North American food, there is a substantial overseas market. In 1973, the total Canadian eel catch was about 2.5 million pounds, with a value of more than $500,000. Britain, Sweden, Denmark, Norway, France, Belgium-Luxembourg, Switzerland, Netherlands, West Germany, Italy and Switzerland all import eels, either live or frozen. The market is there if the eels are available.

Ross Whitfield's ladder has attracted the attention of several American, Canadian and Ontario fisheries biologists, as well as one of Canada's largest eel exporters to Europe.

Stirling Officials Reject Bid for New Mandate

STIRLING — Three members of municipal council have announced their intention not to seek re-election at the end of their terms this December.

Reeve Edward Kloepmaker and councillors Maurice Cowell and Fred Randall have all said that they can not devote enough time to do the job the way they feel it should be done.

Mr. Cowell runs a butcher shop and grocery store and the two councillors are in the construction business.

Deputy-reeve Bob Fallis, a businessman, said he will seek top spot on council. Councillor Wayne Martin, with the department of agriculture said he will also run again.

Council was elected in 1970 and an 1973-73. Reeve Bob Anderson councillors — Joe Vlachar, Maurice Faulkner, Wayne Martin and Ed Kloepmaker took office by acclamation.

In the spring of 1973 reeve Anderson resigned. Ed Kloepmaker assumed the post. Former councillor Maurice Montgomery was appointed to fill the resulting vacant seat. In the summer of 1973 councillor Vlachar resigned and former councillor Randall was brought back into public life.

Later, councillor Montgomery once again withdrew from council. Bob Fallis ele-vated to reeve by acclamation in early 1974 and was drafted as deputy-reeve.

Youth Charged Following Crash

BRIGHTON — Provincial police here have charged Kevin Tremayne-Pengelly, 18 of 17 Young St., Brighton, with criminal negligence causing death following a two-car, head-on collision on highway 2 that killed two youths last night.

Dead are Gary Steven Scribver, 18, of 20 King St. Trenton, and Walter Meyer, 16, of 130 Ontario St., Brighton. Both were occupants of the Scribver vehicle.

Brighton OPP said the Tremayne-Pengelly vehicle was westbound on highway 2 near Smithfield when it pulled out to pass a car driven by Ronald Richard Haley, 30, of RR 2, Brighton, and the Tremayne-Pengelly vehicle was in collision with

Big Bats Said It

Bucs Didn't Need 5 Dodger "Gifts"

LOS ANGELES (AP) — A combination of Pirate hits and Dodger errors Tuesday kept Pittsburgh alive in its National League baseball playoff series with Los Angeles.

WILLIE STARGELL

Willie Stargell hit a three-run homer and Richie Hebner a two-run homer for the Pirates and the Dodgers made five errors as Pittsburgh beat Los Angeles 7-4.

Los Angeles won the first two games of the best-of-five championship series at Pittsburgh. The two left Los Angeles tied for the best-of-five championship series. Fourth and fifth games are today and Thursday at Los Angeles.

Stargell recalled another year when the Pirates had an uphill climb to victory.

"In 1971 in Baltimore, we were supposed to be finished," he said.

"The newspapers were calling it the St. Valentine's Day Massacre," the Pirates slugger said of the World Series in which Pittsburgh lost the first two games, then beat Baltimore in all in seven games.

"But in that team is the five-year history of divisional playoffs that has put the Pirates in their own three in a row to qualify for the World Series.

"It's a situation where we have to win," Stargell said. "But if we don't, we have nothing to be ashamed of. We've had total dedication."

The Dodgers became the first club to commit five errors in a playoff game. The last Cubs game before a record home crowd of 32,953.

"That could have been the worst we looked all season," said Dodger manager Walt Alston. "I doubt seven becomes contagious, but it they do I hope the pirates catch it."

Don Sutton, who won Saturday's playoff opener 3-0, was tagged in pitch today against the first-game loser, Jerry Reuss.

In the first post-season start of his career, who the fourth game of the 1971 World Series against Baltimore.

The Pirates broke out of a batting slump with 19 hits, including a double and two home runs, after getting a total of only 10 singles in the first two games.

RICHIE HEBNER

Players treated the loss casually after they hurried to clean up and exchanged details before flying home today. The 15-hour charter flight was expected to leave at noon Pragoe time, arriving in Toronto about 4 p.m. EDT.

Coach Billy Harris said he was not disappointed with Tuesday's loss "because both teams played good hockey."

At a news conference, he gave the Czechs full value for the win.

He said he had coached Swedish against Czechoslovakia six times during his stint as Swedish national coach and "I have always found it harder to beat the Czechs than to beat the Russians."

The game appeared to mean little to the Canadians, still weary mentally after battling their eight-game series to the Soviet Union.

The Czechs, raised second in Europe behind the Soviet Union, got goals from Jiri Bubla and Ivan Hlinka within the first 10 minutes. Julius Haas scored early in the third.

Bobby Hull got credit for Canada's only goal, late in the second period, although it appeared Vaclav Nedomansky knocked the puck into the net after unsuccessful Czech goalie Jiri Crha deflected Hull's hard shot.

Crha replaced starter Jiri Holecek in the first period after the veteran international star was sicked as he stopped a shot by Hull. Holecek needed several stitches.

Canada's goaltenders were Don McLeod, who gave up two goals in his 25-on-late stint and Gilles Gratton, who was beaten by Haas.

Harris agreed the goalies had no chance on the shots that beat them. Bubla and Haas scored from passes directly in front of the net, while Hlinka drilled a low screened shot past McLeod.

Referee Rudolf Hak issued only four minor penalties to each team.

The crowd of about 14,000 gave Gordie Howe the loudest applause during the pre-game ceremonies but booed the Canadian coach several during the game for rough play.

At the end of the game centre ice was littered in the penalty box with a needless assortment of debris, but otherwise both clubs played cleanly.

The exhibition game was the first for Canadians in Europe. They whipped Finland 8-4 and edged Sweden 6-4.

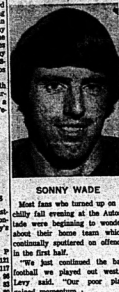
Eskimos Forced to Settle for Tie

Wade's Late Heroics Rescue Als

MONTREAL (CP) — For a while Tuesday night it appeared Montreal Alouettes would be down to their third straight Canadian Football League setback.

But coach Marv Levy decided to make a quarterbacking change, sending in veteran Sonny Wade to replace Jimmy Jones. Wade responded to the call by firing touchdown passes to Peter Dalla Riva and Johnny Rodgers to give Montreal a 26-20 tie with Edmonton Eskimos before 17,505 fans.

Don Sweet converted both touchdowns, a second-quarter score by Ian Mofford and a third-quarter TD by Steve Fergusson.



SONNY WADE

Most fans who turned up on a chilly fall evening at the Autodrome were beginning to wonder about their home team which continually sputtered on offence in the first half.

"We just continued the ball football we played out west," Levy said. "Our poor play gained momentum.

"In the first half when they were leading 11-0, I was thinking of putting Sonny in. Then Jimmy engineered a touchdown drive to make it 11-7.

"When they ran back a kickoff back 36 yards to set up their second touchdown and we're down 18-7.

"We were then planning to put Jimmy in for one series of plays to start the second half and he got a touchdown on that. We couldn't take him out after that."

Levy also said he planned to insert Wade into the game with six minutes left but an interference penalty on a punt gave Edmonton possession of the ball and the Alouettes didn't regain possession until there was less than three minutes to go.

Wade came in and moved Montreal from its own 35 to the Edmonton 16 where he completed a TD pass to Peter Dalla Riva.

An onside kick by Sweet gave the Als another chance.

It appeared Don Warrington of the Eskimos had successfully fielded it. But he could not hang on to it and Rudy Florio recovered the ball to give Montreal possession on the Edmonton 47. Passes to Rodgers and Peter Dalla brought the ball to the 21-yard line and then Wade and Larry Smith combined on a fullback option play on the right sideline that took them to the six.

Then on the next play, he completed a six-yard toss to Rodgers and Sweet's fourth convert of the evening tied the score with 22 seconds left.

The Alouettes will meet Toronto here Sunday and Wade made the first time in league play this year.

The win left Montreal in first place in the Eastern Football Conference with 15 points, three ahead of Ottawa, Rough Riders and Hamilton Tiger-Cats. Edmonton is second in the West, one point behind first-place British Columbia Lions.

Calvin Harrell scored both Edmonton touchdowns with Dave Cutler adding two converts, a pair of singles and four field goals.

Levy also said he planned to insert Wade into the game with six minutes left but an interference penalty on a punt gave Edmonton possession of the ball and the Alouettes didn't regain possession until there was less than three minutes to go.

Wade came in and moved Montreal from its own 35 to the Edmonton 16 where he completed a TD pass to Peter Dalla Riva.

An onside kick by Sweet gave the Als another chance.

It appeared Don Warrington of the Eskimos had successfully fielded it. But he could not hang on to it and Rudy Florio recovered the ball to give Montreal possession on the Edmonton 47. Passes to Rodgers and Peter Dalla brought the ball to the 21-yard line and then Wade and Larry Smith combined on a

Blue and Bando Get the Job Done

BALTIMORE (AP) — Oakland A's seem to have discovered a way to win without fighting, much, among themselves.

The A's moved to within a game of winning their third straight American League pennant when they shaded Baltimore Orioles 1-0 Tuesday and they haven't had a fight or a set squabble since early in the season.

Sal Bando's fourth-inning home run was enough to give Vida Blue, who pitched a two-hitter, the victory.

The A's second consecutive shutout, extending Baltimore's scoreless string to 23 innings, gave Oakland a 2-1 lead in the best-of-five championship series between the division leaders.

Jim (Catfish) Hunter, a 25-

game winner who lost the series opener, tried to make it personal seven-game streak against the Orioles, will try to wrap up the series for the A's in the fourth game.

Mike Cuellar, a 23-game winner who beat Hunter in the first game, will start for Baltimore. If he can shake off arm stiffness which bothered him Tuesday, Rose Grimsley, an 18-game winner, will standby.

The Orioles rallied from a similar deficit last year before dropping the decisive fifth game. Oakland then went on to win its second straight seven-game World Series.

"Vida threw the best game of his career," said Bando, who homered on a 3-2 fast ball from John Palmer in the fourth inning. "Tonight is not the pressure of a playoff game."

The homer was the second in two games for Bando, who didn't hit any of his 32 regular season homers off Baltimore pitching.

Palmer got some consolation from the homer.

"At least it was better than Reggie (Jackson) hitting it," he said. "We'll still get there. Reggie would still be circling third base."

No One Seems to Mind 3-1 Loss to Czechs

PRAGUE (CP) — Team Canada '74 lost 3-1 to Czechoslovakia in national team Tuesday in the final game of its European tour.

The newspapers were calling it the St. Valentine's Day Massacre," the Pirates slugger said of the World Series in which Pittsburgh lost the first two games, then beat Baltimore in all in seven games.

"But in that team is the five-year history of divisional playoffs that has put the Pirates in their own three in a row to qualify for the World Series.

"It's a situation where we have to win," Stargell said.

St. Catharines' other scorers were Kevin Kennery, Dave Salvian, Bill Hamilton and Greg Craig.

Bruce Boudreau, John Szarka and Lynn Arnason replied for Toronto, which outshot the Hawks 34-30.

Terry Holbrook and Ron Buchanan scored goals late in the third period Tuesday night to break a 4-4 tie and give Cleveland Crusaders a 6-4 win over Toronto Toros in a World Hockey Association exhibition game.

Jim Shaw took over for starting Toronto goalie Les Binkley, who was suffering from the flu, at the start of the third period and gave up the decisive goals.

In Tuesday's only other WHA game, Minnesota Fighting Saints whipped Houston Aeros 5-4.

Centennial and Moira Trade Football Wins

Moira Secondary School and Centennial Secondary traded wins in Bay of Quinte high school football action, Tuesday.

In the junior game, played at Centennial the Chargers blanked the visiting Trojans 14-0.

At Moira, however, the senior Chargers did not fare as well. They were trounced by the Trojans 49-6.

Doug Irvine, coach of the junior Chargers, credited a strong defence with the victory and complimented Greg Tobin and Doug Fraser for leading his squad's defensive effort.

John Royer counted both Centennial markers and was the top ball carrier of the afternoon. One of his runs went for 95 yards.

Rick North was the big difference in the senior contest. He scored four Trojan touchdowns and played a strong defensive game as well.

The contest was not as great a walk-away as it appeared to be. Through the first half the score was very close.

North put the Trojans on the scoreboard first and a two point conversion gave them an 8-0 lead.

Rob Scully, of Centennial, collected the Chargers only touchdown of the game. Bruce Keller counted a two point conversion and the teams were even.

Rodger Sprague put the Trojans out in front late in the second quarter following a Centennial fumble. He scored on a third and nine situation to make it 15-8 Moira at the end of the half.

The Trojans went for 34 unanswered points in the second half. North had three more TD's and Sprague had two to round out the score at 49-6

Spartacus Protest Upheld

The Bay of Quinte Soccer Association's Cup Finals have become an all Trenton show.

Spartacus and Whitley Insurance will look up in finals for the Trenton Challenge Cup and the Belleville Charity Cup.

At a Tuesday night meeting, BOSA executive members upheld a Spartacus protest lodged following the team's 7-3 loss to Belleville Golden Mile Olympics in the Challenge Cup semi-final.

Spartacus claimed the Golden Mile team had gone against association rules by using players who had played more than three games with Belleville Olympics of the Premier Soccer League.

Executive members Peter Cronin, president, Brian Pollard, vice-president, and Dudley Hillier, secretary, ruled in favor of Spartacus, said ar official of the association this morning.

The Trenton team was awarded a berth in the final. Golden Mile is out.

Golden death playoffs for the Cup will be held at Centennial Park in Trenton, October 12 and 26.

This Sunday, Spartacus and Whitley's meet in the Challenge Cup final and the teams face each other again on the 20th with the Charity Cup on the line. Kickoff for both games has been set for 3 p.m.

Flyers, Hawks, Habs, Bruins, Rangers Pick of the Crop

The CANADIAN PRESS

Last spring, when his talent laden Boston Bruins were preparing to take Lord Stanley's coveted Cup and capture they were motherfully put down by the National Hockey League final. Top Goaltender Gerry Cheevers said:

"I wish you guys (writers) would stop calling the Philadelphia Flyers an expansion team. They're as solid a hockey team as you'll find anywhere."

The Flyers then commenced to beat the Bruins, becoming the first post-1967 team to capture the Stanley Cup and, in the process, did it with class and finesse.

Contrary to earlier opinion, the Flyers didn't start with Bobby Clarke and end with goaltender Bernie Parent. In between, coach Fred Shero assembled dedicated troops who believed they were world beaters.

They didn't simply back-alley tactics as Phil Esposito, Bobby Orr and company there threw the wrecking-crew approach and the window against the heavily favored Bruins, came in backs and simply had the Broad Street Bullies skate circles around their opponents.

The Flyers topped the NHL's West Division last year, and there's no reason to believe it will be any different in the realigned two-conference, four-division setup that has them in the Patrick Division with Atlanta Flames and the New York Islanders-Rangers and Islanders.

The Rangers showed in last year's semi-final test to Philadelphia they were to be reckoned with next year. Emile Francis has finally given up on some of the older legs, the New Yorkers could find the means to go all the way.

Chicago Black Hawks, knocked from their roost atop the NHL's West Division a year ago by Philadelphia after a slow start, should have no worries in the five team Smythe Division which, along with the Patrick Division, make up the Clarence Campbell Conference.

It would be a monotonous joke if St. Louis Blues, Minnesota North Stars, Vancouver Canucks or Kansas City Scouts—the latter new to the NHL this year—were within 18 points of the Black Hawks when the final tally is realized after 78 games next April.

Over in the Prince of Wales Conference, Montreal Canadiens and Boston Bruins are highly regarded to capture the Norris and Adams divisions respectively.

The Canadiens will have Ken Dryden back in the nets after a year's sabatical to obtain his law degree, and if the former goalie saved wisest is any time where near his pre-retirement form it will be a question of how many points will separate them from the rest of the field.

Goldy—Los Angeles Kings, Pittsburgh Penguins, Detroit Red Wings and the other new league team, Washington Capitals.

Atlanta has Tom Lysiak and the goaltending tandem of Dan Bouchard and Phil Myre, the latter position giving them the edge over the Islanders for the final playoff berth.

DEREK SANDERSON
New Ranger

Coach Al Arbour's coach was noticeable on the Islander decisions last year—they lowered their goals-against mark by 100 from the previous season, but aside from defender Denis Potvin, the outstanding rookie award winner, and potential back Billy Harris, the New Yorkers have little reason to expect miracles.

Chicago lost fewer games than anybody in the NHL last year (17) and unless can't be any worse for them. They are aside from defender in front of goalie Tony Esposito with Bill White, Phil Russell, Keith Magnuson, Doug Jarrett and Dick Redmond.

A healthy Cesare Maniago in goal is all Minnesota coach Jack Gordon can hope for with a team bereft of six regulars from last year that he dealt away or slew.

The one major breakthrough the Kansas made during the off-season was to get a semblance of stability in the front office.

Under Phil Maloney, named coach and general manager last February, Vancouver showed some life. Most of the same faces will be returning, but with the prospect of playing in the NHL's weakest division, Canucks fans may finally have themselves a playoff contender.

St. Louis is going with a youth movement which means the Plager boys, Barclay and Bob, may be on their way out. The defence has been relieved nated with the acquisition of Larry Sacharuk from the Rangers and Richard Wilson from Montreal.

Goldie's Kansas City could go through the year, but don't expect miracles with the rag-tags the Scouts and Washington picked up in the expansion draft.

With Dryden back, the Canadiens should have no worries despite the loss of veteran winger Frank Mahovlich to the World Hockey Association. They're solid now at almost any position and there's ample backup material in case.

Bobby Pulford has Los Angeles players thinking positive and with a solid nucleus in Jean-ceneau Terry Harper, goalie Rogatien Vachon and forwards Butch Goring, Juha Widing and Bob Nevin, the addition of defensive candidates Nell Komadoski and tough Dave Hutchinson can be appreciated.

Boston, meanwhile, has a new coach in Don Cherry. If he's able to work closely with Espo-sito and Orr and handle the promising talent that's available, the Bruins could be around for another finals.

Cuddolin couldn't be so he's gone—to Kansas City where there are no prima donnas to clash with his own thinking about the way things should be run.

Toronto Maple Leafs or Buffalo Sabres could provide the last pressure, and California's Golden Seals, with the worst record in the NHL last year, will be around at the end of the year—maybe.

Here's how things will line up

Aside from Clarke and Parent, the Flyers really don't have that much on paper. The team bearded, Bob Dawes, (the Hammer) Schultz, Don Saleski, Andre (Moose) Lapointe, have only fringe performers at best before Shero exploited their hidden talents.

Francis knows he must produce this year. He's been a bridesmaid for too long and the Rangers are getting tired of waiting for next year to come.

Gone are oldsters Vic Hadfield and Jim Neilson, both across in the Adams Division, with the right mental attitude, will be a big asset.

The Penguins finished strongly for new coach Marc Bolland last year and the addition of Hadfield and Jack Egers, the latter from Kansas City, should give Pittsburgh added scoring punch.

Alex Delvecchio's problems in Detroit are serious with a lot-than-adequate blueline corps that should do little to integrate itself to the coach of Dryden's fame.

The Red Wings re-acquired aging Gary Bergman to bolster the defence, but he'll be the best of a bad crop leaving the Wings out of the playoffs again despite the added scoring from Denny Grant, Dan Maloney, Mickey Redmond and Marcel Dionne in particular.

When the season ends in Washington only rookie defenceman Greg Joly will be a recognized feature as the Capitals vie for NHL futility with Kansas City and California.

Boston, with Esposito and Orr operating 100 per cent, has the makings of a dynasty. They're solid on defence in front of goalie Gilles Gilbert with the combination of size material up front topped by the NHL's most productive Bos-Esposito, Ken Hodge and Wayne Cashman.

The Leafs lost experience when Paul Henderson and Mike Pelyk bolted to the WHA and Darcy Rota demanded to be traded, but their outstanding rookies of a year ago—Sweden Borje Salming and Ingo Hammarstrom, along with Ian Turnbull, Lanny McDonald and Bob Neely—should take up the slack.

Alberta Takes Steps To Rule Out Violence

CALGARY (CP) — The Alberta Amateur Hockey Association (AAHA), in an attempt to crack down on fighting in minor hockey, has adopted a rule change that will automatically expel a player from a game for a fighting major.

The resolution was adopted at a board of directors meeting last weekend but announced Tuesday.

A note attached to the announcement of the rule change adds that "where one player is obviously the attacker and the other player is the defender, the referee may in his discretion penalize only the aggressor."

A progress statement from the AAHA said the league has become increasingly concerned about the incident of fighting in hockey and proposes to implement the legislation on a one-year trial basis for the 1974-75 season.

The AAHA also passed a resolution that a player receiving a second high-sticking penalty during a game shall also be assessed an automatic game misconduct."

The rule changes apply to hockey in all levels of competition played within the jurisdiction of the AAHA.
